Giant Black Opal Of The World Has Been Found In United States

FLAWLESS GEM, VALUED AT $250,000 AND WEIGHING NEARLY 17 OUNCES, NOW IN INTERIOR DEPARTMENT AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—America wins the palm for the largest uncut gem ever discovered. A giant black opal, flawless, devoid of any dimming matrix, and weighing, according to the balances in the office of the assayer of the Treasury Department, 16.8 Troy ounces, with a tiny fraction to spare, has been exhibited to a select few in the office of Secretary of the Interior Lane.

In color the new gem is a commingled glow of translucent greens and blues, very deep in tint, and is shot with flames of red. Roughly estimated the mass of the stone is 21 cubic inches. Its weight in carats is 2,372.339; in grains, 8,136. No determination has yet been reached as to its intrinsic value.

The nearest approach to America's record-breaking opal is the famous Wardsmo opal discovered in Northern Hungary in 1770. That gem, not flawless as is the American "champ" is approximately two-thirds the size of the American find. The Viennese opal weighs 10.93 Troy ounces, or 1,638,927 carats, which translated into grains is 5,947,012. The mass of the Viennese stone, is, roughly, 13 cubic inches.

The shape and apparent size of the American stone is like a quarter of a brick. Its length is 3 15-16 inches, its width 3 1-8 inches and its thickness varies from three inches to one-half inch.

The new stone is at present held by its possessors to be worth $200,000; at least that is what they have hoped it might bring in the gem market. It was discovered more than two years ago, but the discovery was not announced for the reason that in the emergency of war it was felt that the time was inopportune for formally introducing the production of such a stupendous luxury to the gem buyers and gem wearers of the world.

Bodies May Never Be Recovered

No Doubt Now But That Steamer Waffo Foundered With Two Belleville People on Board.

It was reported early Monday morning, that the body of one of the victims of the wreck of the steamer Waffo had been picked up off Oswego but no official report was received.

A despatch from Oswego says: More wreckage from the steamer Waffo floated up the lake shore, including timbers and three mattresses. It is now generally believed that the boat went down only a short distance in the lake.

Some of the mariners cling to the explosion theory, from the way the wreckage has been washed ashore, and from the fact that her small boats have not been found. Several broken dyers floated ashore, and an axe, still fastened to a piece of wood, where it hung, was also salvaged. Several cars and a rudder of one of the life boats have been found on the shore. Three were two lifeboats on the steamer, and what has become of them is a mystery. Several more life preservers have been found. Fred Roberts found her steering wheel and about 100 feet of cable. Most of the wreckage was found between Burt's Point and Beach Oswego.

From the fact that nothing had been seen of the small boats it is thought probable that they went down with the ship, the crew probably not having time or the opportunity to cut them away.

Capt. Clemns, of the Coast Guard Station, has been patrolling the beach looking for bodies, but he expresses the belief that they will go into Mexico Bay and there will be buried in the sand, probably never to be recovered.

Railwaymen Hold 5-Day Convention

Advised to Discontinuance the One Big Union Movement.

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—Two hundred delegates of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad Employees, representing divisions from Halifax to Vancouver, opened a five-day convention yesterday morning.

President A. B. Mosher in his opening address advised the brotherhood to discontinuance the One Big Union movement and urged the appointment of legislative committees to watch Federal and Provincial legislation affecting the interests of the railroad men.

Another recommendation made by the grand president is that the color line in the organization be abolished, admitting to membership on the same basis both white and colored railroad employees. Delegates of the Order of Sleeping Car Porters, now a subsidiary organization, were seated as fraternal delegates.

BRUTAL SKIPPER SENTENCED

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Convicted of cruelty toward members of the crew of the American barkentine Puako, that Captain Adolph C. Pedersoh and his two sons, Leonard Roy and Adolph Eric, made on the same vessel, were sentenced by Federal Judge Jack. Pederson to 18 months in Atlanta Penitentiary and his sons to six months each in a local prison. They were released on bail pending appeal.

THREE MEN ARE MISSING IN WOODS

Woodsmen May Have Died of Starvation and Exposure

SUDBURY, Sept. 30.—Trappers from the north report what appears to have been a gruesome tragedy, involving perhaps three deaths by starvation and exposure. A week ago Monday Fred Archambault, a woods foreman, and Charles and Gloria Marcel, left Mile 71, which is seven miles beyond Westree on the Canadian National Railway, for a pulp camp twelve miles inland, where the two last named hoped to secure work. Archambault, who came from near Sudbury, was an experienced woodsman, and there were no fears of their reaching their destination. They went by canoe for a short distance at the start, and then leaving the canoe went to the woods. Since then no trace whatever has been found of them. Searching parties have been out for days traversing the tangled forest and muskegs in the hope of rescue, but so far without result. Parties are now out from Biscotasing, on the C. P. R., and from Gogama, on the C. N. R. It is thought that the eight days that might have been taken ill, and others, not knowing the trails, were helpless to go on or seek help. It is stated that the men had not a gun with them, nor even taking a lunch, as they expected to reach their destination in a few hours. The two Martel brothers came from Hanmer, a short distance north of Sudbury. The weather has been wet and cold, and the suffering of the men under these conditions must have been horrible.

Bolshevik Defeated By Finns Whole Divisions Surrounded

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 1.—The breaking of Bolshevik lines at Bulata, by troops of the Finnish general, Balakovitch, is reported by the Novo Rossiya, says a despatch from Helsingfors received here. Whole divisions are said to have surrendered.

A PLATFORM OF PROGRESS

The policies upon which Sir William Hearst will ask the people of Ontario to pass judgment are set out under the following headings:

(1) The greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every shape and form;
(2) The faithful enforcement of the people's verdict on the liquor question;
(3) Vigorous support of Hydro-Electric development and cheap light and power for our farmers;
(4) Conversion of certain railway lines into Hydro-Electric lines;
(5) Good roads reaching every part of Ontario;
(6) A pension fund for mothers;
(7) Direct representation of Labor in the Cabinet;
(8) Establishment of a minimum wage;
(9) Unification of the labor laws of Canada on a just and equitable basis;
(10) Such further labor legislation within Provincial jurisdiction as ma yarise out of the findings of the National Industrial Conference and the International Labor Conference;
(11) Housing accommodation for industrial workers.
(12) Special consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation;
(13) A new era for education, providing technical and agricultural instruction throughout the province;
(14) Improvement of transportation facilities in Northern Ontario;
(15) Conservation of our timber resources and encouragement to mining;
(16) Measures to reduce the high cost of living;
(17) Protection of the public health, generous assistance to hospitals and charities, and special care of mental defectives.

Labour Wants Parliament Called

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Wm. C. Adamson, Labor leader in the Lloyd George ministry, and leader of the Opposition there, has telegraphed to Prime Minister Lloyd George, asking that Parliament be summoned immediately. Repeated suggestions have been made that Parliament be summoned to advise the Government regarding the present railway strike, but the Prime Minister has up to the present refrained from calling the members together.

Peace Ratification Is Delayed

Railway Man On Board Of Commerce

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—Labor will be represented on the Dominion Board of Commerce. Official announcement was made that Mr. James Murdoch of Toronto was today appointed a member of the board to take the place temporarily filled by Mr. F. A. Acland, Deputy Minister of Labor. The official announcement says in part;

"Mr. Murdoch has for many years been an outstanding figure in Canadian labor circles. He took a prominent part in establishing the Canadian Railway Adjustment Board in 1918, which did much to ensure and maintain harmonious co-operation as between railway companies and their employees. For a year past he has strongly held the view that the cost of living should be controlled, and, if possible, reduced, and that increasing wages only would never solve our labor problems.

"For the past fourteen years Mr. Murdoch has been an officer of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and during most of that time the Chief Canadian Executive. He is a resident of Toronto. Two of his sons were in the war and both are still under medical care as a result of service. A fearless champion and lesser in demanding a full measure of justice for working men, he has with equal determination insisted on labor recognizing its responsibilities and obligations undertaken. Mr. Murdoch will enter upon his new duties in a few days."

Hawaiian Volcano In Violent Eruption

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

HONOLULU, Oct. 1.—The volcano Mauna Loa, which broke into eruption Saturday, subsided and broke out fresh Monday night, is sending a stream of lava thirty miles long and from a furlong to a mile wide into the sea. Some valuable property has been destroyed.

Fair Weather At Cincinnati

Conditions Favorable for First Game in World's Baseball Series.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—Fair weather prevailed this morning and gave promise that the first world series game between the Chicago White sox and the Cincinnati Reds would be played at Redland field this afternoon. The forecast is for sometime yet but local weather forecaster said there is not thing in world rain, at least, to amount to interfere with the game.

Probable line up for today's game is Chicago—J. C. Collins, right field Weaver, third base; Eddie Collins second base; Jackson, left; Felsch centre; Gandil, first; Risberg, short stop; Schalk, Cicotte, pitcher.

White sox enter contest as slight favorites six to five and seven to five being offered on Cincinnati. The champions, both here has been little betting. Both managers express confidence in result of series. Moran banking on his pitchers. No team ever went into a world's championship, he says with a stronger team of pitchers Gleason admitted the White sox are going to stand a great test and the Red Reds had proved themselves a great team but his pitchers still had undiscriminated and that his team fa shows unconquerable nerve in all tight pinches.

REDLAND FIELD Cincinnati, Oct. 1.—With the sun shining brightly and with every indication pointing to a continuance of fair weather nothing stood in the way of the playing of the initial game of the world baseball series between Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox for the premier honors of baseball and a goodly amount of coin of the realm. Two hours before the time for the game to start the pavilion and bleachers of the park were filling up rapidly while only a scattering of spectators were in the grand stand and boxes. An official announcement was made shortly after noon of the assignment of Umpire Rigler, who will officiate at home plate, Evans first base; Quigley at second; and Nallin at third base. Tomorrow umpires will rotate, Evans off visiting behind the home plate.

Racing Enquiry Opens In Toronto

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—Canadian hunting horses of thorough-bred type are known all over the world for their stamina, courage and endurance and the test of racing is the only one by which a thorough-bred horse can accurately be judged, declared Major General Lessard, formerly of the Royal Canadian Dragoons before Dr. J. G. Hetherford, sitting as commissioner, who opened the racing enquiry here this morning following those recently held at Montreal and Ottawa. Officials of the various local racing and hunt clubs were present together with other prominent people interested in thoroughbred horses including Sir John Hendrie, Lieut.-Governor.

LIBERALS PROMISED, CONSERVATIVES FULFILLED.

The Toronto Globe accuses Sir William Hearst of building his election platform from Liberal planks. Inasmuch as the Liberal policy of promises has been elastic enough to embrace every possible measure of possible legislation it would not be possible for Sir William Hearst to present a program of proposed legislation without including sections upon which some Liberal did not at one time or another try to mark with a branding iron for political purposes. The record of the Conservative party in Ontario from the days of Sir James Whitney down to the present has been a record of performance and of promises more than fulfilled. The Liberal policy of promises fooled some of the people some of the time, but it couldn't fool all of the people all of the time.

Labor Will Support Hearst Govt. Platform Pleases

STATED AT OTTAWA THAT LEADERS OF ORGANIZED LABOR ARE SATISFIED WITH HEARST PLATFORM AND WILL SUPPORT HEARST CANDIDATES — LABOR CANDIDATES WILL NOT BE ENCOURAGED.

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—Withdrawal of Labor's candidates in Ontario where Hearst candidates have a chance of election, and the fact support by Labor of those who follow Hearst is the sensation caused into the political arena last night. This comes as a direct result of the Labor Congress in Hamilton last week when the platform of Sir William Hearst was the topic of several meetings of Ontario Labor delegates. While only some the delegates are here from Hamilton as yet and no official announcement on this momentous decision can be secured, it was stated on the very best of authority that the Ontario Labor leaders had decided:

"That the government of Sir William Hearst had placed before the electors a platform containing a measure of fair treatment for the workers that was all that could be desired by Labor itself, an dthat, in view of this out-and-out stand for the people no Labor forces would work against the Hearst government candidates in any constituency.

"That wherever a straight Hearst candidate pledged himself honestly to support the people by carrying out the platform of Sir William Hearst, Labor will endorse the Hearst candidate, by abstaining and in the records, but by its work.

AN INDEPENDENT.

That something of this kind has been in the wind for several days was quite well known in various circles in Ottawa, but the absence of the big Labor men at the congress made it impossible to have the rumor properly certified. The withdrawal of the Labor candidate in East and West Ottawa makes those ridings difficult fo rthe opposition. The present members of the Legislative Assembly in the former riding, Mr. Hammett P. Hill, selected at the official convention as the Unionist Party candidate, has already pledged whole-hearted support to the Labor platform. In East Ottawa, Controller Nap Champagne is going to run as an independent Conservative. He does not want the Unionist Association endorsement, desiring to be a free agent in the House. But it is believed that if he will pledge himself absolutely to the Hearst program and accept the endorsement of his party organization, he will get the endorsement Hearst Labor. This startling change in the aspect of the political situation, coming as it does just three weeks from the time of the elections has left the parties in the various constituencies rather breathless.

Labor has been preparing for some time to make its force felt at the polls and it is pretty well assured that this is the first gun in the biggest labor campaign that has been evolved since the finish of the unlamented death of the misguided One Big Union.

British Transport Federation Discuss Sympathy Strike

DELEGATES OF TRANSPORT FEDERATION, REPRESENTING 325,000 WORKERS, MEET TO DECIDE WHETHER SYMPATHY STRIKE WILL BE DECLARED TO HELP STRIKING RAILROAD MEN.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Whether delegates of the Transport Federation were assembling today to decide whether the 325,000 workers they represented should go out in sympathy with the striking railroad men of Great Britain the Government's official's report on the situation, issued at noon, showed continued improvement in actua conditions.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Lloyd George today signified his willingness to meet delegates from the transport workers, whose representatives were in session during the early afternoon to decide whether a strike of their 325,000 members should be called to support railway men's nation wide strike. At the conclusion of the first session of the transport federation meeting which adjourned shortly before two o'clock until five p.m., it was announced by Robt. Williams, general secretary of the transport workers' organization, that the delegates had unanimously reaffirmed that the strike was purely a trades union affair regarding wages and conditions of work. It has been asserted by the British press that the railway strike had political motives behind it and Premier Lloyn George in a statement on Saturday last declared the railway men were being used by extremists for sinister purposes. It was arranged that eleven delegates from the transport conference would meet the Premier at three o'clock.

With the labor delegation visited the Premier it met also George N. Barnes, minister without portfolio, Sir David Sharkleton, permanent secretary of labor ministry, and Robert Stevenson Horne, minister of labor. The conference was not attended by representatives of the railroad men as the workers who participated were acting as intermediaries in an effort to bridge the gulf between the railway strikers and the government.

English railway service is improving and more trains are being run. Fed minor cases of lawlessness have been reported. The government is overwhelmed with offers of volunteers

OBLIGING HIM.

"Drive like the dickens!" shouted Smith, springing into a taxi. With a lurch the car darted forward and away they went like lightning through the gathering fog.

Clang! They upset a milk cart. People shouted and waved and held up their hands as the taxi dashed up one street and down another, taking corners on two wheels and threatening every lamp with destruction.

At last after half an hour's furious racing they slowed up in a narrow thoroughfare and Smith poked his head out of the window. "Are we nearly there?" he asked, breathlessly.

The chauffeur turned in his seat and shouted: "Where did you want to go, sir?"

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

At the Liberal-Conservative room, over Adams' Store, Front street, a meeting of all the city ward committees in the interest of Mr. W. H. Ireland will be held.

Ireland will be held to-morrow evening.

Polling Booths Increase

Returning officer Wade, for South Brant, announced that the number of polling booths in Brantford for the approaching election would be more than doubled. Instead of the usual 21 sub-divisions there will be 76 all told, and the voters will have to vote by streets. The increase in polling booths is necessary in order to avoid undue congestion at the polls.

Clergyman May Run

The Liberal-Conservatives of South Wellington and supporters of the Hearst Administration, will meet tomorrow afternoon to select a candidate. A rousing meeting is expected with Hon. Mr. McCarry as the principal speaker. The two names most prominently heard of in connection with the nomination are Rev. C. W. Bachand, a returned chaplain and former rector of St. James' Church and Ald. T. J. Hannigan.

Howard Ferguson Opposed

G. Albert Payne a former Conservative, and now reeve of the village of Cardinal, was unanimously chosen by the United Farmers of Grenville county to contest that riding in their interests at the coming election. This candidate is an ex-vice-president of the Dundas County Conservative Association and was an undertaker in Cardinal until recently, when he returned to farming.

Third Candidate?

A meeting was held at Trenton to consider the advisability of placing a labor candidate in the field in the coming Provincial election in West Hastings. An organization was effected; John Jones of Trenton was elected President and B. A. Sandford of Belleville 1st Vice-President; W. S. Jones, Trenton, Secretary and G. McDonald, Belleville, Treasurer. H. Hoover of Springbrook. It was decided to postpone definite action until Tuesday evening, October 7, when a meeting will be held at the City Hall, Belleville.

Ward Meeting

PROTEST DISALLOWED

The O. B. A. A. Sub-committee held a meeting at Toronto last night, and after hearing the evidence furnished by the arbitrators and players, dismisser the protest lodged by Belleville against Oakes of Toronto. As a result, the game being played between these teams to-day in Peterboro' will decide which shall meet Harvesters of Hamilton in the final.

Belleville protested the game played at Belleville on the grounds that Catcher Brodey became a participant in the contest when the umpire erroneously announced that Brodey would replace Nugent, who was injured.

(What the Press Agents Say)
FUNNY MUSICAL FARCE

AT GRIFFIN'S TO-NIGHT

Margaret Mayo's hilariously funny musical farce, "His Bridal Night," will be the attraction at Griffin's tonight. It is a classy, snappy, show the plot of which is the complication that result from a man marrying one of twin sisters, and on the night of his marriage not knowing which one he married and going off on a honeymoon with the wrong girl. The beautiful and fascinating Crisp sisters will be seen in the parts of the twins, while Robert Dwight, who is a real comedian as well as talented singer, Frank Cullen, Charles Bennett, Bertha Julian, Beatrice Leta, Clarice Grey and others, all contribute to the fun-making. The music is tuneful, the singing is done with a swing, the dancing is graceful and lively and the dialogue is clever and clean.

MADGE KENNEDY AT PALACE

The many Belleville admirers of Madge Kennedy, the talented Goldwyn star will be pleased to learn that she is to appear at the Palace to-morrow to Saturday, matinee daily in a sunshine offering entitled, "A Daughter of Mine," a new Lyons-Moran comedy and the 14th chapter of the thrilling serial of the big tops "Lure of the Circus," is also announced for exhibition on the same program.

VIVIAN MARTIN IN "LOUISIANA"

Those who like delightful comedy tense drama and gripping tragedy will have an opportunity to see all three elements in "Louisiana" in which dainty Vivian Martin appears at Griffin's to-morrow to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. Much of the comedy is provided by an old negro, Mammy Nurse, the tragedy by a jealous, hot-blooded young mountaineer, and the drama and romance by the hero and heroine, while Miss Martin, the star, with her usual versatility, adds to the production a goodly measure of each element. Robert Ellis, a star well known to Belleville phtoplay lovers, plays the leading role in support of the star. The British News, and 4 other selected comedies and dramas are also announced for exhibition on the same program. Three vaudeville features will also be presented on the same program, in Valle, gifted Italian accordionist, Lew Lewis, late comedian of Neil O'Brien's minstrels who will offer a study in black and tan and the E. DuBarry's in a classy offering.

VAUDEVILLE AT PALACE TO-NIGHT

One of the strongest casts assembled in any picture during the current season, is that appearing in support of Marguerite Clark in her new photo play "Come Out de Kitchen" which will be shown for the last time at the Palace to-night. Miss Clark's leading man is Eugene O'Brien, who has played opposite the star in several of her recent pictures. Frederick Esmelton, who has a most important role, is a funny Sennet comedy, "Trying to Get Along," the Official News, a Lone comedy, "Perils of Thunder Mountain" serial and other plays will also be presented on the same program. The vaudeville offering presented at Griffin's Monday and Tuesday, will be presented at the Palace to-night and include Bobby Wise, a fine trained pony who does many clever tricks, Sue Rath bourne singing comedienne, and Edna and Paul English turn giving up-to-date travesty.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER II

He had approached the manoeuvre sufficiently to feel no surprise when the room was pronounced stifling ten minutes later, and she declared she must return to the terrace. She had hitherto, however, evinced such small desire for his companionship that he was momentarily undecided which tete-a-tete was the one she had been anxious to effect.

"Poul!" she exclaimed, as they emerged into the air. "It was unbearable. Where are the others? Didn't they come out too,"

"They have no idea we're gone," said Turquand drily.

She was greatly astonished, and had to turn before she could credit it.

"I thought they were behind us she repeated several times, "I never thought they saw us move. Oh, well, they'll find it out in a minute, I expect. Never mind."

They strolled up and down among the promenaders.

"Sorry you're going Mr. Toulaud? Your friend will miss you very much," inquired the lady.

"I don't think so," he answered. "He knew I was only running down a few days."

"He tells me it is the first holiday he has taken for years," she added. His profession seems to engross him. I suppose it is an engrossing one. But he oughtn't to exhaust his strength. I needn't ask you if you've read his novel. What do you think of it?"

"I think it extremely clever work," replied Turquand.

"It has certainly given in a literary position."

"How splendid!" she said. "Yes, that's what I though it: "extremely clever" brilliant—most Blliant! His parents must be very proid of him!"

"They are dead," said Turquand.

Mrs. Walford was surised again. She had somehow taken for granted they were living, and she understood he had no brothe or sisters, it must be very lonely for him.

"He was a good deal of me," said her escort. "And if quite a feeling sort of person when you know me."

Herrigide answered that she found this entertaining. The apparent dislike not lessen his pace. She fanned herself strenuous and decided that, bodies being only, he was dense.

"Of course, one way," she pursued, "his position is an advantage to him. Lots of people have to work hard if it depend on their writing, don't th?"

"I do," assented, "I'm sorry to say."

His cousin obtrusion of himself into the matr annoyed her singularly. She had ither inquired nor cared if he work hard, and felt disposed to say so, Turquand, who realized now why hairs had been thrust upon him this evening, regretted that loyalty to Kent prevented his doing him what he felt sold be the greatest service that could be rendered, and removing the temptation of the mauve girl permanent from his path.

"With talent and private means one ther is fortunate."

"I often tell him so," he said.

"If it doesn't tempt him to rest on is oars," she added delightedly. "Wealth has its dangers. Young men will be young men."

"Wealth is a big word," said he. "Kent is certainly not to be called "wealthy." "

"But he does not rely on his pen?" she cried with painful carelessness.)

"He has some private means, I believe; in fact, I know it."

"I am so glad—so glad for him Now I have no misgivings about his future at all..... Have you?"

"I'm not so sure that I follow you."

She played with her fan airily.

"He is certain to succeed, I mean; he need not fear anything, since he has a competence. Oh, I know what these professions are," she went on, laughing. "My son is in the artistic world; we are quite behind the scenes. I know how hard-up some of the biggest professionals are when they have nothing but their vocation to depend shocking—even when one has aptitude for it."

"Kent has more than "aptitude," he said. "He has power. Perhaps he'll always work too much for himself and the reviewers to attract the very widest public. Perhaps he is a trifle inclined to over-do the analytical element in his stuff; but that's the worst that can be said of it. And, then, it's a question of taste. For myself, I'm a believer in the introspective school, and I think his methods admirable."

"Schools" and "methods" were mean ingless to the lady in such a connection. Novels were novels, and they were either good or they were "rubbish" if she understood anything about them and she had read them all her life. She looked perplexed, and reiterated the phrase she had used already.

"Oh, extremely clever, brilliant—most brilliant, really! I quite agree with you."

The Way to say "No"

		YES	NO
1	Are you in favour of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?		X
2	Are you in favour of the sale of beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure through Government stores and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act?		X
3	Are you in favour of the sale of beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure in standard bulk sale and amendments that by a majority vote for to permit such sale? to The Ontario Temperance Act?		X
4	Are you in favour of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government stores and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

Everybody should study the four questions and realize exactly what they mean. Do not be misled by the insidious demand for "light" beer.

The beer of the ballot is 118% stronger than the Ontario Temperance Act now allows, and over five times as strong as the limit allowed for beer defined as non-intoxicating in Great Britain and the United States.

Just Answer Each Question

1. Unless you vote on every question your ballot is spoiled.
2. You must mark your answer to each question with an "X" only. Anything else would spoil your ballot.
3. Unless a majority vote "No" on question 1 the bars will be retained and the sale of all kinds of intoxicants permitted.
4. Unless a majority vote "No" on questions 2, 3 and 4 the Ontario Temperance Act will become almost worthless.
5. The only SAFE course is to mark your ballot as shown above.

"No!"—Four Times—"No!"

NO CONFIDENCE IN DEWART.

When the Liberals were in power in Ontario the administration of the liquor license law was a howling farce. Under the Conservative administrations of Sir James Whitney and Sir William Hearst laws permitting the sale of liquor have been rigidly enforced, to the great advantage of the public generally. Whatever verdict is expressed at the referendum the electors of Ontario can have confidence that their will as expressed by their ballots will be faithfully carried out by the Hearst Government. They can have no confidence at all in any government headed by Hartley Dewart as regards liquor law enforcement, judging from the past history of the Liberal party in this province with its rotten record of political pull and laxity of law enforcement, and the opinion generally held of the political "slipperiness" of Hartley Dewart, even by the leading Liberal newspapers of the province.

ASSASSINATION BY ABUSE.

President Wilson's health breaks down and he is forced to cancel his speaking tour. Premier Borden's health gives way and he is obliged to relinquish the cares of state just at the most critical time in his own career. The strain on national leaders is great at all times but has been multiplied many times by the war and the peace negotiations—multiplied to the breaking point and rubbed raw by the virulent criticism of those whose hardest work is to keep their jaws working upon adverse criticism of everything and everybody but themselves, and throwing a cloud of poison gas before the great public achievements of men who are sacrificing their health and their material prosperity for the good of the nation.

War blotted out many things, but it failed to blot out the rabid politician—it scared him and quieted him for a time but he quickly recovered in time to try and tarnish the lustre of the really great achievements of self-sacrificing public men with the mud of unfair criticism.

Premier Borden and President Wilson will be the greatest men of their age and country when they have passed away, and even the mud-throwers will wash their hands for the moment to place flowers on their graves. How about substituting a few bouquets of affection while they are living for the mud of unfair political criticism.

NOTHING OBSCURE IN REFERENDUM BALLOT.

There will be no decision on the referendum ballot by the answer of any one single question. The answer to every question will be considered and the majority in each case will decide as to the future of prohibition for the time being in Ontario.

"There is nothing obscure about the questions," declared Sir William Hearst to a representative of the Toronto Telegram. "I can't for the life of me see why the Liberty League or others are opposed to the ballot, or even to the Ontario Temperance Act."

"Suppose, now, there are a lot of people who are against open bars, but in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act, who want to be allowed to have whiskey in their homes without having to get a doctor's prescription. How are they going to vote?" was suggested.

How It Is Done.

"That is very easy," said Sir William. "They can vote 'no' to the first question which asks 'Are you in favor of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?' Then they are asked if they are in favor of the sale of light beers in Government agencies. If they want light beers in their home they can vote 'yes' to that. Or they can answer in a similar way question No. 3, which is for the sale of light beers in standard hotels. Or if they want to get whiskey in their homes they can vote 'yes' for No. 4, which is for the sale of spirituous or malt liquors in Government agencies.

"If the people vote 'yes' to No. 2, we will establish agencies in different parts of the province. If they want No. 4 we will do the same. There is nothing obscure about it. A man may vote 'no' for the first question and 'yes' to No. 2 or No. 4. If the majority are in favor of No. 2 or No. 4 and the Ontario Act is sustained, then we will amend the Act.

Do Not Need Legislation.

"We can do that by proclamation and order-in-council. There is no need for further legislation. The legislation has already been passed. Whatever the people vote for we shall carry out, and we shall consider we have their mandate to carry out their request. If they want to have the Ontario Act repealed, we shall go back to the old liquor license system we had before 1916. Whatever the vote is, the majority will decide each question."

CRISP COMMENT

Liberal successes in West Hastings have been so rare and widely separated that they are regarded as freak curiosities, but with every election campaign the same tune has been used by the Grit Jass Band: "Sure victory for the Liberal candidate." The Liberal drum major does all their cheering before election day, feeling that there will be no chance for cheering after the ballots have been counted.

× × ×

Editorially the Toronto Globe has expressed a preference for Sir William Hearst as governmental leader over Hartley Dewart, aspirant to the Premiership of Ontario, but this did not prevent the Globe from slandering Sir William Hearst in its news columns Monday with a big black heading which read "For Booze and Hearst, Waterloo Tories Nominate Mills, Who is For Beer and Whiskey." Despite its past professions the Globe desires more than anything else the success of Hartley Dewart. Its avowed temperance principles are "ke unto sheep's clothing" attempting to hide the political wolf beneath.

× × ×

While the Liberals are posing as the only simon-pure, honest-to-goodness prohibition party the Grit machine is conducting an underground campaign trying to incite returned soldiers and others to resentment against the Ontario Government with the charge that the Hearst administration prevented householders from securing liquor for medicinal and household use except through a doctor's certificate. As a matter of fact the prohibition of importation of liquor was enacted by the Government at Ottawa as a war measure. The Ontario Temperance Act does not prohibit the importation of liquor for private use and any blame or credit attached to the prohibition of the importation of liquor must be ascribed to the Dominion Government. Up to the time of the Dominion Government's action there was no fault found with the Ontario Temperance Act, which as a war measure was accepted as a necessity, and people will have an opportunity of deciding by their ballots at the referendum.

REPAIR FARM BUILDINGS

How and When to Paint Them Efficiently.

In the Fall the Buildings, Like Machinery, Should Be as Thoroughly Overhauled as Labor Conditions Permit—Broken Windows Should Be Repaired, Dust and Cobwebs Cleaned Away and the Premises Brightened by Cleaning and Whitewash.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

EVERY farmer should care for his farm buildings in such a way as to maintain them in good serviceable condition and so conserve his resources generally. On most farms there are many details in themselves of minor importance, but in the aggregate of tremendous influence. Carelessness of the exterior of buildings is an indication, generally, of the conditions existing in their interior. Slovenly surroundings and general run-down conditions are the hall-marks of inefficiency and mismanagement.

The farmer may not be able to change the location of his farm, but to a great extent he can control its appearance and general conditions by seeing that the roots are in good repair and weather tight, the fences in place, gates in order and painted, on hinges, not sagging or dragging on the ground, the latches and hinges of all doors and gates greased and operating freely; no broken lights in the window sashes of the various buildings; the stable fixtures in order, the stanchions and partitions in place, and the mangers and floor in good repair, giving to the whole place the impression that it receives prudent care and regular attention.

Investigations have disclosed the fact that concrete is an ideal material for repairing and making in the hands of a resourceful person on the farm. Publications issued by cement manufacturers as to tools and materials used, aggregates, proportioning the mixture, how to mix, how to place forms, reinforcement, etc., may be obtained for the asking.

Doors—The ordinary stable door construction of two thicknesses of matched lumber is not satisfactory, because the effect of the warm moist air of the stable on the inside ply of lumber causes it to swell, while the outer lumber, being less affected, causes the door to spring out top and bottom. A panelled door is less affected because the expansion and contraction resulting from atmospheric conditions is taken up by the panels.

To hang a door hold it up against the jamb and mark round with a pencil. Then cut down to these lines. Make it ¼ narrower and ¼ shorter. The hinges should be placed about six inches from the top and the lower one ten inches from the floor. The thickness of the casing should be taken from the total width of the hinge, the balance, divided by two, gives the distance the hinge is to set back from the face side of the door. In all cases the hinge should be widened up to reach across two-thirds of the thickness of the door. Hew doors should have three hinges. A mortise for the hinge of the door should bevel slightly toward the front, so that the hinge will strike the jamb.

Setting locks for the doorsIn locks are those that are screwed on to the face of the door. Mortise locks are those the rim mortise in the door itself marked. lock is held in position and screwed for keyhole, knob-bar-cut and the holes. The first twelock screwed that are bored and soon and knob into place. The end the keeper is plates are put on nob.

Put on to a is set into the The mortise door just wide mortise cut. To admit it, the face and deep end being set flush with plate of the edge of the door, the face of knob-bar and keyhole Mark for the lock and fasten in holes, plates and escutcheon set, the knob adjusted. The keeper is and fitted into its proper place, the with the edge of the jamb.

Roof—See that the roof is tight, member that there are shingles of shingles. The old standard was inches long—five butts together to equal 2¾ inches—are superior in several ways to present methods of cutting them to 16 inches long, the butts at two inches. Much depends on the way the shingle is manufactured. A roughly cut shingle will not give good service because of its tendency to draw the water up under the weather line by capillary attraction, and the "fuzz" harbors dust, making hold for moss to start growing. The edging should be smooth and the butts such that the butts are slightly narrower than the portion as to allow any debris to pass through the joints and not accumulate and start a rot.

Cattle Stalls and Mangers.—The comfort of the cattle is of great importance as it affects the milk production and their feeding qualities. Whatever style of manger is used simplicity of construction, convenience of feeding and cleaning should be considered.

The swivel of the chain cow-tie should be examined to see if it works freely. In any case apply a little grease to it. Any weak or broken links may be neatly and effectually secured by using a link or a wire link made out of two or three turns of fence wire through the links. Allow the wire long enough to be crossed and wound round the strands in opposite direction after the manner of the lineman's splice. The stanchions, links and swivels should be attended to in similar way.

BIRD NOTES.

All Sounds Do Not Come From Their Throats.

Has it ever occurred to you that many of the sounds which birds make do not come from their throat at all, but are produced as mechanically as the notes made by a boy rattling a stick along palings.

One kind of woodpecker produces a sound exactly like the distant roll of a drum, which can be heard half a mile away on a still day.

The "beats" are made at the rate of at least sixteen per second, and how the bird can do it is one of the many mysteries of nature which has still to be solved.

The "bleating" of a snipe is another puzzling performance. The snipe has a way of rising high in the air, then dipping sharply, with wings and tail outspread.

The wings quiver from force of air pressure driven through them, and the sound is believed to come from the rapid fluttering of the individual feathers, in any case the sound is produced not vocally but instrumentally.

You have perhaps heard a corncrake "rasping." It is a most harsh and unpleasant noise, rather like that of a mowing machine. It is more than suspected that this sound, too, is produced otherwise than from the throat of the bird.

In Canada is a sort of a nightjar called by the country folk a "bull-bat." Like all nightjars, it is a night-flying bird, but sometimes comes out in the twilight. The sound this bird makes is a curious booming drone which certainly does not come from the throat, but is probably made by its wings as it swoops after an insect.

Curry, Not Currie.

That the correct spelling of the name of Canada's commander-in-chief is "Curry," although Sir Arthur has been called "Currie" since the outbreak of the war, has been made to light. On September 16, when Middlesex county presented Sir Arthur and Lady Curry with a $500 chest of silver, it was noted that the spelling was changed in a manner at first ascribed to an engraver's error. Later the Warden of Middlesex, John Curry, brother of the general, announced that Canadians at large have been in error during the war and that the Middlesex silverware is accurately designated.

Electric Insoles.

To keep the feet of outdoor workmen warm, electrically wired insoles have been patented, which can be placed in any shoes into which socks are for connecting with sources of electric current have been installed.

A field marshal never retires, but remains on the active list and draws full pay till the day of his death.

Hot Weather.

"Call this hot weather," said a visitor to Canada. "Why, I've seen it so hot down south that the popcorn popped right on the stalks." "Whew!" exclaimed the host. "Well, that's not all; the juice of the cane in the next field turned to molasses, ran through the fence, mixed up with the popcorn and formed the finest combination of popcorn and molasses that ever crossed your lips."

Cells in Lungs.

There are 175,000,000 cells in the lungs, and, spread out, they would cover a surface thirty times greater than the human body.

Deserts Native Land.

Lt.-Col. Percy H. Guthrie, organizer of the famous "McLean Kilties," has taken out his naturalization papers in the United States, according to word received from Boston, where he intends to reside in the future. He is to become a partner in the law business with James D. Colt, attorney, with offices in that city. These facts were announced when the colonel arrived in Boston from Fredericton, N.B., where he has resided with his wife and children for many years, and where he practiced law for several years prior to the outbreak of war.

Col. Guthrie has many friends in Boston and other sections of New England, gained while he was there recruiting for the "Kilties" battalion. He obtained his first naturalization papers there on June 20, which date was his 35th birthday, and his application for admission to legal practice will soon be acted upon.

Col. Guthrie was the first Canadian to offer his services to the crown, and went overseas as a major in the first contingent. Prior to the war he was a colonel in the New Brunswick militia, and a member of the Parliament of that province, having been elected to the latter office when but 27 years of age. He was three times distinguished as the "boy alderman" of Fredericton, being then 25 years of age. In the fighting overseas he received 27 wounds from shrapnel.

Niagara Falls Icebound.

Niagara Falls has been iceboundthree times. The famous cataract was iceboundand the American Falls were bare of water for several days in February, 1909. This phenomenon has occurred only twice before, in March, 1848, and again in March, 1902.

A Difficult Pace.

"He has. In order to be a boss now a man must know how to talk about league of nations, cowards and sociological relationships and supply and demand and a whole lot of subjects to which the old-fashioned boss didn't have to pay the slightest attention."

Excuse.

"Noah ah comes back from de wah an' finds you' married to Bulliver Joe, an' yo' done swore to be true to me."

"True! Was you true to me when you kept writin' all about your engagements with at big Bertha creak tha'?"

Our Red Cross.

The Canadian Red Cross Society will cease to exist as an overseas organization in a few more weeks. The Canadian ambulances, which it was first proposed to return to Canada for presentation to various hospitals, were found to have done such long service in France that it was considered advisable to dispose of them in London, and this is being done. Like other military stores, they have realized good prices.

Col. Braylock, head of the Canadian Red Cross, will shortly retire to private life and remain in England, while Lady Drummond will return to Montreal.

Good Beginning.

Visitor—What makes you think that William will grow up to be a great doctor?

Fond Mother—While playing doctor with his little playmates, he said: "Gentlemen, before we begin to operate, you hold the patient's hands and feet. I'll get the three cents out of this right hand pocket."

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—With 4,600 cattle in round numbers on the Union Stock Yards yesterday the market in the early morning hours opened a little slow, but later the trade brightened up with a good active market for the good handyweight butcher cattle, at steady with last Thursday's prices or from 10c to 40c up over a week ago.

In all other lines the common and medium cattle held steady to firm with a fair good clean up on all classes.

Several loads of good steers, weighing around 1050 lbs., sold at $11.75, and 850-lb. cattle brought from $11.15 to $12.50. The stocker and feeder trade was steady and canners and cutters unchanged.

There were about 4500 sheep and lambs on the market, the latter selling the bulk of them around 15 to 15½c, some at 16c. The market was good and strong. The sheep market stood off and sold 50c lower, with the calves steady and the heavy ones hard to cash in.

The hog market was steady at 19½c to the farmer, 19½c f.o.b., and 20½c for selected watered. For to-day the packers are taking easier prices, and that's about all you can say about it.

Woman Jumps from Car.

HALIFAX, Sept. 30.—Mrs. George Stanford, colored, died Sunday afternoon as the result of injuries sustained by jumping from a swiftly moving automobile driven by her husband, who has been arrested pending an investigation. It appears the couple were riding when the woman jumped and fractured her skull. She died shortly after being removed to the hospital.

Britain Lost 284 War Ships.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—An official return just issued shows that British warships lost during the war numbered 284, including thirteen battleships, nine cruisers, thirteen destroyers, six light cruisers, 64 destroyers and 84 submarines. Another large loss during the war totalled 215, including 244 colliers and 248 drifters.

Dispatches says British forces have dropped from fourteen to eighteen thousands pounds of explosives on Kronstadt.

TOO MUCH NOISE

At 9.30 last night the police answered a call to Canby Park, where it was alleged parties were making so much noise as to disturb the neighborhood. The officer responding to the call found some young people there and ordered them to leave the place.

SHEEP KILLED BY DOGS

A Kingston veterinary was called to Opinicon Lake on Sunday to attend injured sheep. He found that three ranches had been visited by savage dogs, and heavy losses inflicted. Only a few sheep could be saved among those that were torn by the dogs. Hiney Scott, one of the largest sheep raisers, was perhaps the heaviest loser. He lost thirty-three dead, sixteen missing and eleven drowned. The dogs had driven the sheep into the water. On the late Mrs. Guthrie's ranch, eighteen sheep were lost.

DOG KILLED BY AUTO

Last evening an auto bus ran over a collie dog on Front street near No. 2 Pire Hall, breaking its back. The canine was put out of misery by a member of the police department.

CALL FOR POLICE

As the result of a call last evening to the upper part of Front street a man was placed under arrest for being intoxicated. He was found in a yard in rear of a business place.

RUN FOR FIREMEN

The fire brigade was at 5.55 yesterday afternoon called to a residence on Parker street, West Belleville. A slight blaze in a residence was fortunately extinguished before any particular damage resulted.

FINED FOR INTOXICATION

George Monroe, a stranger in the city was this morning fined $10 and costs for intoxication. The fine was paid.

OFF TO PETERBORO

A number of baseball fans from the city went to Peterboro to-day to the purpose of witnessing the third and final game between the G. T. R. team of this city and the Oslers of Toronto. Not a few motored to the Quaker City

DEATH OF INFANT

John Joseph McGuire, the seven month old infant son of Mr. and Mrs James McGuire, 20 King street, died this morning after a short illness.

LIVE HOGS SHIPPED

Mr. D. Scott and son, today shipped from here a number of live hogs and calves. The price paid for hogs was $16 per hundred weight, which is 60c less than the price paid last week. The calves brought 16c per pound.

WHO LOST THEIR FALSE TEETH?

An upper set of false teeth is at the police station awaiting an owner. The article was picked up upon the street and handed into the police for safe keeping.

DEATH OF FORMER RESIDENT

Mr. John Callaghan, a former resident of Belleville, died on Tuesday at Bay City, Mich., where for a number of years he had resided. Mr. Callaghan was an elderly man and is survived by a wife and family. Mrs. Gerow residing on Church street is a sister of deceased.

STANDARD TIME TO GOVERN

The returning officer for this riding has received word that standard time will govern in the voting on both the referendum and the provincial elections on October 20. The polls will open at 9 o'clock in the morning old time (city time) and close at 5 o'clock in the afternoon under the same schedule.

EXCITING RUNAWAY

A farmer's team of horses drawing a light waggon, filled with garden produce, made an exciting runaway on Front street, Sidney section yesterday afternoon, coming to a stop after one of the horses fell and was dragged some distance by his mates. The waggon dashed into an automobile standing at the curb to the disadvantage of the waggon, which suffered a broken pole. The damage to the automobile was slight.

Think Tanlac The Finest On Earth

Husband and Wife are Both Praising It for Good It Has Done Them.

"I am still praising Tanlac," writes Daniel J. Hickey, of 217 Euclid Ave., Toronto, Ontario, in a recent communication received from him at the Tanlac office.

Mr. Hickey has lived in Toronto all his life, being employed at the Dominion Steel Works and his statement in which he tells how Tanlac relieved him of a long-standing case of stomach trouble and rheumatism attracted widespread attention when it was first published. In corroboration of her husband's statement Mrs. Hickey also relates her own wonderful experience with this medicine as follows:

"I had a nervous trouble for six years," said Mrs. Hickey, "and was in such a terrible condition that I had to stay in bed four or five months every year. My misery was completely gone and when I was up I was too weak to even sweep the floor. I had no appetite and what little I forced down did me hardly any good. My skin was pale and sallow and I could hardly sleep at night.

"My husband was taking Tanlac and he improved so fast that I decided to try it too, and since taking a few bottles I am now in better condition than I have been in several years. My nervousness is all gone, my appetite is fine and I sleep like a child at night. From the way Tanlac has fixed me up both my husband and I think it is about the finest medicine there is."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton (a Made by J. Will Vine), in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

BIRTHS

BOYLE—Born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boyle, 35 Evans street, on September 29, 1919, a son.

NO MAN NEEDED.

Of recent years we have had automatic lights, and even automatic lightships, but the first unattended lighthouse with a powerful fog-signal is the recently completed Platt's Fourgave lighthouse, marking the entrance to Russell Channel, leading to St. Peter's Part, Guernsey, a spot which figures in Victor Hugo's romance, "The Toilers of the Sea."

This tower, built of ferro-concrete on a wave-washed rock, is of irregular octagonal shape, eighty feet high, says the New York Times. The room below the gallery contains many ingenious electrical devices, the invention of the late engineer-in-chief, R. A. Catford, controlled from the shore by a submarine cable nearly a mile and a half long. This cable is of great strength, being eleven inches in circumference and weighing forty-five tons to the nautical mile. By it aid the foghorn and siren are regularly blown—they have been heard thirty miles away on the French coast—while the current it carries also controls the light in the tower. For illuminating expenses of coastline where the erection of an ordinary tower would be prohibitive on account of cost, this type of lighthouse has certainly much to commend it. The Platte Fourgere installation cost an expenditure of only $50,000.

It is proposed to use this type of automatic lighthouse for illuminating Hudson Bay and Hudson Straits in connection with the opening of these waters and the carriage of wheat by the new railway to Port Churchill. A proposal to establish similar lights on the more exposed coast-lines of South America has also been considered.

GURNEY-OXFORD CHANCELLOR

The highest development of steel range

The home that owns a Gurney-Oxford Chancellor has the supreme satisfaction of knowing that their stove troubles are over for 50 years or more. Also that although its price is reasonable, owing to Gurney-Oxford enormous production, no amount of money could possibly buy a better Range.

THE ARISTOCRAT AMONG RANGES

Without a cent being wasted,—the designers have put every known convenience and many exclusive betterments into this magnificent Range. Built a hundred days' trial for satisfaction or your money refunded.

Splendid cooking at big fuel savings make the Chancellor the cheapest stove you can buy. It gives years of service where cheaper, lightweight stoves "eat their heads off" in wasted food and fuel.

Now big line of Gurney-Oxfords on our floor. Come in and see them. We can save you money and guarantee you life-long satisfaction.

Now low price set by the foundry $99.00

It's a perfect baker because of Gurney-Oxford patented divided flue construction which surrounds the oven with an envelope of heat, giving absolutely even baking. Also fine box construction is perfected and special reinforced plates give every atom of heat possible from the fuel and so there is no waste.

freight paid anywhere.

The "Economizer" is a remarkable draft-control, exclusive to Gurney-Oxfords, which enables you to get exactly the amount of heat you want; it will hold fire 36 hours.

The extreme beauty of the Chancellor, with its capped, yet graceful strength, must be seen to be appreciated.

Willard

Service First Advice Second Sales Third

There's our policy in a nutshell.

First—When the customer comes in, find out what HE wants. Give him satisfaction at the lowest charge consistent with a good, thorough job.

Second—Tell him how to prevent battery trouble. We've not anxious to repair his battery, except to make it last longer.

Third—When he really needs a new battery we want him to buy a Willard, on, naturally, and to buy a Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation—because we feel that battery will last longer and give him less trouble. Then we please on repairs that any other battery he can buy.

Come in and find out the Willard Service reasons for Willard Superiority with Threaded Rubber Insulation.

Settlement Prospects Bright For English R'y Strike

UNION LEADER EXPRESSES HOPE FOR SPEEDY SETTLEMENT—SAYS SITUATION BECOMES MORE DANGEROUS HOURLY — CONFERENCES WITH LLOYD GEORGE—TRANSPORT WORKERS REFUSE TO STRIKE BUT HELP IN CONCILIATION MOVEMENT.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The hope that some means might be found for reaching an understanding with the Government's relative to the railroad strike was expressed in a statement issued this morning by J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railway men before going to the conference with Premier Lloyd George and other members of the ministry. Anything that may hamper or prejudice it, he render it more difficult to find a bridge to the situation, which is becoming more dangerous every hour, must be avoided at all costs. We are not striking for striking's sake and we will not prolong the dispute an hour more than can be avoided."—I hope to go down to Downing street to give effect to the spirit in which I am now speaking, said the statement of Mr. Thomas.

At 12.30 o'clock the labor deputation began conference with Premier Lloyd George and others of the Cabinet Ministers. None of railroad men however were members of the deputation.

The Cabinet Ministers are optimistic over the prospect of settlement of the railroad strike according to the political correspondent of The Daily Mail, who says they declared early this morning that the Government would not recede from its determination not to resume negotiations unless the men first resumed work and remarked that the fact that J. H. Thomas, leader of the National Union of Railway men, went to Downing street, while knowing of this condition, was the most hopeful feature.

Leaders of Transport Workers' Union and other labor organizations are riodeavoring to find a way to bring the railway men back and have refrained from any threat to extend the strike as a result of yesterday's conference. This, it is said, is due to the fact that Railwaymen are trying to obtain from the Government an outline relative to wages negotiations which they can lay before the men as a reason for ordering them back to their posts.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—A wave of optimism swept through both official and trade unionist circles today regarding the outcome of negotiations for an adjustment of the strike which were resumed this morning. Prime Minister Lloyd George was busily engaged at an early hour discussing the situation with his colleagues, Sir Eric Geddes and Sir Robert Horne, Minister of Transport and the labor representatives, although he had been at work on midnight at the headquarters of the National Union of Railway Men. There was extreme activity and the opinion seemed to prevail that the outlook for settlement was bright.

CARRIES CANADA'S NAME THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Remarkable Achievement for Purely Canadian Concern

As evidence of the sy in-which one enterprising Canadian firm has pushed the sale of its product into the four corners of the earth, it is interesting to know that the "Salada" Tea Company sell their product not only in through the United States, but in France, Belgium, Spain, Portugal, Canary Islands, Algeria, Morocco, the Gold Coast, every British West India Island, Mexico, Cuba, British Honduras, Guiana, Colombia, Venezuela, Brazil, Paraguay, Chile and the Argentine.

They have lately made a large shipment to Iceland and have received inquiries from Egypt, Bulgaria, Czecho-Slovakia, Turkey, Norway, Alsace, Switzerland, Peru, Denmark, Sweden, etc., etc. .

The teas shipped to these countries are exactly the same quality as they buy under the same familiar labels in any part of Canada or the United States. The popularity of the tea during the past century has made "Salada" a household word in America.

GIRL FATALLY BURNED

Lighting Fire With Coal Oil, When It Exploded

ORILLIA, Oct. 2.—Adella A. Bant, the sixteen-year-old daughter of W. H. Bant, 108 Front street south, was fatally burned while lighting a fire with coal oil on Sunday. The oil in the can became ignited and the can exploded in her hands with a loud report, and in an instant the unfortunate girl was a mass of flames. She was taken to the hospital, where she died yesterday. Her parents were at church when the accident happened. The family moved to Orillia from Wingham last spring.

BARRISTERS AND COLONELS SERVING AS ENGINE STOKERS

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The response to the Government's appeal for volunteers continues astonishingly great. Members of the Cavalry Club, Royal Air Force, colonels, majors, barristers, accountants, consulting, electrical, mechanical and civil engineers are to be found among the men in the underground powerhouse and undertaking traffic duties at stations, working lifts, etc.

SOLID GOVERNMENT IS NEEDED.

(Toronto Mail and Empire)

The farmers of this Province have been well served by Premier Hearst and his colleagues. If any group of farmers were asked what specific complaint they would make regarding the Government's administration of affairs, scarcely a word would be uttered on the score of deficiencies in money appropriations, or in measures looking to the promotion of agriculture. The U. F. O. movement, as the Globe laments, has nominated candidates in more ridings that are usually Liberal than Conservative.

No one quarrels with the farmers' right to organize, but the history of previous attempts to make a separate political party of them is not encouraging to the U. F. O. leaders. Although much emphasis is put on class differences. No good can come from dividing the people politically on economic lines. Farmers, wage-earners, manufacturers, merchants, business men generally and professional men are all alike, citizens, and as citizens outside of organizations in the interest of their respective callings, they should divide, if divide at all, strictly on political lines. Fortunately in Ontario we are overwhelmingly a compact, homogeneous people. Our interests are,-broadly, the same. Labor and urban industry should be vitally interested in maintaining agriculture at a high pitch of prosperity. The farmers, whose chief markets lie in the cities and towns, must be subsidiaries of the manufacturing and other urban occupations. It may be that each side takes too much for granted as to the solidity of the other's prosperity. There are misunderstandings on both sides to be cleared up, and adjustments to be made, so that a more equitable division of the profits of industry may be brought about. But there is nothing which the farmers, as a class, can justly and legitimately ask which they Hearst Government has failed to do for them. The question is whether he's ordinarily Conservative or Liberal, can vote for Hearst candidates with full conviction that his support is due to that Government.

In these post-bellum days there are challenging matters to get better conditions of working, or of producing, or of selling. Three-fourths of the matters now being aired relate to gain. That can only be temporary, because the world, and Canada also, has to get back to ordinary pay-as-you-go life. It is most important that in the economic crisis that may have to be stemmed in the next two or three years the Province should have a solid government, with the splendid record of administration the Hearst Government has behind it. We do not want an Assembly kept at sixes and sevens politically by a paralyzing group system.

Last Minute Telegraph Briefs

Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—It is the unanimous opinion in Government circles here that the treaty of peace with Germany will be ratified this afternoon by the Chamber of Deputies. November 5th is the date unofficially fixed for the holding of elections.

Vote Against Treaty.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—Jules Delahaye, speaking in behalf of the Royalist group in the Chamber of Deputies, and Deputy Maginot, on behalf of 25 deputies representing the devastated regions, announced today that they would vote against the ratification of the peace treaty. Deputies Delahaye and Maginot were among the first six members who arose to explain the action they proposed to take with reference to the peace treaty.

Churches and Unrest.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Representatives of seventy-five evangelical denominations met here today for a twoday conference on industrial and social unrest. Dr. Frederick B. Fisher, chairman of the industrial relations department of the Inter-Church World Movement of North America, in opening the first session, characterized the conference as marking an "epoch in religious history and the first step in an active united participation of Protestants in the industrial crisis.

U. S. Steel Strike.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Interest in the steel strike today again centred in Washington, where the Senate Labor Committee was continuing its national controversy involving directly or indirectly nearly five hundred thousand workers. F. H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, who testified yesterday that the open shop would be maintained by the corporation at all costs, resumed his testimony today. William E. Foster, secretary of the strikers' national committee, and an alleged leader of the radical element in the strike, was in Washington prepared to follow Mr. Gary on the witness stand.

Unionist Party Will Continue

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—Liberal-Unionist ministers and members foregathered in a family conference and surveyed the political situation prior to the general caucus of the party to be held. The main topic today is the private conferters of the Eastern Block. Practically all of the Liberal-Unionist members now on the city attended and there was a lengthy exchange of views.

While the caucus was private, it is learned that the fairly general sentiment was against any break in the Unionist party at this particular time. The most of the Liberal members are disposed to regard the election of 1917 as possessing sufficient elasticity to carry in for the period of this parliament rather than viewing it in the mere restricted sense as terminable with the promulgation of peace.

So far as the time between now and the next general election is concerned therefore no particular change seems indicated. Whether, after dissolution the Government and its supporters will go to the country as a Unionist party embracing the present elements of fusion does not appear to be a matter that can be settled at any caucus or series of caucuses just now. The most that can be hoped for, seemingly, is approval of general principles and a declaration of purpose to go ahead for this session and probably for the next.

The Liberal-Unionists are not exactly of one mind on the situation. The argument that the Government and the party was formed to better pro secute the war, and that with peace here its mission is accomplished, appeals forcibly to not a few. Others, however, representing the more predominant section, consider that th problems before the country justify continuance of Union in peace as in war.

Belgian Royal Family Arrive In New York

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer,
Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—King Albert and Queen Elizabeth, of Belgium, and Prince Leopold were welcomed to New York on the arrival of the steamer George Washington today in characteristic United States fashion. Vice-President Marshall extended a welcome for the Government and with him were many others prominent in federal and civic life.

Belleville Won At Peteborough

Close and Exciting Game in Semi-Finals for Baseball Championship

One of the best amateur games of ball ever seen in this section of the country was that play d yesterday afternoon at Peterboro between the O. T. R team of this city and the Orioles of Toronto. It was the final game of the semi-final series, and victory perched on the Belleville banner, and the G.T.R. of this city. It was a hard fought game from start to finish and the result was not definite until the last player had been retired in the 9th innings The score was 6 to 1 in favor of the Belleville team. The game was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators, many of whom were from this city, and every encouragement was given our boys. As a result of the game the championship is now narrowed down to the Hamilton and the O. T. R. teams. The first game of the final series will be played at Hamilton on Saturday next. Freddy Goyer, the speedy left arm pitcher for the G. T. R. team was as usual steady as clock work and tied up the members of the Oriole team with his fast delivery and puzzling curves.

By striking out seventeen of Manahan's opponents and holding them to five scattered singles, the Belleville southpaw repeated his performances of last Saturday, and Oolers showed themselves just as helpless as they were in that game. In the third, sixth and seventh he retired the side in one strikeout each.

Joe Spring delivered an excellent game for the losers fanning eleven and holding his men to five hits. Four bases on balls, and two of them bloscomed into runs. A wild throw by Catcher Belleville gave winning counter in the sixth.

The fielding feature was furnished by Calhoun, who made a fine throw to the plate in the 3rd, cutting off what looked like a sure run. Willy played a brilliant game at second for the losers. Oolers were the first to score. With one gone in the fourth Brody walked, Spring singled to centre, sending Brody to third; Spring stole second, Potts fanned, Donkin rolled to first, Brody scoring. Donkin stole second, Goyer fanned Hughes for the third out.

In the fourth, when Mills walked, he was sacrificed by Goyer, took third on a passed ball, and scored when Willy was throwing out Gerow.

The winning run was sent over in the sixth. Bases were full, Read struck to left, Mills fled out to Newton, Smith stole third, Ross broke for second, and Archer threw high to Willy. Smith scoring.

Theft of Liquor Being Investigated

Before Magistrate Masson to-day John Logan and Matthew Summer had a preliminary trial on a charge that they did, on September 13th, 1919 unlawfully steal a quantity of liquor from a vehicle, namely a G. T. R. boxcar. Mr. Carnew for Crown, Mr Mikel, K.C., for Logan and Mr. E. J Butler for Summers.

Alfred Nicholson, who was discharged with being implicated in the transaction was the principal witness he having turned King's evidence. In the course of his examination he stated that he was a G. T. R. fireman, having been some years in the company's employ. Mr. F. Frechette was engineer of the engine, he witness was fireman. On September 13th, he was going on duty at midnight. There was no plan whatever made as to the theft of liquor. The car containing the liquor was connected with other cars and caboose. He at some time or other cut the car which contained the liquor and saw boxes removed from the car. The boxes were put on the front of the pilot of the engine. He recognised Summers as one of the men carrying the boxes. Witness was not intimately acquainted with Logan as he was a car inspector. He heard Logan say that he would take away two of the cases containing the liquor, and he did so. There were eight cases altogether. One jug of the liquor was brought in the cab of the engine and its contents consumed. Witness had a drink with the others.

To Mr. Butler, the witness denied that he had told his wife, father, brother or any other person that he had nothing to do with the transaction. When his court left for luncheon, Nicholson was still on the witness stand.

Sir Robt. Borden Meets Unionists In Caucus

PREMIER PRESENTS STATEMENT OF GOVERNMENT'S POLICY, WHICH MET APPROVAL—NATION MUST BEND ENTIRE EFFORTS TO SOLUTION OF AFTER-WAR PROBLEMS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer,
Canadian Press, Limited.

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—Unionist members of the House of Commons were in caucus for two hours to-day discussing questions of policy and other important matters. Sir Robert Borden partially recovered, but still lame and weak was present. At the conclusion of the conference the Prime Minister and other members stated that the meeting was quite harmless.

Hume Cronyn, M.P., for London, presided. It is understood that Sir Robert Borden made a comprehensive statement of the Government policy and that it was greeted with the approval of the members. It is stated that the Premier dealt particularly with the necessity of the Government and the nation bending its entire energy in the solution of after-war problems.

The appearance of Sir Robert after his illness was warmly cheered by his followers. He said he was feeling better but his attendance was a considerable strain and he is in need of complete rest.

It has been announced that the premier will leave for the south immediately.

Freight Cars Jump Conductor Killed

Main Line Traffic Delayed on G. T. R. by Freight Wreck.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—Robert Norris, 108 Withrow avenue, a freight conductor on the Grand Trunk, was so badly injured last night when he was crushed between an overturned freight car that he died an hour later, in St. Michael's Hospital. Norris was riding on top of the car when it jumped the track. He was unable to jump far enough and was pinned beneath the car, breaking the back. Four other trainmen jumped from the train and escaped injury. The engineer and fireman stayed in the engine cabin until the locomotive was brought to a standstill, and, fearing that it might be pulled off by the cars, jumped from the cabin.

The accident happened at 6.30 last evening on the Don esplanade, south of Queen street. Here there are five different rails, three used by the outgoing trains and two by incoming ones. The freight train was southbound, and when it ran over the switches the second car from the engine jumped the track and, snapping the coupling, proceeded to run along side of the tracks. The car attached to the box car was pulled from the rails. After both had gone a short distance they overturned.

Traffic Delayed.

Passenger and freight traffic was delayed for some time, while the auxiliary crew were removing the cars. Trains on the C. P. R. and C. N. R. that travel over this line were diverted to North Toronto station. One train was in charge of Engineer Oliver Hollings, 212 Emmerson avenue. Other railwaymen on the train were: Fireman Charles Jeffrey, 776½ Pape avenue; Brakeman William Reybourn, 172 Curzon street, and S. Dickson, Spadina avenue.

The police removed the body of Norris from the hospital to the morgue last night, and an inquest will be held.

Called by Death

MARY V. H. MURNEY

Miss Maria Victoria Hastings Murney, daughter of the late Hon. Edmund Murney of Belleville, sister of Mrs N. B. Falkiner, Belleville, and Mrs. Percy MacLeod of Ottawa, died September 30, after a long illness. Death came as a happy release. She was an active worker in all Belleville charities on the Board of the General Hospital interested in the Old People's Home, Children's Shelter and in St. Thomas Anglican Church, also being a life member of the Women's Auxiliary.

CAROLINE BARNUM

On September 14, 1919, death removed from among us, a well known and highly esteemed lady in the person of Caroline Fulton, wife of the late John Barnum. She was born in the year 1836 and had always lived in and about Thomasburg. During her life she made many friends, and was loved by all. In religion, Mrs. Barnum was a Methodist and was ready and waiting her Master's call. Many and beautiful were the flowers sent by her relations and friends in the time of her illness and death. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. (Capt.) W. G. Clark, pastor of Wesley Methodist church, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. S. Jackson, in Trenton. The body was taken to Albery, where it was laid to rest in the family plot.

Worlds Series Baseball Game

Second Game to be Played Today—Good Weather Prospects.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press, Limited.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 2.—Baseball enthusiasts were greeted by bright skies early to-day and it appears that weather conditions would not interfere with the playing of the second game of the World Series between Chicago White Sox and Cincinnati Reds at Redland Field this afternoon. The local weather forecasting prediction for the day was cloudy and warm. Probable batting order for to-day's game is:

Chicago—Liebold, r f; E. Collins, 2 b; Weaver, 3 b; Jackson, l f; Felsch, c f; Grandil, l b; Risberg, s s; Schalk c; Williams, p.

Fourth Inning
Cincinnati—2.

FIRST BLOOD FOR CINCINNATI REDS

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 2.—Cincinnati won the opening game of the world's series from the Chicago Americans by a score of 9 to 1. Every series develops a new idol for the fans, and Walter Reuther, who pitched the Reds to victory was the unanimous choice last night. He not only held the White Sox to six scattered hits and really pitched a great game, but made up a batting average of 1.000 for himself.

If there was anything in the game that was better than his hurling it was his work with the stick. Two of his three hits were mighty triples. He drove in two runs, scored three runs and was the instigator of the mad romping of Red legs around the bases in the fateful fourth.

The Sox were in the fight up to that time, but when he propelled the ball into no man's land it left centre and tromped around to third and two scored ahead of him, the heart seemed to go out of the American Leaguers.

It was a sad day for Chicago's people, leading pitcher of the junior league, Never before was so decisive a beating administered to the Michigan wonder. He was simply pounded out of the box Five runs were recorded against him in the fourth before Manager Gleason gave him the sign to retire. His teammates gathered round him and patted him encouragingly on the back, but he walked off to the dismend with his head hanging.

Roy Wilkinson succeeded him on the mound, while the last inning was pitched by Grover Lowdermilk, but it made little difference to National League champions. They kept the air fairly clogged with fugitive hits, while the Sox fielders ran their legs off after ratrie flies.

Capt. Mornelt, who was Government prosecutor in the cases against Bolo Pasha, Caillaux and Prevet-Paradol in the case against former Premier Joseph Caillaux.

Four daughters and two sons are left to mourn the loss of a loving mother. The daughters are, Mrs. I. Hall of Belleville; Mrs. L. McDonald of Point Anne; Mrs. J. S. Jackson and Mrs. A. Boyay of Trenton. The sons are Charlie of Cherry Valley and George of Trenton.—Communicated

Scrutineers For Referendum Vote

An order in Council has been passed relating to the position of scrutineers in connection with the referendum vote. The Personal Liberty League is known as the affirmative side, and the Ontario Referendum Committee as the negative side. Both affirmative and negative sides, it is provided, or chief scrutineer, for each electoral district, who must be a qualified voter. As soon as these officials are designated they must file their credentials with the returning officer for the district.

Each of these representatives, or chief scrutineers, is entitled to appoint not more than two agents to represent him at each polling place, and each of these agents must file credentials with the deputy returning officer. In the absence of such duly appointed agents not more than two voters at each poll from either side may undertake to act as scrutineers and hand their names to the deputy returning officer.

Representatives so appointed shall be treated as candidates, the order in Council provides, and entitled to the rights and privileges and obligations of such representatives.

Major Hamilton Refuses

A statement was issued at Sault Ste. Marie by Major Harry Hamilton that he has no intention of opposing Sir William Hearst for the riding of Sault Ste. Marie. Efforts have been made for the past two weeks to persuade Major Hamilton to be the Liberal candidate in the riding, as he is very popular with the returned soldiers of the district. Unless a candidate is put in the field by the Independent Labor party Sir William will have no opposition.

SINCLAIR'S
Large Muffler Collars
Lend Beauty To Cloth Coats

—Then by way of contrast the belts are mere strings or straps, just across the front, or may even be partly concealed. Beauty has been the motive in these new styles, for narrow belts, confining the fullness of the coat, add grace to the figure. Deep muffler collars are stylish additions to these Coats. Priced from $27.50 upward.

Fall Silks

The suppleness and grace with which these soft silken fabrics accommodate themselves to every whim of the designer of fashions lend new beauty to every style. Supreme in quality, soft in texture and lustrous in sheen, "Satin Duchesse" or "Fleur de Chene" are chosen whenever gowns, blouses or skirts of unusual beauty are to be created. They are available in all the charming shades of the season, at $3.00, $3.50 and $3.65 per yard.

Childrens Coat Comfort

The first consideration in Children's Coats is Warmth, though style is of great importance as well. In this collection there are such warm materials as Cheviot, Velour, Whitney Cloth, and Chinchilla in shades of Navy, Red, Brown, Grey and Burgundy. All are stylish models with prices ranging from $7.00 to $17.50.

MARABOUT SCARFS

We have on display a splendid collection of Marabout and Ostrich Scarfs, in all sizes from small neckpiece to a large cape collar; in Black, Natural, Grey and White. Prices from $5.00 to $17.50

WOOL BLANKETS

Blanket time is here, and the careful buyer will fill her requirements while the assortment is complete. These Wool Blankets are White with Pink or Blue borders. Priced $8.50 to $16.50

Sweaters in Every Style

Even though warmth is a necessary accompaniment of these New Sweaters, its another pleasure to find them so vastly becoming. Whether Fall days were made for Sweaters or Sweaters for Fall days, is all one to every woman and girl after seeing these pretty new models. Possession at once is the main thought about them. Shown in Coat and Pullover styles, by such well known makers as Penman's, Warren Bros., Ballantyne, and Monarch Knit. Prices $3.00 to $16.50.

New Autumn Blouses

Rich embroidery and attractive color combinations are a summary of Fashion's dictates in Fall Blouses. This happily enables one to obtain attractive harmony in the choosing of Blouses appropriate for wear with one's new Fall Suit.

Prices are Moderate.

Letters To The Editor

RETURNED SOLDIERS VOTE

Belleville, Oct. 2, 1919.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Sir:—I thought I would write you a few lines in regard to returned men who are making enquiries in regard to being able to vote in the coming election are unable to do so as not being on the voters' list. I along with many others who have lately returned think something should be done in placing us on the voters' list. I think it is an injustice to use men who have given our services for the country to find we are not given an opportunity to vote in the coming election.

FRED DIXON.

A Practical Grill

DO you enjoy starting a fire just to cook light meals? Of course you don't. That was all very well when it was not possible to secure the splendid comforts of

The New Canadian Beauty Three-heat Grill

It's no trouble at all to do light cooking with this up-to-date Electric Grill. Just turn on the current and your heat is ready. For the unexpected guest, for a quick breakfast or a hurried meal at any time, no other household appliance gives so much convenience and satisfaction for the money.

Presently you find yourself preparing entire meals with it—bacon and eggs, toast and fried potatoes for breakfast. For dinner, a broiled steak or chops.

It prepares food to perfection! It costs but a trifle for electric-city. You use what current you need—high, medium or low heat.

Accept our cordial invitation to call and see our splendid stock of Electrical Appliances, including the Canadian Beauty Electric Grill and Electric Toaster.

THE LATEST CHARGE.

The latest charge against Sir William Hearst is that he is getting too old. Too old! Sir William, we find, is but fifty-five—a mere youth, so far as politics is concerned. At fifty-five Sir Wilfrid Laurier was just beginning his premiership. So, for that matter, was Sir Robert Borden. Politics, in fact, seems to be an old man's game. When Palmerston became premier he was twelve years older than Sir William Hearst is now. The same age—sixty-seven—found Mr. Gladstone, after two years of semi-retirement, just starting on his Bulgarian atrocities campaign, Midlothian and all its consequences, with three more periods as Prime Minister still in store for him.

Sir William's opponents must find a better argument. The Conservative leader is still well able to compete in statesmanship with the youthful superman who heads the Liberal party.—Ottawa Journal.

MERCURY HAS A VISION.

In Ontario the political condition is unprecedentedly peculiar. The Hearst government has to face the people in three weeks, and its prospect is gloomy enough. The rapid rise into prominence of the United Farmers is likely to do the Liberals more harm than it will do to the Conservatives, but at present it would be unsafe to wager that the Farmers and the Liberals together will not outnumber the Conservatives when the new Legislative Assembly meets. In that event any one of several combinations may eventuate, the most likely being a sort of coalition of the Liberals and Farmers, with a few Labor men to support them. Such a coalition might last for one term and do good restorational work for the country, but there would be at least one more uncertain election before anything like a stable condition would arise.—Guelph Mercury (Liberal).

It is amusing to read in Liberal newspapers the assertion that the prospects of the Hearst Government in the election are "gloomy" and uncertain, while in the next paragraph the same papers generally admit that the prospects for the success of the Liberal party, led by Hartley Dewart, are not only gloomy, but absolutely eclipsed, with no silver lining to the dark cloud of impending disaster. Judgirig from the tone of the Liberal papers, honest enough to admit it, the Liberal provincial party as led by Hartley Dewart will be dissipated to a shadow in the next Legislature.

The Guelph Mercury, as quoted above, has a vision of an election debacle which could result in a coalition of U. F. O. members, Liberals, and Labor, but the Mercury is of the opinion that such a coalition could not last longer than one term at the most, to be succeeded by another uncertain election "before anything like a stable condition would arise."

The Mercury, to be consistent, Liberal though it is, should do all in its power to ensure "stable conditions" by supporting the Hearst Government, which has a record of business-like, careful progressive and economical administration, freely conceded by all except the most rabid partizans.

Globe's Gloomy Gus.

Small and great, the Liberal press of Ontario can see no prospect of the Liberal representation in the Legislature even holding its own, and the gloomy voice in the fog which grumbles daily of woe to come from the Toronto Globe office is echoed in plaintive wails all over the province by the lesser lights of Liberalism. Of course, there are a few exceptions to this state of affairs, for the few journals who play politics on the principle that readers like to be humbugged, continue to predict sweeping victories for Liberal candidates and party. These journals always have the election won up to the time the ballots are counted, then they cover up their tracks by labored claims of "moral victories," and ward triumphs, which somehow never seem to affect the general results. However, they figure, no doubt, that if they are going to cheer at all the time to cheer is during the campaign before the electors do the cheering for the other fellow when the ballots are counted. The Toronto Globe, which is the leading Liberal newspaper in Ontario, but refuses publicly to accept the "so-called" leadership of Hartley Dewart, somewhat sarcastically refers to campaign gas as follows:

The Voice in the Fog.

Mr. Dewart is referred to by some of the party orators as a great popular leader, whose burning words are arousing the Province—as it has not been aroused in a generation—to the turpitude of the Government of the day. We seem to have heard that sort of praise in former years for the men who from time to time have been chosen to lead the Liberal party of Ontario through the wilderness. IT IS BESTOWED USUALLY BEFORE THE ELECTION RESULTS ARE PUBLISHED. A defeated army is fave disposed to trumpet the fame of its General than one that has followed its leader to victory.

CRISP COMMENT

If you fail to answer all four questions on the prohibition ballot you may as well not answer any. There must be four crosses on each ballot paper or it will be declared spoiled.

× ×

Dr. Cody's decision to cut down homework will be appreciated by the boys and girls, who will no doubt urge Dad to vote for the Hearst candidate and thus help keep Ontario's progressive Minister of Education in his position as director of the educational policy of this province.

× ×

G. Albert Payne, a Cardinal undertaker, has been nominated by the U. F. O. as candidate in Grenville in opposition to Hon. Howard Ferguson. It will take a pretty smart undertaker to bury Hon. Howard Ferguson politically, for he is very much alive.

× ×

When a Liberal speaker in Sudbury was making false charges against the administration of Canadian military hospitals in England and holding up to contumely a sister-in-law of the late Hon. Mr. Hanna, he forgot to mention that the lady in question is now a Liberal member of the Alberta Legislature. Some politicians never seem to learn that dirty politics never win votes.

× × ×

J. J. Morrison, secretary of the U. F. O. for the province, in an address at Prescott, declared that the platform of Premier Hearst gave the farmers little consideration. Inasmuch as the first plank in the Premier's program pledges "the greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every shape and form" it would be interesting to learn what Mr. Morrison would consider full consideration for the farmers. As a matter of fact Mr. Morrison, while he may be a farmer himself, is not working at it to any noticeable extent.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER II—Continued

"Your son writes, did you say, Mrs. Walford?"

"Oh no, not writes—to He alings! He is a—studying for the operatic stage." Her tone would not have been more impressive if she had said he was De Reszke. "His voice is quite magnificent."

"He is coming out soon," she said "He—er—he could get an engagement at any moment, but—he is so conscientious. He feels he must do himself en tire justice when he makes his debut. In professional circles he is thought an immense amount of—immense?"

"Has he sung at any concerts?"

"I'm afraid not," she explained "socially. He visits among musicians a great deal. And of course is makes it very lively for us. He is quite—er—i the swim?"

"You are to be congratulated on your family," said Turquand. "With such a son, and a daughter like Miss Walford—"

"Yes, she is very much admired," she admitted—"very much; but a strange girl, Mr. Turquand. You couldn't believe how strange!"

He did not press her to puts him to the test, but she afforded the particulars as if glad of the opportunity. He remarked that, in narrating matters of which she was proud, she adopted a tentative, half-apologetic, which provoked in the hearer the perhaps unfounded suspicion that she was inventing the facts as she went on.

"She is most peculiar," she insisted "The matches she has refused! Appalling!"

"No?" he said.

"A Viscount!" she gasped. "She refused a Viscount in Monte Carlo last year. A splendid fellow! Dark, actually wealthy. Perfectly wild about her. She wouldn't look at him."

"You astonish me!" he murmured.

Mrs. Walford shook her head speechlessly, with closed eyes.

"And there were others," she said, in a tortured spasm—"dazzling positions! Treated them like dirt. She said, if she didn't care for a man, nothing would induce her. What can one do with such a romantic goose? Be grateful that you aren't a mother Mr. Turquand."

"Some day," he opined, without returning thanksgiving, "the young lady will be indicted."

"Oh, not for long, if it comes to that," She nodded confidentially. "I'll tell you the truth, I expect somebody here next week A young man rolling in riches, with expectations that—oh, tremendous! He raves about her She has refused him—er—seven times however. He vowed to commit suicide after her last rejection. But she respects him immensely. A noble fellow! So—oh, a most noble fellow! And when he asks her again, I rather imagine that pity may make her accept him, after all."

"She must have felt it a grave responsibility," observed the journalist politely, "that a young man said h wanted to commit suicide on her account."

"That's just it, she feels it a terrible responsibility. Oh, she's not fond o him. Sorry for him, you understand —sorry. And between ourselves, I'm sure I really don't know what to think! would be for the best—I don't indeed But I wouldn't mind wagering a pair of gloves that if she doesn't meet Mr. Right soon, she'll end by givin in and Mr. Somebody-else will have stolen the prize before he comes—hee hee, hee!"

Turquand groaned in his soul. In his mental vision his friend already flopped helplessly in the web, and he derived small encouragement from the reflection that she was mistaken in the succulence of her fly.

"You are not smoking," she said "Do! I don't mind it a bit."

He scowled at her darkly, and was prepared to see betrothal in the eyes of the absent pair when they rejoined them.

As yet, however, they were still walking in close crowd around the table On their right, a fat Frenchwoman cried 'Asses! asses!' imploringly as he horse, leading by a foot, threatened r last to gild the winning post and leave victory in the rear; to their left an English girl, evidently on her honeymoon, being fiance radiantly ga of the bridegroom's purse. Keep h paid for sixteen tickets, and Miss Wal ford—"Ah, Eve, before they perceive that the others had retired.

"We had better go and look for them," she declared.

The well-bred pair shimmered in the moonlight now, and the terrace was scthronged that investigation could only be made in a saunter.

"I wonder where they have got to," she murmured.

Her companion was too contented t be curious.

"We are sure to come upon them in a minute," he said. "Do you also abuse Dieppe, Miss Walford?"

"Not at all—no. It is mamma who is bored."

"I should like to show you Arques," he said. "I'm sure your mother would be interested by that. Do you think we might drive over one afternoon?"

"I don't know," she replied. "It it nice?"

"Well, 'nice' isn't what you will call it when you are there. It's a ruined castle, you know, and you can almost "hear" the hush of the place. It's so solemn, and still, and Norman. If you're very imaginative, you present by it hear men clanking steel in rusty you dream in the old courtyard You would hear the men in armor, clink."

"Am I imaginative " she smiled. "Aren't you?" he asked.

"Perhaps I am; I don't know. Who makes you think so?"

He was puzzled to adduce any reason except that she was so pretty. He di not pursue the subject.

"There are several things worth seeing here," he said. "Of course, Dieppe has the Casino" If one never goes anywhere else, I suppose you have seen heard of the Cave-dwellers?"

"The Cave-dwellers?" she repeated "Their homes are the caves in the cliffs. Have you never noticed there are holes? They are caves when you get inside—vast ones—one room lead ing out of another. The people are beggars, very dirty, and occasionally picturesque. They exist by what they can cadge, and, of course, they pay rent; it's only when they come on that they see daylight."

"How horrid!" she sinvered. "And you went to look at them?"

"Rather! They are very pleased t receive." One of the inhabitants has lived there for twenty years. I don't think he has stirred abroad for ten; he sends his family. Many of the colony never leave there. Don't you consider they were worth a visit?!"

"I don't know," she said; "one might be robbed and murdered in such a place."

"With the greatest ease in th world," he agreed; "some of the inhabitants are so black that you literally can't see your hand before you. would be a beautiful place for a murder! The next-of-kin hires the juvenile heiress there and bribes the beggars make away with her. Unknown to hir they spare her life because—because— Why do they spare her life?—don't keer her prisoner, and bring her up as on of themselves. Twenty years later—by-the-by, I could write a sensationa novel, after all."

"What nonsense!' laughed Miss Wa ford daintily.

"Do you like that kind of story?" he inquired.

"I like plots about real life best, she said. "Don't you?"

He found this an exposition of th keenest literary sympathies and re garded her soberly. She preferred analysis, to adventure, and realism t romance. What work he might ac complish inspired by the companionship of such a girl!

MEXICO CANNOT SECURE ANY ARMS

London, Oct. 2.—Efforts of secre agents of the Mexican Government to obtain large quantities of arms and ammunition in Europe will mean failure, because it is understood the United States Governments approached in this connection, that any such consignments will be held up.

The American authorities are cognizant of the movements of the principal agents. Besides a desire to respect the wishes of the United States it is also felt to be necessary at this juncture, when so much foreign money is at stake in Mexico, to countenance no step which might add to the unstability of the Southern Republic.

Run Down Nervous Mothers

Gain Strength Rapidly on Vinol

In their zeal to do all in their power for their loved ones, most mothers overwork and soon get in a nervous, rundown condition. Vinol, the non-secret cod liver and iron tonic, is exactly what they need to build them up, make them strong and quiet their nerves.

Please be Convinced by this Positive Proof

"I was weak, run-down and nervous. I had dizzy spells and a condition to do anything. I saw Vinol advertised and tried it. In about three weeks I felt better and it built me up and restored my strength. I want to recommend Vinol to other women who are weak, nervous and run-down."—Mrs. E. Trotter, 2 Grant St., Toronto, Ontario.

For all run-down, nervous, anaemic conditions, weak women, over-worked men, pale children, Vinol is unsurpassed. Contains no alcohol.

Wedding Bells

QUINN—LYNCH

A very pretty wedding was celebrated on St. Michael's Church on Tuesday, when Margaret Lynch of this city became the bride of Thomas J. Quinn of Kingston. Miss M. Quinn of Erinsville, Ont., sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and G. S. Flagler of this city, groomsman. After a dainty wedding repast, at the home of her brother Mr. P. J. Lynch the couple left on the 4.35 p.m. train for Toronto, Niagara Falls and other western points. On their return they will take up their residence in Kingston.

DAVERN—ANDERSON

On Tuesday, September 30th, 1919, at Mountain View, Ontario, by the Venerable Archdeacon Beamish, Mary Isabel, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ridley Anderson; to Mr. William Albert Davern, late of the R.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Davern, Toronto.

NO DELIVERY OF MAIL

The Post Office authorities here received word from Ottawa that Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 13th, will be observed as a statutory holiday by the local office. There will be no delivery of mail Saturday afternoon previous and none on Monday.

ALLOWED HIS LIBERTY

Fred Lacasse, a young French Canadian whose home is at Montreal, was arrested here a week ago on a charge of vagrancy. This morning he was by Magistrate Masson allowed his liberty upon promising to leave the city, which he did.

BARN BURNED

Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed a frame barn situated on Wellington street, just south of the Agricultural Park. When the firemen arrived upon the scene, owing to a long run, the building was a mass of flames and its destruction could not be averted. The premises are occupied by Mr. S. Kellar. The residence situated near the barn caught fire, but the firemen soon checked the flames, and saved the house. The cause of the fire is not known. Loss sustained is partially covered by insurance.

STILL BEING ISSUED

Officials of the post office department at Ottawa have explained that while no postal notes payable in the United States were being issued, this did not interfere with the money business, conducted by the post office department. Money orders issued by the Canadian post office department are payable at face value in the United States, the premium being collected from the sender when the order is issued.

RECEPTION TO G. T. R. TEAM

The members of the G.T.R. baseball team arrived home from Peterboro at 12.20 last night and were accorded a hearty reception in recognition of their victory over the Oslers of Toronto. The Fifteenth Regimental Band was in attendance and escorted the victors from the G. T. R. station to Bridge street. A large number of auto and baseball enthusiasts on foot made up the parade. There was general rejoicing over the boys' victory.

GRAND TRUNK CHANGES

D. T. Crawford has been appointed general superintendent of the Grand Trunk Railway at Brockville in succession to Joseph Groves who has been transferred to Richmond, Que., to act in the same capacity. Mr. Crawford comes from the Canadian West where he has been in railway service for some years. W. Bibby has been appointed supervisor of track on the fifth district in succession to J. B. Franklin, resigned. Mr. Bibby has had extended service on maintenance of way work with the Grand Trunk and latterly has been in charge of the supervision of track from Cornwall to Montreal terminal.

His Bridal Night Drew Large Audience

A large audience greeted "His Bridal Night" at Griffin's Theatre last night and the humorous situations unfolded created much laughter. Opinion as to the merits of the production, which is described as "a comedy with music," was somewhat undecided divergence. Many were amused and pleased by the fun and catchy songs, while others thought that the situations were too suggestive for clean and wholesome entertainment. The cast, was on equal to that of the average road company, and the combination of singing and acting ability was as good as could be expected from the average road company playing one-night engagements. The theme was a daring one for public presentation, concerning twin sisters and the substitution of the unmarried sister for the bride on the honeymoon. Many local and dance numbers were interjected at every possible opportunity and helped to brighten up the action of the piece.

Music and Drama

DOES JEALOUSY PAY?

Does jealousy pay? Does unrequited love justify murder? Both questions are adequately answered in Vivian Martin's new picture, "Louisiana" which will be shown at Griffin's tonight to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. In this story, there is a young mountaineer in whom jealousy provokes insane desires to slay. Therefore when he sees the girl he loves in the company of another man, his first impulse is to take a shot at him, and this he does. This character played by Arthur Allardt, furnishes much of the dramatic element in this photoplay. The British News and some good comedies and varied plays will also be shown on the same program. Three vaudeville features consisting of, the DuBarry's in harmony singing and the piano, Valle, gifted wizard on the accordian and Lew Lewis, late member of Neil O'Brien's minstrels in a study in black and tan.

MADGE KENNEDY AT PALACE

Madge Kennedy is not only beautiful, but she is an artist to the finger tips. She is temperamentally fitted to portray with rare artistic effect ingenious roles, such as she essays with delightful results in "A Daughter of Mine" to be presented at the Palace to-night to Saturday, and daily matinees. Miss Kennedy is a conscientious player whose characterizations are the result of intelligent and discriminative observation, reinforced by a thorough knowledge of the rudiments of her art. Her womanly traits, her artistry and personal charm make her a screen figure of rare attractiveness and her popularity increases with each new appearance on the silver sheet. On the same program with the above offering a new Lyons-Moran comedy, and the 14 chapter of "Lure of the Circus," serial is also announced for exhibition.

CROMPTON FAST

The clever, wily Freddie Crompton, surprised the fans by clearly outpointing the big Indian, Pete Scott. He jabbed the Indian a score of times with his left, and swatted his quite freely with his right, and had the referee looking foolish when he swung and found Freddie not at home. The crowd laughed at Scott when he missed his swings, and jeered him when he persisted in punishing in the clinches. However, Crompton did not escape scathless. The Indian clouted him a few hard ones and had him very tired on end but he won by a nice margin in points, and the Hamilton papers say so. Crompton will meet young Jarvis of Buffalo at Belleville Friday evening.—Toronto Star.

VEGETABLE MARKETING

High Prices Are Paid for Best Quality.

Provide Abundance of Cold Water for Dairy Cows During Hot Weather—Shade In Pastures Also Essential — Ideal Location on Banks of Cool, Pure Streams.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

FEW growers realize the importance of properly harvesting and marketing their early vegetables. The large majority are expert enough to produce an excellent crop, but there is perhaps only about one out of ten that harvest and market their crop to the best advantage. The public is today, perhaps more than before, demanding a high grade product. They are willing to pay the price if they get the quality, and the gardener that will make the greatest success will be the one that caters to this demand.

There are several factors of great importance necessary to achieve the greatest amount of success. Foremost of these, perhaps, is proper harvesting. Few, even of our growers, realize how rapidly our vegetables deteriorate in quality after they are taken from the ground. Much of the fine flavor and crispness is lost in the case of such products as onions, lettuce and radishes in only a few hours unless special care is exercised in handling. Such crops should never be exposed to winds or the hot sun and if they can be kept in a cool, fairly moist condition, the least possible loss in quality will be maintained.

To market the vegetable crop to best advantage the grower must ever keep in mind the ultimate destination of his goods. The housewife is the one that he must please. If she is well pleased then she tells her neighbors quietly over the back fence, but if she finds that she has received something of very inferior quality then she proclaims her grievance from the housetops and forever after will be hard to convince that there is such a thing as high quality.

The most important factors to bear in mind are few in number and are not hard to put into practice. The proper degree of maturity is the first one that must be considered. Carrots, beets, onions, radishes and the other bunching crops should not be pulled before they reach the proper size. They should be carefully pulled and taken to the bunching house. There they are neatly bunched, tied and washed and then should be protected from the atmosphere as much as possible by covering. Lettuce, spinach, parsley, cabbage and cauliflower should be carefully cut and placed in baskets or carriers. Care should be taken that none of the dirt is taken up and allowed to fall through the leaves, as this is hard to remove even by careful washing and will always lower the quality.

There is perhaps not more than one person in ten that can be called a really successful salesman, and here is where a good many of our growers fall down, and after producing a high grade product they are unable to market it to the best advantage. The first requisite, as has already been mentioned, is a high grade article. An inferior grade cannot be expected to obtain the highest price. The proper care in preparation is also important. A neat, attractive package, well-packed, with high grade vegetables will always command the higher price. Furthermore, an attractive article will be its own salesman, and no matter how overstocked the market may be, will command a good price. The proper care in sorting and grading is also quite important. Vegetables of poor quality should never be placed on the market. They will not only have to be sold at a much lower price but will also have the effect of lowering the price on the higher grades, with the result that many a good market has been almost ruined by a small quantity of inferior goods.

From this we see that the greatest results can only be obtained by growing a high grade article, carefully harvested and attractively and efficiently marketed.—A. H. McLennan, B.S.A., Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

She Did Her Bit.

Miss Margaret Bell Saunders, the Toronto newspaper woman who did such varied war service abroad, has arrived in Canada on the Scandinavian. Few Canadian women have had a more varied experience this past five years. Sailing for England in the early summer of 1914 for a holiday on the continent with Madame Innis-Taylor, both were in England when the crisis came. As Madame Innis-Taylor had studied in Belgium and knew the language, she joined Mrs. Agar Adamson in her work for the Belgians. Miss Saunders joined her, and for months both worked in a hut at Furnes. Here a bomb injured Miss Saunders so severely that she was removed to the famous hospital at La Panne, where the Belgian Queen paid her a visit.

Not So Eager.

"So you want to be my son-in-law do you?" asked the old man, with as much fierceness as he could assume.

"Well," said the young man, "I don't particularly want to, but I suppose I shall have to be, if I marry your daughter."

2.51% Beer
The Beer of The Ballot is Not Intoxicating

A determination as to whether or not a particular beer is intoxicating can be reached only by a proper understanding and analysis of the manner in which the alcohol in such beer affects the human organism.

Beer containing 2.51% alcohol by weight has been proven non-intoxicating by actual experiments, scientific tests, thorough research.

Fourteen specially qualified experts testifying before the United States Circuit Courts of Appeals were unanimous in agreeing that beer containing even as high as 2.75% alcohol by weight (or .24% stronger than the beer of the Referendum Ballot) was non-intoxicating.

These experts were Professors of Chemistry, Toxicology, Therapeutics, Nerve Specialists, Physical Training Instructors, Medical Doctors and Specialists in charge of city departments where alcoholics were cared for. Experiments were conducted upon twenty-four men chosen from various walks in life—medical students, laborers, mechanics, business executives, clerks in banks and brokers' offices, artists, writers and professional men.

The experiments proved conclusively that beer of 2.75% alcoholic content strength could not possibly be intoxicating—not the slightest signs of intoxication were shown by any of the subjects.

In view of the sworn statements of these experts, based upon the results of their experiments, that beer containing 2.75% alcohol by weight is non-intoxicating, it must follow that 2.51% beer, the Beer of the Ballot, is non-intoxicating.

It is the strong conviction of the Citizens' Liberty League that —as no harmful results can possibly come from drinking 2.51% beer—then there is no fair or just reason why the general sale of beer of this quality should not be permitted. Unite with the Citizens' Liberty League in its earnest, sincere endeavor to obtain moderate Temperance Legislation.

SCOTCH TWEEDS

From the Land of the Heather

WHEN we say that these are genuine Scotch Tweeds—imported by Fit-Reform directly from Scotland—haven't we said all that can be said about the sturdiest and—to many men—the most likable Suits and Overcoats that can be made?

And these new Tweeds have gained added charm from being shaped into Suits and Overcoats by the master hands of the Fit-Reform tailors.

If you have a preference for Tweeds, either in Suits or Overcoats, let us show you the novelties we have imported in genuine Scotch Tweeds.

OUR GUNS IN FRANCE

SOME FIGURES CONCERNING CANADIAN ARTILLERY.

During the Entire War, Our Army of the Front Lost Only Two Cannon in the Battle of Sanctuary Wood and They Were Recaptured Inside of a Few Hours When the Troops Advanced.

GEN. SIR EDWARD MORRISON, who was in command of the Canadian artillery in the war, addressed the Canadian Club at Hamilton the other day—in which city he was at one time a newspaper editor—and gave some information about the work of the Canadian guns in the war which the people of this country will be proud to learn.

He repeated the statement of Gen. Curry that in the war the Canadians never lost a gun, although the artillery fought in something like twenty-three pitched battles. A newspaper report appeared on one occasion saying that the Canadians had lost a battery, but the facts in that case were that two 18-pounders had been placed close to the front-line trenches for special purposes and were overrun by the enemy, but the Canadian artillery screened the position with fire, the enemy could not remove the guns, and our troops recaptured them with the gun crews lying about them just as they had fallen. The general himself was the first artillery officer to reach these guns after they had been retaken; they were as they had been at the last moment of the fighting; the sights of both guns and the breech of one had been smashed by their crews so that they would be useless to the enemy; one gun had a live shell in the bore, and the dead gunner lay across the trail with the lanyard in his hand. This gallant exploit of our artillery was one of the incidents of Sanctuary Woods.

The first achievement of the Canadian heavy artillery was to knock down, with two rounds, the dominating tower of the church at Pronelles, a German observation point which had been previously shot at for weeks without result. This notable feat resulted in the Canadian heavy battery being taken over by the first army; and, as the general puts it, "we did not see it again for nearly two years," and, by the way, this serves to remind us that our guns, sometimes, as well as those of the enemy, fired on churches.

The first Canadian Division went to France equipped with nine batteries of 18-pounders and one battery of 4-inch guns, a total of 40 in all. In France a brigade of modern 4.5 howitzers was loaned by the British, until a Canadian brigade arrived after the second battle of Ypres. By the time the armistice was signed the Canadians had 264 field guns and 18 batteries of heavy artillery. On October 1, 1918, the Canadian guns fired 7,000 tons of ammunition in the course of the day, while the Canadian corps fought thirteen German divisions. In a month, at Passchendaele, the Canadian artillery fired nearly two million shells, which, if oaded on railway trucks, would make a train 17½ miles long, in about twelve days at Amiens and after, the amnition expended, if loaded on motor lorries, end to end, would stretch 27 miles. During the famous hundred days, ires the battle of Amiens, the Canadian artillery fired 45,19¢ tons of ammunition, or a total of 3,727,059 shells.

These figures give some idea of the work done by the Canadian artillery, and it is a matter of common report that Gen. Morrison deserves great credit for the skill and enterprise that characterised his command. It is said that at the ending of the war fifty heavy guns of the Canadian corps' artillery were the only heavy guns that kept pace with the march of the infantry, and were deployed on the banks of the Rhine to cover the crossings at Cologne and Bonn in the morning of December 13, 1918. On the previous day these heavy guns had made the unprecedented march of forty-two miles.

What is a "Canadian Citizen"?

All Canadian citizens are British subjects, but all British subjects living in Canada are not Canadian citizens. The Duke of Devonshire for example, is not a Canadian citizen, because he is not domiciled here. According to the Immigration Act, the term "Canadian citizen" means: (a) A person born in Canada who has not become an alien; (b) A British subject who has Canadian domicile; or (c) A person naturalized under the laws of Canada who has subsequently become an alien or lost Canadian domicile." "Domicile" is defined as the "place in which a person has his permanent home, or in which he resides, or to which he returns as his place of present permanent abode and not for a mere special or temporary purpose." It takes a residence of three years under these conditions for an immigrant to acquire Canadian domicile.

As Brown Bent The Twig So The Tree Has Grown

EIGHTY years ago Canada was struggling with its early problems. It was a house divided within itself. Classes and castes clashed. Upper and Lower Canada were the upper and nether stones of racial division. Though the future looked dark, the very struggle gave birth to a new idea —Cooperation—United Purpose—United Effort—Confederation.

In Upper Canada a band of democratic patriots saw that Confederation was the logical solution of the difficulties besetting the people, and the stepping stone to Great Nationhood.

He drew his inspiration from the desires of the people. He threw down the gauntlet to entrenched autocracy.

In 1844 George Brown founded The Globe as an advocate of Reform and an organ for the development of Public Opinion. During the past seventy-five years, Canada has emerged from Colonial obscurity to great nationhood, and The Globe, governed by the principles of true liberalism, and actuated by sober thought, has ever stood by the constitutional rights of the people and advocated needed reforms. The Globe will continue to advocate them so long as reforms are needed.

"As Brown bent the twig, so the tree has grown." The Globe is still the servant of the people and will remain so. It will continue to promote all good causes for the welfare of the people and the up-building of the nation.

The Globe is what Brown wanted it to be; a Great Family Newspaper—a newspaper for the home, a newspaper for all thoughtful people in every walk of life—for all the family.

The Globe has now served three generations of Canadian people. It will continue to be what it is today, what it always has been, an advocate of every good cause and a family newspaper in the best sense of the word.

To keep informed on all the big questions of the world—to follow the trend of important events in Canada during the coming months—you should read

World-Wide News Service

The Globe maintains a permanent editorial and reportorial staff of over fifty members. It is served by a staff of correspondents in Ottawa and in all the Provincial Capitals, and has approximately 100 regular correspondents in all towns of importance in Ontario and the principal Canadian news centres.

It is a member of several important world-wide news syndicates, such as the London Chronicle-New York Times cable service and the London Times-Philadelphia Ledger cable service.

From the United States it has a regular telegraphic service from Washington, New York, and Chicago, as well as special services from the New York Times, Chicago Tribune, and Philadelphia Ledger.

HUMANISE EDUCATION.

Famous Canadian Gives Advice to the English.

Very gently does Sir William Osler, the famous Canadian doctor, suggest to the members of the Oxford Classical Association that what their cult of the humanities needs chiefly is to be humanised. No man ever prized the Greeks more devoutly. "The name of Hellas stands no longer for the name of a race, but as the name of knowledge; or, as more nearly put by Maine, 'Except the blind forces of nature, nothing moves in the world that is not Greek in origin.'" Yet, though president of the classical association, it is as a scientist that he spears to these humanists—as Regius, professor of medicine; and he thrusts his charge home with masterly skill. To them the humanities mean only history, literature and philosophy; to the Greeks science was of equal importance. And in illustration to the humanities the science of the Greeks has a very special meaning for the world of to-day.

What Osler says of "Greats," the world-famous school of literæ humaniores, is doubly true of classical instruction in Canada. "The moving forces which have made the modern world are simply ignored. Yet they are all Hellenic, all part and parcel of the humanities in the true sense, and all of prime importance in modern education." To the student in Greats, Aristotle is known as author of the "Metaphysics," "Politics" and "Poetic," but not as a scientist. Yet, as was pointed out to Darwin and admitted by him, "the principle of natural selection" was shadowed forth by Aristotle. "In biology," says Osler, "Aristotle speaks for the first time the language of modern science, and indeed he seems to have been the real foremost, a 'biologist'; his natural history studies influenced profoundly his sociology, his psychology, and his philosophy." studied scientifically "the problems of heredity, of sex, of nutrition, of growth of adaptation and of the struggle for existence. Though encyclopedic in his interests, he was a specialist in embryology, unrivalled for 2,000 years. His discovery of a "special mode of reproduction in one of the species of sharks" waited until the nineteenth century to be confirmed. Yet Osler searched the examination papers of the school of literæ humaniores through the past decade and found no reference to Aristotle as a scientist. Other cases are almost as striking. Lucretius had views of "the origin of the world and the origin of man" which are up to date with the most modern thought; and his conception of "continuity in the workings of nature" are "unmatched among the ancients or moderns"; yet the fact is similarly ignored in the school of literæ humaniores. The inevitable result is a failure to grasp what is fundamental in history and philosophy, man's relation to the primal forces of humanity and to the universe.

There is another side to the picture, the professed scientist. The extraordinary development of modern science may be her undoing. Specialism, now a necessity, has fragmented the specialties themselves. The worker loses all sense of proportion in a maze of minutiæ. Applying themselves early to research, young men get into backwaters, far from the main stream. They quickly become hypercritical, and the smaller the field the greater the tendency to magalocephaly. From over-specialization, scientific men are in a more perilous state than are the humanists from neglect of classical tradition. The salvation of science lies in a recognition of a new philosophy —the scientia scientiarum which Plato describes: 'Now, when all these studies reach the point of intercommunion and connection with one another, and come to be considered in their mutual affinities, then I think, and not till then, will the pursuit of them have value.'". Osler accordingly proposes a modified honor school in which the principles of philosophy are to be dealt with in relation to the sciences, and in which science is to be illumined by the introduction of literary and historical studies. "Science will take a totally different position in this country when the knowledge of its advances is the possession of all educated men."

Many minds are to-day moving toward a similar conception of the truly cultural education. As a satirist of modern classician pointed out, the Greeks had not the slightest suspicion that they were ancients. "In each passing century those who understood them best think of them most nearly as they thought of themselves when they walked and talked on the Acropolis. To us of to-day they are most modern when we follow their primitive observations in science, their inspired guesses as to the moving forces in this world of machine, and eke them out with our fuller conception of facts, our ever enlarging and solidifying theories as to man and his place in nature.

They Say They Won the War.

The final casualty report from the Central Records Office of the United States Expeditionary Forces in France, made public by the War Department, gave the total battle deaths as 49,498; total wounded, 205,690, and prisoners, 4,480.

Only slight revisions will be made in this report, it was announced.

Further corrections in the list of missing have reduced the number to only 127 names, as compared with 264,000 for France and 121,000 for Britain. To July 1 the army had reported 149,423 cases of disabled soldiers to the War Risk Insurance Bureau. It was estimated that the final total would be close to 200,000. The American war toll in men, according to the official figures of the Military Department is 54,918 dead, 8,113 reported missing, 2,818 prisoners of war, 149,709 wounded.

The details are as follows: Killed in action or died of wounds—officers, 2,535; other ranks, 38,323; died—officers, 234; other ranks, 3,706; missing—officers, 347; other ranks, 7,767; prisoners of war—officers, 130, other ranks, 2,688; wounded—officers, 6,344; other ranks, 143,355.

BIRTH OF A POEM.

'In Flanders Fields' Born of Fire and Blood.

"In Flanders Fields," to quote the words of Mal.-Gen. Morrison, who commanded the 1st Brigade to which Lieut.-Col. McCrae was attached, "was literally born of fire and blood during the hottest phase of the second battle of Ypres.

"My headquarters were in a trench on the top of the bank of the Ypres Canal; and John had his dressing station in a hole dug in the foot of the bank. During periods of the battle, men who were not actually rolling down the bank into his dressing station. Along from us a few hundred yards was the headquarters of a regiment, and during those days—the sixteen days of the battle, he said—I watched Death hurrying them dead whenever there was a lull. Thus the graveyard, now on row, grew into a good-sized cemetery.

"Right as he describes, often aboard the larks singing high in the air between the the crash of the shell and the reports of the guns in the battery just beside us. I have a letter from him in which he mentions having written the poem to pass away the time between the arrival of batches of wounded, and partly as an experiment with several varieties of poetic meter.

"The unit with which McCrae served was the most advanced of all the Allies' guns by a good deal, except one French battery, which stayed in a position yet more advanced for two days, and then had to be taken out.

Heroic Work of Canadian Doctors.

"The full labors of the Canadian Army Medical Corps are drawing to a close. At the date of the armistice 1,000 sick and wounded soldiers lay in France and 38,000 in England. At the same date there were only 164 Canadian soldiers in the front war, whose wounds were wounded men, twenty-four blind and the rest sick.

"The work of the corps is exhibited in 64 boxes of records which are awaiting despatch to Canada.

Mal.-Gen. G. L. Foster, C.B., Director-General of Medical Service, claims that a detailed record of the injuries and treatment of every man who passed through his hands may be found in those 64 boxes to prove, if necessary, to every wife and mother in Canada that no man of hers ever failed to receive proper consideration.

He finds no words of praise too high for the medical men who left their practices in Canada and came overseas to work and suffer with the troops, either under fire, where their services were on a par with the infantry, or in the drudgery of administration.

"I am intensely proud to belong to such a service," said Foster, "and consider it a splendid privilege to have lived in an age which produced this war, for, as the horrors were very great, the heroism which faced them was infinitely greater. The Canadian and Imperial medical service worked together like brothers, and close association helped us to grow. Until the C.A.M.C. became as large as the whole of the British R.A.M.C. at the time of the South African war."

Very Few Deserters.

The Canadian Press is officially informed that the total number of deserters in the Canadian Forces since August, 1914, and not accounted for, is 1,723.

When it is remembered that over 418,000 troops went overseas from Canada, this is considered below the average. It must also be borne in mind that included in the number are those who deserted from the first contingent of about 33,000 men, a high proportion of whom were men born in the British Isles.

Many of these had served in the home forces. Shortly after the arrival of the first contingent in England, a considerable number of these deserted, and in many cases, it is understood, they re-enlisted in their old British regiment. Thus, at the beginning of the war, in 1914, there was a much higher proportion of desertions than in any more recent year.

On an average about 14 deserters a month are accounted for, so that number is likely to be considerably reduced.

The total number of missing in battle casualties not accounted for since the beginning of the war is 161.

Related to Royalty.

By a recent wedding a former Toronto man, Capt. Arthur Gibbs, son of the C.B.F., becomes a cousin, by marriage, of the Duke of Connaught. Capt. Curran, who is a son of Mr. John Curran, of Toronto, and Mrs. Cyril W. Cunard, of Grosvenor Square, London, is the son of the late Cyril Cunard, of the well-known steamship family, in February, 1918. Previous to his marriage Miss Mrs. Curran was a Miss Gibbs. Her first cousin, Major Evelyn Gibbs, the well-known officer and sportsman, married Lady Helen Duncannon, daughter daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Cambridge, on September 2. The Marquis of Cambridge is a son of the late Duke of Teck and brother of Queen Mary.

"Standard Time."

There has been a great deal of disputing in Canada as to which time is "standard time." The champions of the old time called it "standard time" until their claim was at last settled by the people who favored daylight saving. After considerable controversy regarding the term, the people of London, Ont., secured a final verdict by asking Ottawa for enquiry to the Greenwich (England) Observatory, which sets the time for the world. It was learned that "daylight saving" is standard time. Greenwich Observatory is operating on daylight-saving time in connection with the British War Time advancing the clocks an hour during the summer months. As yearly daylight-saving advocates contend that they are in a position to fight the matter out in the courts. The law prescribes that "standard time" is five hours in advance of the time of Greenwich Observatory. Thus daylight-saving supporters contend that when England adopted the change the whole of the Province of Ontario was automatically forced to follow suit.

Go North for Blondes

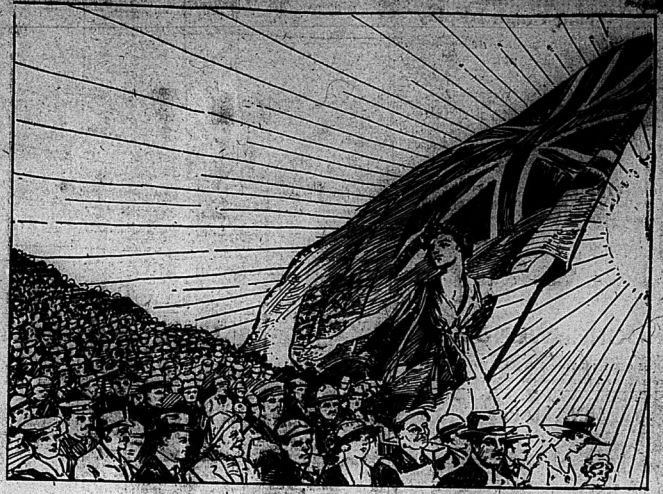
Some theories have been advanced lately which connect a man's success or failure in life with his complexion. Blondes are designed for certain kinds of work, and if they get in other kinds they will fail. Men of one complexion do the thinking for the world; the others get out and do the hustling. More interesting is the theory that the continent, south of Winnipeg, is no place for a real white man to live. An effort to prove that the ultra-violet rays of the solar ball of blonde races in all latitudes south of 46 is made by Dr. Alaric O'Malley, a widely-known Philadelphia medical man and scientist, and it is to be admitted that he presents some striking arguments before arriving at the conclusions that all the north European races will be extinct south of Winnipeg within a couple of centuries unless there is a constant stream of immigration from their native lands.

Starting from the accepted belief that the settled man was white and lived somewhere about the latitude of the Euphrates basin, Dr. O'Malley says, that the negro and the red blonde were dropped as an abstract ventured south or north. The farther south the early pioneers penetrated the darker hued became the skins of their descendants. Those that did not become dark perished because they could not survive the murderous ultra-violet rays. Those who went north became more blonded. This is a balance plan, for the blacker an object is the more quickly it radiates the heat it receives, and the whiter it is the more slowly it lets the heat escape. It is because of this that the northern animals are white, and exception is provided by the Esquimaux, who are dark, but this is in order that their skins may the better withstand the six months of blinding sunshine upon the snow fields and the ice. One might ask why polar bears are not dark for the same reason, but at any rate everybody knows that in the north part of the temperate zone and even in the frigid zones many animals become white in the winter that were brown in the summer.

It is not so much the matter of cold and warmth that affect the growth and development of mankind and mark inexorably his progression upon the planet as the sunshine. Not heat rays but light rays make the blonde and the brunette. For instance physicists working with extra-special rays, Rontgen rays, Bequerel rays, and rays from radium must protect themselves with coatings of rubber, lead, glass and other materials that prevent the rays reaching the skin. Otherwise the ultra-violet rays would change the protoplasm of cells so that they would react in suits which would disintegrate and kill them. In the United States more than twenty men have been killed by the action of X-rays before they discovered the necessity of protecting themselves from these unseen emanations. It is exactly the same with the sun's rays. The more direct and the stronger the rays are the more is the necessity for the human beings to be darkly pigmented. That is it is that the negroes in Africa can withstand rays that cut short the lives of white men, and the Scandinavians on the other hand is comfortable under conditions that dark-skinned people could not endure.

There is a general law that certain vegetables and animals can only thrive in certain latitudes. Mankind is not immune from this law, although men live at the equator and in the Arctic circle. Nature preserves the race that is best adapted to live in certain zones and kills all the others. Dr. O'Malley calculates that from the equator north or south to the thirtieth latitude is the proper zone for the black man; from the thirtieth to the thirty-fifth is the zone of the brown man like the Malayi; from the thirty-fifth to the forty-fifth is the zone of the brunette Mediterranean type, like the Italian and the Spaniard. From the forty-fifth to the fiftieth is a sort of No Man's Land in which ordinary people like most of us can get along very comfortably, but the zone of the European blonde is above the fiftieth parallel of latitude. Toronto, it might be observed, is slightly south of the forty-fourth parallel. If one looks at a map he may be astonished to find that as far as parallels of latitude is concerned, Toronto is equipped more like Spain than the British Isles.

The record of the American revolution gives concrete data to support the general theory. In that struggle it is said that half the soldiers of Washington were native of Ireland; one-quarter were native Americans; and the rest were English, Scotch, German and Dutch. But among the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Cincinnati and similar societies composed of descendants of Washington's army, there are now hardly any Irish names. The Irish, being a northern race, have almost disappeared after a century and a quarter. Recently Dr. O'Malley established some fifty Irish families in Northern Pennsylvania founded by sturdy Irish peasants who had emigrated after the famine of 1847. All the emigrants succeeded and were able to give their children a good start. In the first American generation there was an average of about five children to a family, or 10 in all. If these had continued to be as productive there would have been at least 1,000 descendants to-day. As a matter of fact there are fewer than 300 and nearly all are sterile, delicate children. In another couple of generations this stock will have become extinct, simply because the ancestors when they went to Pennsylvania went south a thousand miles into a zone intended by nature for the Italian.



Forward, CANADA!

THROUGH sacrifice, Canada has gained the respect and admiration of all people.

The years of War that deprived Canada of so many of her bravest sons, have given her greater self-reliance and wider vision. The world has come to expect great things of Canada.

Our army has set us the highest example — to persevere and to succeed.

Canada has the fundamentals of success — strong, virile men, resolute and devoted women, and unbounded resources. In the readjustment of Canada's affairs, as in the affairs of the world, money plays a leading part.

The transition from War to Peace is long, tedious, costly; it takes money, time and effort to beat swords into plowshares. Men cannot drop their arms and return immediately to their former occupations.

Money is required to discharge these obligations and to solve these problems.

Canada therefore is about to ask her citizens once more to lend their money to enable her to fulfil her obligations to her soldiers and to maintain the country in prosperity.

Canada can, if Canada will, march straight on to her glorious destiny.

ALABAMA CROWD SHOOTS NEGROES ACCUSED OF CRIME

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 2.—Two negroes, Miles Phifer and Robert Crokey, the latter a discharged soldier, were taken from county officials about five miles from Montgomery and shot to death by a mob of about 25 masked men. Both negroes were charged with having assaulted white women.

The two negroes were being taken to the State prison at Wetumpka for safe-keeping, when the mob held up the automobile carrying them.

The mob forced the county officials to surrender their arms and led the negroes into a wood and opened fire on them with shotguns and pistols.

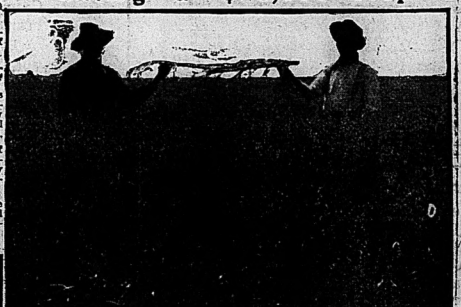
Saving a $16,000 Crop



Oats Grown With Irrigation Near Brooks, Alberta.

The story of the saving of a large oat and hay crop this year by J. E. Jett is typical of the stories that could be told by hundreds of other farmers in Southern Alberta, who are now harvesting big crops as a result of the timely application of water to their fertile land, though they may not have had to resort to the same means to get it there as Mr. Jett did.

Jett, with his brothers, ranches and farms, about five thousand acres of land in Southern Alberta, about twenty miles from Taber and four miles from Grassy Lake, near the Belly River.

On July 22 last, Mr. Jett saw a splendid field of oats, which had given fine promise early in the season, burned practically flat by the hot sun and lack of rain, while his hay fields were scorched to a crisp. The oat field of some 160 acres appeared to be in such bad shape that it wasn't worth while to turn the cattle into it.

Jett had been looking up irrigation, and he decided to take a chance. Accordingly, on July 23, he wired a local firm in Calgary, some 160 miles away, bought an irrigation pump of some 3,000 gallons per minute capacity, and the pipes and machinery to go with it, had the whole outfit shipped in an express car to the nearest railway station to his farm, hired special motor cars and trucks to transport it to the scene, and employed a crew of twenty men to plough irrigation ditches on his fields and set up the machinery. The pump was attached to a steam traction engine, and the pump set to work pumping water over the oats and hay fields from the Belly river.

To-day, Mr. Jett is harvesting the crop. He asserts that the oats will run close to 100 bushels to the acre on the hundred-acre oat field, and that at the rate his hay is running, he will harvest some 200 tons. With oats at from 84 cents to 90 cents a bushel, and hay at from $30 to $35 a ton, as against a total failure, it is easy to figure out Mr. Jett's gain.

The cost figures, of course, do not include estimates on maintenance and depreciation of the power plant, as Jett was too busy harvesting to figure these out. At the same time, however, the fact that the plant was set up in such a hurry made the installation cost nearly double, including express, motor car charges, and the wages of extra men on the crew. According to the local firm, the average cost of the outfit and its installation, under ordinary conditions, should not exceed $2,000. Mr. Jett's estimate of cost of $4,000 also included the work of irrigating the crop during the irrigation period.

Irrigation experts warn against the hasty installation of pumping machinery on account of its cost and expense of operation, unless the situation is first thoroughly examined by an irrigation engineer. But Jett says there is nothing to it, and that he will never take a chance again of going without water on the land as long as it can be pumped from the river.

This story reads like a romance, and the manner in which Mr. Jett set about to save his crop shows that he is a man of initiative. The results he accomplished, however, are only what thousands of other farmers, who are more fortunate than he, in having their land below the ditch, are obtaining. Needless to say Mr. Jett is now an enthusiastic convert to irrigation.

An Indian Rip Van Winkle

IN his "Book of the National Parks," Robert Sterling Yard recalls a delightful old Indian parallel to Irving's story of Rip van Winkle—or perhaps it is the original of Irving's Rip.

The hero of the Mount Rainier story was a wise and wily fisherman and hunter. He always had salmon, and berries when food became scarce and prices high. Gradually he amassed large savings in hiaqua, the little perforated shell which was the most valued form of wampum, the Indian's money. The richer he got the stronger his passion grew for hiaqua, and, when a spirit told him in a dream of vast hoards at the summit of Rainier, he determined to climb the mountain. The spirit was Tamanous, which is the vague Indian personification of the supernatural.

So he threaded the forests and climbed the mountain's glistening side. At the summit he looked over the rim into a large basin, in the bottom of which was a black lake surrounded by purple rock. At the lake's eastern end stood three monuments. The first was as tall as a man and had a head carved like a salmon; the second was the image of a camas-bulb; the two represented the great necessities of Indian life. The third was a stone elk's head with the antlers in velvet. At the foot of this monument he dug a hole.

Suddenly a noise behind him caused him to turn. An otter clambered over the edge of the lake and struck the snow with its tail. Eleven others followed. Each was twice as big as any otter he had ever seen; their chief was four times as big. The eleven sat themselves in a circle around him; the leader climbed upon the stone elk-head.

At first the treasure-seeker was abashed, but he had come to find hiaqua and he went on digging. At every thirtieth stroke the leader of the otters tapped the stone elk with his tail, and the eleven followers tapped the snow with their tails. Once they all gathered closer and whacked the digger good and hard with their tails, but, though astonished and badly bruised, he went on working. Presently he broke his elk-horn pick, but the biggest otter selected another in his teeth and handed it to him.

Finally his pick struck a flat rock with a hollow sound, and the otters all drew near and gazed into the hole, breathing excitedly. He lifted the rock, and under it found a cavity filled to the brim with pure-white hiaqua, every shell large, unbroken, and beautiful. All were hung neatly on strings.

Never was treasure-quest so successful! The otters, recognizing him as the favorite of Tamanous, retired to a distance and gazed upon him respectfully.

"But the miser," writes the narrator, "never dreamed of gratitude, never thought to hang a string from the buried treasure about the salmon and kamas Tamanous stone, and two strings around the elk's head; no, all must be his own, all he could carry now, and the rest for the future."

Greedily he loaded himself with the booty and laboriously climbed to the rim of the bowl prepared for the descent of the mountain. The otters, puffing in concert, plunged again into the lake, which at once disappeared under a black cloud.

Straightway a terrible storm arose through which the voice of Tamanous screamed taunting. Blackness closed around him. The din was horrible. Terrified, he threw back into the bowl behind him five strings of hiaqua to propitiate Tamanous, and there followed a momentary lull, during which he started homeward. But immediately the storm burst again with roarings like ten thousand bears.

Nothing could be done but to throw back more hiaqua. Following each sacrifice came another lull, followed in turn by more terrible outbreaks. And so, string by string, he parted with all his gains. Then he sank to the ground insensible.

When he awoke he lay under an arbutus tree in a meadow of camas. He was shockingly stiff and every movement pained him. But he managed to gather and smoke some dry arbutus leaves and eat a few camas bulbs. He was astonished to find his hair very long and matted, and himself bent and feeble. "Tamanous," he muttered. Nevertheless, he was calm and happy. Strangely he did not regret his lost strings of hiaqua. Fear was gone and his heart was filled with love.

Slowly and painfully he made his way home. Everything was strangely altered. Ancient trees grew where shrubs had grown four days before. Cedars under whose shade he used to sleep lay rotting on the ground. Where his lodge had stood now he saw a new and handsome lodge, and presently out of it came a very old, decrepit squaw, who, nevertheless, through her wrinkles, had a look that seemed strangely familiar to him. Her shoulders were hung thick with hiaqua strings. She bent over a pot of boiling salmon and crooned:

"My old man has gone, gone, gone,
My old man to Tacouma has gone.
To hunt the elk he went long ago.
When will he come down, down, down
To salmon pot and me?"

"He has come down," quavered the returned traveler, at last recognizing his wife.

He asked no questions. Charging all to the wrath of Tamanous, he accepted fate as he found it. After all, it was a happy fate enough in the end, for the old man became the Great Medicine-Man of his tribe, by whom he was greatly revered.

PRACTICAL MOVEMENT TO SECURE INDUSTRIES

Association Of Citizens Formed

BELLEVILLE INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION FORMED TO REACH OUT FOR NEW INDUSTRIES—MR. R. J. GRAHAM SUBSCRIBES $100,000 TO FUND TO ENCOURAGE INDUSTRIES—WILL GO FIFTY-FIFTY WITH CITIZENS—SEVERAL INDUSTRIES ALREADY SECURED.

It is a self-evident fact that the city of Belleville is blessed with outstanding advantages as a centre for manufacturing enterprises, such as very few communities can even approach. Shipping facilities by rail and by water are unsurpassed, with a sheltered harbor on the Bay of Quinte second to none in Canada, and three transcontinental railways passing through the city, with interswitching connections. All that Belleville has lacked apparently to become a large and important manufacturing centre has been the lack of energy to place its advantages in a forcible, attractive way before the captains of industry of the world. Signs multiply now that the city is awakening to its opportunities with the result that the attention of capitalists is being focussed upon this city with very favorable prospects for industrial developments.

Prominent in the movement to attract industries to Belleville has been the Graham Company, Limited, headed by Mr. R. J. Graham, who working in conjuction with the manager of the Graham business interests, Alderman Jamieson Bone, have been busy interesting outside capitalists in the industrial possibilities of Belleville. Already Mr. Graham has invested large sums of money in local industries and is prepared to do more along this line. Feeling that the time has arrived when citizens generally should take an active interest in the development of Belleville a larger project has been planned to enable all progressive citizens who so desire to help in bringing increased progress and prosperity to Belleville. An organization has been effected to bring industries to Belleville with a capital stock of $200,000, Mr. Graham is prepared to take fifty per cent. of this stock, the citizens at large to subscribe the other fifty per cent. Thus Mr. Graham will invest $100,000 and the citizens a like amount.

The organization which held its initial meeting yesterday will be known as the Belleville Industrial Corporation, Limited, and a charter has already been applied for. The provisional directors elected at the meeting of Belleville business men yesterday are:

Mr. R. J. Graham.
Col. L. W. Marsh.
Mr. C. M. Reid.
Mr. W. C. Springer.
Mr. W. B. Deacon.
Mr. H. W. Ackerman.

The price of shares has been fixed at ten dollars each so that every citizen may have an opportunity of becoming Belleville Boosters by taking one or more shares in the corporation. Anyone who would not invest at least ten dollars in increased prosperity for Belleville certainly has little faith in the future of the city or the nation.

The Belleville Industrial Corporation will get in touch with prospective industries, examine into their merits and requirements, as to site, additional capital required, and other details, and assist as required where such assistance is warranted by the facts.

The Graham Company, upon whose suggestion the Belleville Industrial Corporation was formed, have shown their faith in the enterprise by investing $100,000—a very commendable proceeding.

Factories Already Secured

An important industry has been secured for Belleville in the Elliot Woodworking Co., Limited, of Toronto, which will locate here at an early date. Industrial Commissioner White got in touch with the company who desire to enlarge their plant and business and can not do so where they are. To secure the plant for Belleville the Graham Co. made a large investment in the business, as also did Mr. H. W. Ackerman. It is expected that this company will be in operation here in a few weeks. The Elliott Woodworking Co. has been for successful operation since 1910, are capitalized at $500,000, the head of the company being Mr. W. H. Elliott. This industry will start operations here with twenty or more employees, increasing the staff to fifty within two months.

Judge Jones Co.

Another company which will come to Belleville as the result of financial interest taken by the Graham Company, is the Judge Jones Co., limited, of Montreal, an old, well-established and successful company which will locate here in a building provided by the Graham Company near the Station. They will manufacture grain and cereals and will begin with from fifteen to twenty employees.

Pancake Flour

Eckenburg Company, Limited, will begin operations in Belleville shortly in the manufacture of their famous breakfast table specialties. This company spend $100,000 a year advertising their products in the United States and Canada, and have been highly successful. Factory space has been provided for them in the Graham building, Front and Pinnacle streets.

High Pressure Valves

Arrangements have been practically concluded to bring the high pressure valve industry, discussed at the meeting yesterday, to Belleville, the Graham Company guaranteeing a considerable investment of stock locally. This valve is a new invention for trains and other uses and is very highly spoken of.

English Company Coming

A large English company which is looking for a large tract of land, twenty-five acres or more, have been made acquainted with the advantages of Belleville and will locate here if suitable arrangements can be made.

Housing the Sticker

Altogether the prospect for industries for Belleville is exceedingly bright with several good promising concerns already secured. The big question now is that of housing. Where are the workmen going to find houses to live in. It is up to the City Council and the Civic Housing Committee to get busy at once and see that Belleville's prosperity is not interfered with by lack of houses which might cause some good industry to go elsewhere.

Gov't Sustained On Party Vote

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—The Government was sustained by a straight party vote of 56 to 79 early this morning, when the Opposition Leader, D. D. McKenzie's motion for an inquiry into the soldiers' votes charges was defeated by that vote. Leader McKenzie produced the alleged telegram from Mr. Meighen to Premier Borden for soldier votes for Manitoba and Mr. Meighen pronounced it a forgery. Many speeches followed in the chamber before it was adjourned.

Late Telegraph Briefs

Lloyd George has declined to call parliament until the original date set of October 22nd.

President Wilson is a very sick man and his condition is serious was the statement Dr. Grayson, his physician made last night.

Soldiers during a labor demonstration at Berlin, Germany, shot and killed one civilian, and wounded six others.

United States Senate rejected by good majority, 36 amendments to the peace treaty, leaving only eleven to be considered.

The official conference which it was hoped would be a settlement of the railway strike, has broken down as the Government will not negotiate until the men get back to work. It is expected that another conference will be held today. The increase in the number of trains yesterday were marked.

New York Liquor Dealers Active

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—New York liquor dealers have been informed, it was said, that President Wilson soon would proclaim demobilization complete and prohibition as a war time measure no longer necessary.

Acting on this advice, distillers, wholesalers, brokers and cafes are preparing for an immense business within the next seven days. Huge quantities of whiskey are arriving daily at the bonded warehouses here from the distilleries in Kentucky, advance orders are being placed with wholesalers by hundreds, and bartenders and waiters have been called back to their posts in anticipation of a rich harvest before January 16, when the constitutional prohibition amendment goes into effect.

Bogus Certificates Sold

Charles Leopold, chairman of the directors of the Family Liquor Dealers' Association, declared today that numerous irregularities have arisen out of the rush of dealers and individuals to obtain stocks of liquor. He explained that, in accordance with the recent ruling of the Attorney-General, certificates for material under bond in warehouses could be sold in advance and stock claimed as soon as the war time measure was rescinded. Hundreds of fictitious certificates, he asserted, have been old and placed in circulation, calling for stocks that do not exist.

At the office of the Distillers' Securities Corporation, it was said that trainload after trainload of whiskey has been coming from Kentucky for the last two weeks. An official declared that members of brokers are placing large orders for home use.

The situation in the beer brewing industry, saloon-keepers say, will remain the same. The breweries, they asserted, have decided to stick to the 2.75 per cent product. Brewers are making more money on the 2.75 product than they could on the better beer.

Three Balloons Landed In Ontario

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 3.—Five of the balloons which left here at 6 p.m. Wednesday in the International Long Distance Race, are now reported as landed. Two near Perry Sound one at Athens, Ont., one at Cardinal, Ont., and another at Sherbrooke, Que.

GIRL KILLED AT BLENHEIM

BLENHEIM, Ont., Oct. 2.—While Miss Leta Burk, youngest daughter of Sidney Burk, and Harry Havens were returning from Gallie, where they had been spending the evening with Miss Burk's sister, the car got out of control and overturned in the ditch. Miss Burk being pinned beneath it, was instantly killed. Mr. Havens escaped with minor injuries.

Cincinnati Reds Won Second Game

CINCINNATI, Oct. 2.—It is not too much to say that the Cincinnati Reds walked away with the second game of the World Series this afternoon, when they beat the Chicago White Sox 2 to 1. That's just what they did—walked away with it. The Redlegs were outhit and outfielded, but they won. And when they did so they established an advantage over the Sox that will be hard to overcome in a nine-game series.

Not Points, but Performance.

The Cincinnatians got only four hits as against ten of the American Leaguers, made three errors as against one, and did not display the all-around class of the losers. They have now disposed of Cicotte and Williams, the best of Gleason's twirlers.

The Reds won because Williams was wild and because they took advantage of his wildness. All of the four runs scored by the National Leaguers were the result of bases on balls, for the Morans "walked away" with the game.

Gruesome Tale Of Brutal Murder

KITCHENER, Oct. 3.—One of the most gruesome tales ever told in the witness stand of the Court House in this city was related by Sloyo Boyett, one of the prisoners charged with the murder of John Sorokaty, a Russian, who was called by Crown Prosecutor Makins to give evidence in the charge of murder being heard by Hon. Justice Masten. Boyett gave his evidence after his counsel, M. A. Secord, K.C., received from the court the assurance that the evidence would only be used against him when his case is being heard. Petcoff in the dock, sitting directly in the companion told his story of the murder of Sorokaty in Sheldon's bush, near Galt, on the after noon of May 25.

The Crown submitted evidence during the early part of the day to show that Sorokaty left Boyett in company with the murdered man Sorokaty, had left Stratford on the afternoon of Saturday, May 24, and came to Kitchener. Boyett and Sorokaty spending two hours later Petcoff and Boyett returned, according to the evidence of witness, to the Sorokaty home.

TURNS CROWN WITNESS

The calling of Sloyo Boyett to give evidence for the Crown was a surprise to the public generally, but the court room. For over two hours he told of the manner in which Sorokaty met his death. Boyett stated that Petcoff and Sorokaty left the house, there was gold to be found in the gravel pit of this bush, and when they reached the pit Petcoff struck Sorokaty on the head with a shovel, he broke, and appeared to contain minerals. Petcoff and Sorokaty entered into an argument, and Petcoff challenged to have said to Sorokaty that as he was a Bolsherist he was not interested in gold. According to Boyett, he was a pair quarrelled and he stepped in between them and suggested that they should go home. Petcoff refused, Sorokaty turned and walked a few steps when he saw Sorokaty fall to the ground together with a large stone which had been thrown by Petcoff. Boyett stated that he ran away a short distance and then returned and found Petcoff covering the body with stones. Boyett said he asked Petcoff why he had killed Sorokaty, and Petcoff replied "I did not intend to kill him, but it's too late now."

EMPTIED THE POCKETS

On subsequent visits, he said they took everything out of the pockets of the dead man and the pair burned the clothes, papers and gravel. They returned to the Western Hotel in Galt where Petcoff took the deceased's passbook out of the suit case belonging to Sorokaty and endeavored to hire a horse and buggy to get away. Petcoff its was stated by Boyett, failed to appear and Boyett and Petcoff then took the electric car to Kitchener, where he spent the night, went to work next morning and then went to Brantford, where he told what had happened to a Bulgarian missionary, Rev. R. Katanoff and on the suggestion of the latter they went to Galt and informed Chief Gorman, the trio going to the gravel pit where they found the remains. The witness was cross-examined by the counsel for Petcoff at the evening session of the court.

SHOPMEN'S AGREEMENT IS EFFECTIVE OCT. 20

Washington, Oct. 2.—The national agreement on working conditions for railway shopmen, affecting 400,000 employes, for six hundred thousand men as proposed in President Wilson's reply to the strikers, will be effective and wages will become effective October 20 and remain in force until the end of Government control of the roads.

It was learned that the agreement had been signed by the railroad administration and the international unions affiliated with the railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor. It now is in the hands of the printer.

Bright Prospects For New Industries In Belleville

GRAHAM COMPANY OFFERS TO INVEST $100,000 IN $200,000 FUND TO ENCOURAGE INDUSTRIES TO LOCATE IN BELLEVILLE, CITIZENS TO INVEST $100,000—LEADING CITIZENS DISCUSS INDUSTRIAL POSSIBILITIES.

A public meeting of citizens for the purpose of discussing the important question of largering industries to the city, and assisting same if necessary, was held in the Council chamber yesterday afternoon. It was a most representative gathering of business men, manufacturers, etc.

Mr. R. J. Graham was selected to preside over the meeting and stated that Ald. Bone had of late been busy endeavoring to secure industries for the city. There seems to be at present a feeling that industries could be secured by some assistance and it was up to the citizens to get busy in the matter.

Ald. Bone stated that Mr. Graham had already put $50,000 into two progressive new industries and there was needed more money for some other proposed industries. The Graham Company were prepared to put $100,000 in an industrial proposition if the citizens would invest another $100,000.

Mr. Graham said that what Ald. Bone had said met with his approval. The Graham Company was prepared to put $100,000 in a citizens' company if the citizens were prepared to put up another $100,000. This money could be judiciously expended in assisting new industries. Mr. Denyes, a native of Hastings County, had a proposition for a factory here to manufacture a valve used for motor tires.

The meeting was then addressed by Mr. L. H. Denyes, who stated that his valve in question was not altogether a new article. An attempt was made to get this concern to locate in Belleville some time ago, but the Board of Directors thought otherwise and the factory went elsewhere. Automatic machines for the making of the valves are at present being set up in Toronto. Mr. Denyes had, however, the permission of the Board of Directors to come to Belleville and lay a proposition before the citizens. The company has been promised a number of the business of Canada, which means a business of about three million dollars a year. The valve can be manufactured at from 8c. to 11c. and they sell for about 35c. The high pressure valve manufactured today are subject to leakage. The best of the high pressure valves formerly came from Germany. If the industry came to Belleville it would mean the employment of a number of hands. At least one-third of the business could be secured. The percentage on high-pressure valves is very satisfactory.

Mr. Jenks, of St. Catharines, being called upon, stated that he had examined the tire valve referred to by Mr. Denyes and it was most satisfactory. The tire companies want a guarantee that they could be supplied by the manufacturers. The making of the valve is simple. Some half million valves would have to be made before going on the market and this would mean the laying out of a considerable sum of money. He anticipated a large demand for the valve.

Mr. Graham—There are advantages in Belleville which are not available in other large cities.

Mr. A. F. While stated that he had examined the valve and considered it a much superior to those in present use. It was about a perfect valve.

In answer to an enquiry Mr. Denyes said that some $200,000 or $300,000 would be necessary. The capital was estimated on what the tire companies had stated.

Mr. Graham—It is necessary to have a strong company to carry on the business. Some $100,000 has been subscribed. He was willing to subscribe $25,000 of stock and also willing to assist Belleville by aiding in securing industries.

Mr. Ackerman—Money from Belleville is going to industries outside the city. He thought we should assist in securing industries for the city. All citizens should take an interest in this matter for the benefit of the city.

Acting Mayor Geniff, Jnr., was prepared to give his time and what means he could spare for the securing of industries for the city. The Council was not asleep, but are awake and endeavoring to get new industries here. Mr. Graham had shown he was interested in Belleville by giving of his means.

Mr. R. Tannahill—It we desire to get industries we must be prepared to do what we can to encourage them.

Mr. J. Elliott congratulated Ald. Bone for the active part he had taken in trying to secure industries for the city and also Mr. Graham for his generous support. Mr. Elliott was prepared to put $1,000 in a scheme to raise a sum to assist in securing new industries.

Mr. Denyes—Our company would have the exclusive rights for Canada.

After some further informal discussion it was decided to form a committee of seven to have the matter of industries in charge and those named were: Messrs. R. J. Graham, H. W. Ackerman, W. B. Deacon, A. F. White, C. M. Reid, C. W. Springer and Col. L. W. Marsh.

A stock list was opened and a few present endorsed the proposition by placing their names on the list and the amount they were willing to subscribe to the proposed Belleville Industrial Company.

The meeting then adjourned.

Competent To Manage Own Affairs

Mr. Justice Fogie of Toronto gave judgment on an application which was made by Mr. Justice Hodgins, K.C., for an order declaring Andrew Howell, Sr., incompetent to manage his affairs. The application was made on behalf of Tyendinaga in the County of Hastings and the applicant has been away from the home of Andrew Howell Sr. for many years. The Court directed that Andrew Howell Sr. submit himself at Toronto and be examined by Clarke and this was done and Dr. Clarke's report was not the most favourable one, but after perusing all the material submitted, the Court gave the following judgment.

"I am of the opinion that any distinctive feature of the routine of Andrew Howell, Senior's life or habits after a nearly half a century of life with a faithful and devoted wife would at his age be highly detrimental. On the argument I was inclined to hold having had the advantage of the opinion of Dr. C. K. Clarke, who had examined Howell, Sr., was incompetent but on a careful perusal of all the material I find myself unable to say beyond reasonable doubt that this is so. Even on practising physician certify to his competency—three of the incompetency of Andrew Howell Sr. The applicant has disclosed no merits either in his material or upon the argument—and no particular stress on the property that the person of the alleged incompetent. I see no reason why this petition is needed in order to ascertain the rights of the parties interested in Andrew Howell's estate. Motion dismissed with costs. Andrew Howell, Sr, to pay the fee of Dr. C. K. Clarke fixed at $25 and to be permitted to take the same against the applicant.

President Wilson's Condition Serious

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Although no official statement was made by Dr. Grayson, it was understood at the White House today that there was little if any change in President Wilson's condition early this morning.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—Dr. Francis Decrum of this city, who accompanied President Wilson as a consulting physician said to-day that the president's condition is grave but that he is of a cheerful frame of mind. Mr. Wilson, according to Dr. Decrum realizes that he is a very sick man and is making an effort to cease fighting, under restraint of his compeers who to relinquish temporarily the helm of administration. He is a hard man to handle from the view point of the doctor.

NO IMPROVEMENT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—It was officially reported this afternoon that there was no improvement in President Wilson's condition. The President has no temperature and his heart action is good.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

DUNDAS LIBERAL HAS CHILLS

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 2.—It is reported that F. A. Campbell, nominated as the Liberal candidate for Dundas at the convention held at Winchester Springs a few days ago, has decided to withdraw. The United farmers are understood to be considering the placing of a candidate in the field.

Conservative Farmer Candidates

It may sound a bit ambiguous to say that even if the U. F. O. movement fails to accomplish its purpose in the coming general election, it will have succeeded. The fact remains, however, that the farmers are going to win out, no matter how the fortunes of political warfare turn. A survey of the nomination lists to date supplies the explanation. Although scarcely more than one-half of the Conservative and Liberal candidates are in the field, there are already 34 farmers carrying the standards of the two old parties, and this number will be increased to at least 50, and, possibly more, before nomination day. In the Conservative ranks alone there are 23 farmer nominees, and all but three or four of them are running in ridings that elected Conservatives to the last Legislature. Organizers for the Government forces estimate an addition of from 10 to 15 to this total, and reports to headquarters indicate that behind Sir William Hearst in the next Legislature there will be a solid block of from 35 to 39 farmers. The drift of affairs is daily justifying the contention of sober-thinking farmers that they can secure far better results by staying within the party ranks and using their influence to have farmer candidates nominated, than by turning aside in answer to the call of third-party advocates. The Liberals, despite their claim that the Liberal platform is closely akin to that of the U.F.O., have not been overly keen to give nominations to farmers. Of those nominated to date twelve are classified as farmers, and only three of these are running in ridings formerly held by the Liberals. The other farmers will be welcomed in the House—if they can take their seats away from the Conservatives.—Mail and Empire.

Use Standard Time For Polling

Because of the increase in the number of voters in this election the number of polling booths has been practically doubled. In these consequently it will require approximately 9,500 ballot boxes and many new receptacles will be used for the first time on October 20.

It is interesting to know that the polling booths will be opened and closed on standard time.

In Toronto the polling booths will open at 9 a.m. and close at 5 p.m. standard time, which will be 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. daylight-saving time. The polling booths in East and West York will also open at 9 a.m. standard time and close at 5 p.m. Elsewhere in the Province the opening hour is 9 a.m. and closing hour 5 p.m.

Generally speaking, wherever there are more than 250 voters on the list is one polling subdivision two booths are being opened.

Representatives to appointed shall be treated as candidates, the order in Council provides, and entitled to the rights and privileges and obligations of such representatives.

A large number of the supporters of Mr. W. H. Ireland in this county met at the Conservative Club Rooms last evening to complete the work of organization. All the various Wards of the city were well represented.

Mr. Clarence Mallory, the nominee of the U. F. O. movement for Prince Edward County, has resigned his candidature, owing to the fact that he is not eligible to qualify as he was one of the enumerators at the recent enumeration of voters for the referendum and Provincial election.

At Picton tomorrow the Conservatives of Prince Edward County will meet in convention for the purpose of nominating a candidate at the approaching election.

Scrutineers For Referendum Vote

An order in Council has been passed relating to the position of scrutineers in connection with the referendum vote. The Personal Liberty League is known as the affirmative side, and the Ontario Referendum Committee as the negative side. Both affirmative and negative sides, it is provided, or chief scrutineer, for each electoral district, who must be a qualified voter. As soon as these officials are designated they must file their credentials with the returning officer for the district.

Each of these representatives, or chief scrutineers, is entitled to appoint not more than two agents to represent him at each polling place, and each of these agents must file credentials with the deputy returning officer. In the absence of such duly appointed agents the deputy may take voters at each poll from either side may undertake to act as scrutineers and hand their names to the deputy returning officer.

First Nights At "The Movies"

Charming Vivian Martin and Madge Kennedy in Features at Local Playhouses—Clever Vaudeville at Griffin's.

Few of her pictures have afforded Vivian Martin the dainty and universally popular little star, with such an opportunity for dramatic depth and genuine acting as "Louisiana," which was shown before a good sized audience at Griffin's last night. The photoplay is a picturisation of Frances Modgson Burnett's novel of the same name. "Louisiana" does not concern the locale of the story, but is the name of the heroine around whom the plot revolves. The story starts in the mountains of South Carolina where Louisiana Rogers, who is just reaching maturity lives with her father, Lem Rogers, a crude mountaineer. His decision to send her to Oakvale Springs, a popular resort that she may see more of the world, is strenuously objected to by Cass Floyd, a young suitor who lives nearby in the mountains. Nevertheless, Louisiana goes and in the world of men and money, she meets Laurence Feral, a young playwright, and a love romance between the two is soon budding. Insanely jealous Cass goes to the Springs to keep an eye on Louisiana and angrily sees the turn of events. In a fit of rage he shoots at and severely wounds Laurence. This results in many complications which makes the story one of the most romantic in which the star has yet appeared.

Besides the above offering, a splendid educational reel "Evolution of the Bottle," was being shown on the same program along with Gaumont News showing the funeral of Nurse Edith Cavell and other topics of interest. A Lyons-Moran comedy, "Kitchen Police" and "Just a Slip," a refined Christie comedy.

A splendid vaudeville program is holding the boards at the popular playhouse this week and, in Valle, Italian wizard on the accordion, the DuBarrys harmony singing and piano, one of the members of this specialty being a very clever female impersonator, easily the best of impersonators who has appeared on a local stage, this specialty is notable for its stunning costumes and Lew Lewis, late member of Nell O'Brien's minstrels who extolls some amusing monologus and songs. The entire program is being repeated again to-night and Saturday, matinee and night.

Replete with novel touches, Madge Kennedy's new picture, "A Daughter of Mine," which was presented at the Palace yesterday serves to delight as well as thrill. Not alone, is is a capital story, played by an uncommonly interesting cast, but it is apparent that director and cameraman have united to make it out of the ordinary. A thrilling and interesting chapter of "The Lure of the Circus," serial and Canadian News completes a most entertaining program.

Press Comments on Belleville Victory

Peterboro' Review

The Belleville-Osler game Wednesday afternoon in the semi-finals of the O.A.B.A. championship series resulted in a win for Belleville by the score of 2 to 1. If asked the reason of the Toronto defeat there is but one answer and that is Fred Goyer. The long southpaw from the Bay of Quinte was at his best and had the Toronto sluggers at his mercy. He struck out seventeen, making a total of thirty-five in the last two games played against the Osler team. His speed, remarkable control, and tricky curve are almost uncopasable and lead us to believe he is the best amateur pitcher seen here in a great many years.

Interesting Game

It was a hard fought, interesting game from start to finish with both teams at full strength and keyed to the highest pitche of enthusiasm over the game. Spring pitched a wonderful game for the losers, but the breaks were against him and his team found it impossible to clean enough runs across the plate to win,

Only One Umpire

Manager Pegg of the Belleville squad, protested against having only one umpire and stated if it were not for the three or four hundred who had come from Belleville to see the game, he would refuse to play. But the game was played and the winning run, as it happened was scored by a runner who had been favored by a doubtful decision at second base. Manager Pegg can congratulate himself upon his loyalty to his home town fans for, perhaps, if it had not have been for Umpire Burke's decision his team would not now be matched to meet Hamilton in the finals.

Toronto Telegram

Before one of the largest crowds ever assembled in Peterboro to see an amateur ball game, Belleville defeated Osler by the score of 2 to 1, thereby earning the right to meet Harvesters of Hamilton in the final game for the Ontario amateur baseball title. Both pitchers were in rare form, Goyer having a shade on Spring, he having 17 strikeouts to Spring's 11. Both allowed five hits, but Spring spoiled his effectiveness by issuing five walks and having two wild heaves, while Goyer allowed but three walks. Oslers lost many chances to score up to the fourth inning, after which Goyer allowed but one hit, a single by Nugent, a pinch-hitter, in the ninth inning. This, with a walk, put Osler in a scoring position, with men on second and third, and two out, but Goyer rose to the occasion and struck Potts out, making the third out, thereby eliminating Toronto's last contestant for the Ontario championship.

Very Little to Choose

Comparing the clubs on the day's play, there is not much to choose between them outside of the catcher. This position has been one of Osler's drawbacks through the series, and Buchanan was brought in from the outfield to hold down this job. Considering the importance of the game he did well, turning back several would-be base-stealers. On the other hand, Belleville have in Mills one of the best catchers seen in amateur ball. He refused to give Osler any thought of stealing, and kept them glued to the bags, Peterboro' fans rate him with Hennessey, last year's champions' crack receiver, and this is saying a lot, as the "Duke" has a great crowd of supporters in Peterboro, where he is claimed to be one of the best.

By winning this game Belleville have dope a lot for baseball in outside towns, and next year will see a great revival of amateur clubs throughout Ontario. Large delegations from Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay, Oshawa, Toronto and other towns, along with four hundred from Belleville, journeyed to the game and were all loud in their praises of amateur ball and the efforts of the A. B. A. A. to put the game on a sound basis. Altogether the game has benefited greatly, and Toronto clubs will in future find themselves up against stiffer opposition than ever before, and they will find themselves hard pressed to bring back the trophy which Hillcrests captured last year, the first of its existence.

Port Hope Guide

Well it did our heart good Wednesday to see the Belleville team put out a victory against the Osiers of Toronto, in one of the hardest fought battles ever staged on the Peterboro grounds. Both teams had lost on the home grounds and the third and deciding one was ordered for Peterboro. The day was ideal and the crowd large and noisy. Every device for making a noise had been commandeered by the Belleville rooters and long before you reached the grounds you could hear all manner of noises and commotion. And they kept it up until the last Osler man had fallen a victim to Freddie Goyer's benders. The score was 2 to 1 and Belleville's victory places Belleville in the finals with Hamilton for the Provincial championship. That the Goyer was the whole works for the Belleville team again, striking out seventeen of the Oslers and at different times the whole side was retired via the strik out route. He allowed only four hits and worked out of some tight pinches. It is indeed gratifying to the officials that the Central league in its initial year has made such a wonderful showing. Toronto and the western towns thought it would be a real walk over in Eastern Ontario, but they have all found the Belleville team real contenders. And let it be distinctly understood that the Belleville team had nothing on the other teams of the Central League and even Cobourg at the bottom of the heap made the Belleville team go/fourteen innings before a winner was decided. It speaks well for the brand of ball played in the Central League and sporting writers in Toronto would do well to acknowledge that all the good ball players do not reside in Toronto and Hamilton.

We extend heartiest congratulations to the Belleville boys and they pave the best wishes of every ball fan in the Central League in their final games.

In the early stages of Wednesday's game at Peterboro some of those smart Toronto rooters, adorned with a Charlie Chaplin moustache, asked the Belleville crowd who would look after the stores in the village while the crowd was away; and if arrangements had been made with Hannah to do the minding, but when Freddie Goyer made the bunch of Oslers fan the wind the Toronto crowd became as dumb as oysters.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

"Wherever have you been, Cynthia? We thought you were lost," he heard Mrs. Walford say, tiherdrinkly, and the next moment the party was united. "It's where have you been, mamma, isn't it?"

"Well, I like that! We didn't stop a minute; I made certain you saw us get up. We've been hunting for you everywhere, Mr. Turquand and I have been out here ever so long, haven't we, Mr. Turquand? Looking at the moon, too, if you want to know, and—hee, hee, hee!—talking sentiment."

Turquand who was staring at Kent an eyelid to droop for an instant at the conclusion and the latter stroked his moustache and smiled.

"Such a time we've been having, sil by ourselves!" she persisted uproariously. "Mr. Kent, are you shocked? Oh, I've shocked Mr. Kent! He'll always remember it—I can see it in his face."

"I shall always remember you, Mrs. Walford," he said, trying to make the enforced fatuity sound graceful.

"We were left by ourselves, and we had to get on as we could," she cried. "Hadn't we, Mr. Turquand? I say we had to amuse ourselves as we could, Now Cynthia's glowering at me. Oh —hee, hee, hee!— you two young people are too respectable for us. We don't ask any questions, but—but I dare say Mr. Turquand and I aren't the only ones—hee, hee, hee!—who have been "looking at the moon."

"Shall we find chairs again?" said Kent quickly, perceiving the frown that darkened the girl's brow. "It's rather awkward spot to stand still, isn't it?"

She agreed that it was and a waiter brought them ices, and Mrs. Walford sat giddily over a liquor. They remained at the table until the ladies asserted it was time to return to their hotel. During from thea as it appeared the two men turned away together. Both felt in their pockets, filled their cigars and, smoking silently, drifted through the rugged little streets, back to the cafe where they had had their conversation after dinner.

"Thank you for a very pleasant evening," said Turquand, breaking a long pause.

It was only criticism he permitted himself and Kent did not care to inquire if it was to be regarded as ironical.

CHAPTER III

After his friend's departure, the mother and daughter became the priot found which the author's movements revolved. Primarily his own companionship and the novelty of Dieppe had been enough; but now he found it dreary to roam about the harbor, or sit sipping masagrins, alone. Regleving the weeks before Turquand joined him, he discovered what he had done with himself in various hours of the day, and solitude hung so unfamiliarly on his hands that Miss Walford's society was indispensible.

Soon after this matutinal chocolate, he accompanied the ladies to the Casino, and spent the morning beside them under the awning. Mrs. Walford did not bathe—while people could have comfortable baths in the vicinity of their toilet-tables, she considered the recourse to tents and the sea, making an unnecessary confidence—and she disliked Cynthia to do so, "with a lot of Frenchmen in the water.' Whether it was their sex or only their nationality, that was the objection was not clear. She usually destroyed a novel while Mr. Kent and her daughter conversed. Considering the speed with which she read it, indeed, it was contant food for astonishment to him that she could contrive to do a book so much damage. In the evening she strolled out again, and but for the afternoon he would have had small cause for complaint. Even this gained a spice of excitement however from the fact that it was uncertain how long Miss Walford's siesta would last, and there was always the chance, as he lounged about the hotel, smoking to support the tedium, that a door would open and cause heart-leaps.

Mrs. Walford declared that the visit to Aryues would be "very jolly" and the excursion was made about a week later. Kent found the girl's conception, in his enthusiasm as pretty as he had promised himself it would be and when they had escaped from th information of the garden, anwandered where they chose to go, the chaperon was the only blot upon perfection.

Perhaps she realized the influence of the scenic though her choice of adjectives was not happy, for the explorations fatigued her before long, and, since the others were so indefatigable, they might continue them while she sat down.

LABOR LEADER LEAVES $250,000 ESTATE

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Oct. 2—John Mitchell, former President of the United Mine Workers of America left an estate of $250,000, mostly in stocks and bonds, according to a petition for letters of administration filed in the Surrogate Court of Westchester county Tuesday.

In a will written in his own hand shortly before his death, but believed to be invalid because it lacked witnesses, the Labor leader bequeathed all but $10,000 of his estate to his wife and children.

The $10,000 was to be divided among other relatives and close friends.

EMBARRASSMENT, THE RESULT OF COUGH

You've seen it often—just as the singer, preacher or great actor reaches the climax and the audience is keyed up to the highest pitch of anticipation, there comes that uncontrollable cough or sneeze from somewhere in the audience. How embarrassing for the victim who knows that the pleasure of many has been spoiled.

You can avoid being in a similar position by always carrying a box of Dominion C. B. Q. Tablets (the 25c red box). One or two doses will stop a cold before it gets seated, or breaks up a hard cold in short order. Get a box to-day. National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited.

To Relieve Catarrh Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of some one who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor, sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial:

AN INSULT TO CONSERVATIVES.

Thousands of Conservatives, including a number of candidates, openly disown Sir William Hearst's leadership because he is a prohibitionist," says the Toronto Globe, which thus blatantly insults thousands of the men and women electors of this province in an attempt to make political capital. Thousands of Conservatives are no different from thousands of Liberals on the temperance question, but all right thinking Conservatives and Liberals respect a man like Sir William Hearst, who has the courage of his convictions and as leader of a great party does not hesitate to say publicly what he thinks will be the greatest good for the greatest number.

Many may differ with Sir William Hearst upon the best means as to handling the liquor question, but no right-thinking citizen can do anything else than respect his manly straightforwardness or fail to realize that they can have implicit confidence that he will carry out the expressed will of the people to the letter.

The Globe insinuates that thousands of Conservatives are so fond of their liquor that they are eager to knife Sir William Hearst and wreck their party out of revenge, choosing rather the insinuations of a Dewart to the straightforwardness of a Hearst. Could there be anything more insulting to thousands of Conservatives who, whatever their personal inclinations may be, are large enough to sink self for the general good of the province as a whole.

It is not true that the Conservatives, as the Globe insinuates, are fonder of the social glass than the Liberals. When have politics influenced appetites. Outside of party inclination there is absolutely no difference between Grit and Tory.

The Globe might as well say out and out that it thinks the Conservatives are a party of boozers as to insinuate that they are so blinded by hate of a prohibitionist leader that they will drive him out of public life with their ballots.

This, then, is the Globe which professes to believe that the temperance question is the greatest issue of the day, in one column, and in the next urges electors to vote for Dewart candidates, the Hartley Dewart charged with being the choice of the liquor interests, the rising hope of the commercialized intoxicating liquor trade by the Christian Guardian, the Hon. N. W. Rowell, and echoed by the Globe itself.

Was there ever greater inconsistency in a public journal which professes to direct public opinion along moral and political lines from the standpoint of the highest of ideals?

As prophet and preacher the Globe sounds like a church organ, when there is no election in sight, but when the campaign hands begin this Holy Willy of journalism begins to squirm and wobble until it is all tangled up in its own high-sounding platitudes. It may be confidently anticipated that before polling day the Globe will be swinging blithely along arm-in-arm with Hartley the Dewart and his pals, joining in the good old song "How Dry We Are," with a chaser of "We Won't Go Home Till Morning," and "We're the Boys to Take the Hearst Out of Thirst."

The Globe has insinuated from the beginning that those financially interested in the unrestricted sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage will knife Sir William Hearst and his candidates at the polls in an effort to place in the Premiership of Ontario Hartley Dewart, accused by the Christian Guardian, Hon. N. W. Rowell, and others as being the rising hope of the liquor interests. But these men are neither Grit nor Tory, and have never been anything else than free-lances in politics, voting for their business interests above everything else. These are not, then, the thousands of Conservatives who, according to the Globe, are seeking to knife Sir William Hearst and his candidates at the polls.

The Globe has practically charged that there is an alliance between the liquor interests and the Liberal leader and yet it is doing its utmost to place Dewart in power, although it has not the courage to come out openly and endorse him as a leader worthy of confidence and support. Its news articles and headings and its camouflaged editorials and insults to Conservatives can have but one object and that to induce electors to vote for Dewart and Dewart candidates.

Sir James Whitney was bold enough to be honest.

Sir William Hearst is bold enough to be honest.

The Toronto Globe is bold enough to be dishonest with its readers in conducting a two-faced campaign.

CRISP COMMENT

Will you have your O. T. A. with or without amendment?

× × ×

While the Globe says it approves of the Hearst in thirst it is very evident it prefers Dewart's Special.

× × ×

If you fail to answer all four questions on the prohibition ballot you may as well not answer any. There must be four crosses on each ballot paper or it will be declared spoiled.

× × ×

Dr. Cody's decision to cut down homework will be appreciated by the boys and girls, who will no doubt urge Dad to vote for the Hearst candidate and thus help keep Ontario's progressive Minister of Education in his position as director of the educational policy of this province.

× × ×

Hartley Dewart, Liberal Leader, by his own confession is in favor of the independence of Canada. By his own written and approved biographical sketch in "Notable Men and Women of the Time," (last edition, 1912) he stands for the separation of Canada from the Mother Country. Can any elector who loves this glorious Empire and all that it stands for, past, present and future, consistently vote for Hartley Dewart or any of his candidates?

× × ×

Can any Canadian soldier or dependent vote for Hartley Dewart or any of his candidates? Don't forget that Dewart was one of the few public men of Canada who endorsed the Made-in-Quebec propaganda against sending speedy reinforcements to our hard-pressed soldiers overseas by the conscription route. Hartley Dewart travelled all over Canada denouncing conscription on many platforms while the fate of Canada and the world hung in the balance. A vote for Billy Ireland will be a vote against Hartley Dewart and all the rest of the Little Canadians who preferred partyism to patriotism in the most critical hour of the nation's history.

Were killed in death! So a recent Canadian investigation showed. These were not cases of infection following consumption—of typhoid! They were cases where a person had sustained some slight injury—a cut, a burn, a wire-prick—and where the wound, being thought not serious enough for careful treatment, had been neglected. Blood-poisoning and death resulted.

When you or your children sustain any injury, ensure against infection by applying Zam-Buk. This balm soothes the pain, stops bleeding, and by destroying all germs prevents blood-poisoning, etc. Hence time need be lost from work or pleasure by those who use Zam-Buk. All dealers, 50c. box.

To Be Comptroller Of Grand Trunk Ry.

J. M. Rosevear Appointed To Important Post—J. B. McLaren Named General Auditor and W. S. Harrison, Auditor of Revenues

J. M. Rosevear to be Comptroller, vice W. H. Astley, retired.

J. B. McLaren to be General Auditor, vice J. M. Rosevear.

W. S. Harrison to be Auditor of Revenues, vice J. B. McLaren.

The new Comptroller of the Grand Trunk is one of the most widely known railway accounting officers. A son of W. H. Rosevear, for many years General Car Accountant of the Grand Trunk System, he was born at St. Lambert in 1869, educated at the Montreal private schools, and after graduation in the railway and commercial field, entered the service of the Grand Trunk in 1897 as clerk in the office of the Auditor of Disbursements. He was promoted travelling accountant in 1904, chief clerk to the Auditor of Disbursements in 1906, Auditor of Disbursements of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways in 1908, and General Auditor in 1918.

Mr. McLaren, appointed General Auditor, joined the Grand Trunk in 1893 as junior clerk at Brockville and later held the positions of Accountant, Chief Clerk, Agent and General Yardmaster at Durand, Mich. He entered the audit office at Grand Trunk headquarters as clerk in 1901, and has been successively Travelling Auditor, Chief Clerk to the Auditor of Freight Accounts and Auditor of Revenues.

Mr. Harrison, appointed Auditor of Revenues, entered the service of the railway in 1899 at Minico as junior clerk and was operator, agent and despatcher before transferring to Montreal in 1905 as travelling auditor He has since held the positions of chief clerk and assistant to the Auditor of Revenues.

On Wednesday night at Canton, near Port Hope, burglars entered the grist mill of the late Mr. W. F. Wakeford and stole half a ton of flour.

PAINFULLY INJURED

Mr. D. Hogan, a lumberman in Hughe's camp, North Hastings, on Monday last had his right hand severely lacerated when it became caught between a log and cantilock. The third finger was partially torn off.

FORMER COUNTY RESIDENT DEAD

Mr. Charles Pritchard, a former well known resident of Hastings County died at St. Boniface Hospital, Winnipeg on September 25th. He had been residing in the west for some time.

ADVERTISING COPY

Owing to the large and rapidly increasing advertising patronage of The Intelligencer it will be necessary to insist that advertising copy, changes, etc., be left in this office the day before date of publication to insure insertion. Even with an increased staff it is impossible to put advertisements into type when the copy is delayed. To make absolutely certain of publication hand in copy the day before publication is required.

DEATH OF FORMER RESIDENT

Mr. W. J. Hudson, a commercial traveller, who was a former well known resident of Belleville, died last evening at Ottawa, where he had of late been residing. Mr. Hudson had many friends upon the road owing to his genial disposition. For a number of years he had been a traveller. A wife survives. The body will be brought here tomorrow for interment.

NEW INDUSTRY FOR CITY

A new industry has been secured for the city. The Judge Jones Milling Company Limited, have secured premises on Station Road, adjacent to the Grand Junction Railway, which will be utilized as a plant for the manufacture of flour and cereals. It is also the intention of the company in the near future to erect an elevator for the storing of grain, etc. A number of hands will be employed at the start and increased as trade demands.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Matthew Summers and John Logan preferred charges before Magistrate Masson had a preliminary trial on a charge that they did on the 13th of September, 1919, unlawfully steal a quantity of liquor from a vehicle, namely a box car of the G. T. R. Company. As a result of the investigation the accused were committed for trial at a higher court. Both are at present out on bail. Mr. Carnew represented the Crown. Mr. Mikel, K.C., for Logan, and Mr. Butler for Summers.

ALLEGED FRAUD

Wilfred Smith, a young man who has been but a short time a resident of the city was arrested at Trenton last night and brought back here. A charge of fraud was preferred against him. On Wednesday the accused bought a rain coat at Mr. Dimes place of business for $16. He gave a cheque for $20 and secured the coat and $15 change. The cheque was made payable to bearer and was signed O. McLaughlin Company. It is now alleged that it was a fraudulent transaction, hence the arrest. This morning the case was enlarged for a week.

Interesting Ladies Bowling Tournament

Before Taking Tanlac She Often Cried Over Her Condition, She Says.

Yesterday afternoon was the occasion of a very interesting function on the Bowling Green when the finals were played by six rinks of the Ladies' Bowling Club, for the trophy presented by Mrs. S. H. Laster the President of the Club. The interest was very keen to the last, when the rink skipped by Miss McRae won out with the handsome total of 56, the next highest was Mrs. Albert Robertson's rink, with a total of 50

Mrs. Laster has been the President of the Club since the organization seven years ago, and has every year shown her interest in it by donating prizes for competition by the members. This year she presented a very handsome cup, standing some 18 inches high, on a rosewood base, which is to be played for annually, the winners each year having their names engraved on the cup, and each member of the winning rink being presented with individual prizes by the Club. This year the individual prizes were four very handsome cut glass vases.

Mrs. Laster, in presenting the trophy to the Club, referred to the great pleasure it had given her in being selected year after year as its President and congratulated the members on their successes in being first winners, etc.

Mrs. Kinnear, the Secretary of the Club, presented the individual prizes in a few well chosen and fitting remarks. Mr. W. B. Riggs, the President of the Men's Bowling Club, expressed the great pleasure it was to the Men's Club to have the ladies organize themselves sometimes on the green, and he hoped the Ladies' Club would every year increase in numbers and compete with the men in all their matches. Rev. Dr. Scott also referred to the pleasure it had always been to him to see the green enhanced by the presence of the ladies, and congratulated them on their excellent playing, and in having such an excellent President in Mrs. Laster, who always took so much interest in its success.

The presentation of the beautiful trophy has given added interest to the members of the Club and every year will see greater exertion on behalf of its members to have their names on it as winners.

A large number of the members of both Clubs, and many invited guests, enjoyed the excitement of witnessing the closely contested games, and the bountiful afternoon tea provided by the mebers of the Ladies' Club.

Members when playing are required to wear rubbers or rubber soled boots to prevent injury to the green.

MAKE THE WHEELS GO ROUND

"Let me see the wheels go round," says the little boy sitting on his father's knee, and father at once pulls out his watch and opens it for the amusement of the youngster,

"Let me see the wheels go round," says the man who prides himself in his patriotism and wishes to see the wheels of industry revolving at full speed, enabling the workers to earn good money and live comfortably.

"Let me see the wheels go round," should be the watchword of Canadians during the 1919 Victory Loan Campaign. The purpose of the Loan is to provide money to keep the industrial and commercial machinery of Canada running and to enable her to maintain her splendid position among the great nations of the world.

Ponder over these things before you fill in your cheque and you will make its face value the utmost limit of your spare cash.

Mrs. Clark Feels Ten Years Younger

World's Series Game at Chicago Today—Great Crowds Present.

"I don't believe a tonic could have kept up much longer if it hadn't been for Tanlac," said Mrs. Henrietta Clark, of 25 Woburn Avenue, Bedford Park, North Toronto, Ontario.

"My trouble began when I lost my appetite," she continued, "and I just had to force down what little I did eat and after eating I would be in great distress for hours. My nerves were in a dreadful state and my system became terribly run-down. I could hardly sleep at night and would get up feeling as weak and exhausted that I could hardly get up and down the stairs, and I would become dizzy spells at times over my condition that I would just break down and cry. I was on the verge of a breakdown and felt miserable all the time.

"I had only taken Tanlac but for a short time before I became so much better that I actually felt ten years younger. My appetite is fine now, I eat heartily of everything and nothing hurts me at all. I am well and strong enough now to do all my housework, and I go up and down stairs never bothers me at all."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Desoronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. J. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vince in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

Good Start For Night Classes

The Inchah [illegible] Commercial Night School Classes began last evening at the High School with a very encouraging attendance.

Over 100 enrolled in the following classes: Mechanical Drawing, Letter and Card Printing, Dressmaking, Household Science, Business Arithmetic, Advanced Mathematics, Bookkeeping, Business English, Shorthand and Typewriting. Several inquiries regarding the possibility of forming classes in French Telegraphy, Millinery, Automobile Engines, Practical Electricity and Latin. In the latter named subjects, however, classes will not be formed unless there are eight applicants for a class. It is therefore very desirous that those considering taking up this work should register on Tuesday evening, October 7th, or before that date in order that suitable teachers may be secured.

The following teachers were in charge of classes last evening:—Mechanical Drawing, Mr. David. J. Batchelor; Mr. Batchelor is the draughtsman in the Marsh Engineering Works and has recently returned from overseas where he was with the C. E. F. This course should appeal to returned men who are anxious to take up this work. Letter and Card Printing, Mr. C. R. Mellon. This class was well attended last evening and is likely to prove one of the most successful classes of the season. Mr. Wotten is a specialist at this line of work and every young man who intends entering business should take this course as it will make him very much more valuable and increase his earning power. Dressmaking, Miss Margret Carler and Miss Agnes Cherry. These classes are also well attended and the ladies were able to proceed with the work at once as a number had been in attendance last year. Business, Arithmetic, Mr. A. E. Thrasher. If any one is desirous of improving along this line, this is the class to attend as Mr. Thrasher is a very apt teacher. Advanced Mathematics by Mr. W. W. Knight, B.A. There is still room in this class for two or three more who wish to take up Algebra, Geometry or Trigonometry. This class will be one of the strong classes for the term. Bookkeeping by Mr. F. H. Henry. A good class was formed last evening, several of last year's class returning for advanced work. Shorthand and Typewriting, Mr. B. M. Clark and Mrs. Bessie Chadwick. This promises to be a very large class including several new members. Household Science, Miss Adah Mans, B.A. Miss Mans is a specialist in Household Science and a graduate of Toronto University and this class should prove to be one of the very best in the school. An opportunity is afforded to the ladies of the city to join this class and become proficient in this very important subject. As this class cannot accommodate more than twenty-four, (24) the first twenty-four registered will have the opportunity of taking the course. Business English, Mr. J. J. Wilson, B. A. Mr. Wilson is going to have a promising class including some who are learning the English language. Anyone desirous of learning to read or write may attend this class. Construction will also be given in English Composition and English Grammar.

It was manifest last evening that there was a certain stability about this year's work that was not so noticeable last year as those attending this season are more mature and are anxious to cover the work as quickly as possible.

The Why? of Another Victory Loan

WHEN, on the morning of November 11th, 1918, the guns were hushed and glad tidings flashed across the world, there followed with the Nation's Prayer of Thanksgiving, one yearning query, which found echo in the faster-beating hearts of wives, mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters and sweethearts.

THAT query was, "How soon will our boy be home?"

AND, from France and Flanders, from Italy and Egypt, from Palestine and from far-off Siberia, there came an answering echo "How soon, how soon, may we go home?"

CANADA caught the spirit of these longings, and at once resolved to satisfy them

IT was an appalling task. Shipping was tragically scarce. The composition of the Army of Occupation had not then been settled. And other parts of the Empire as well as Canada were looking for the speedy return of their men.

THE problem was this. The half-million men that Canada had overseas had taken more than four years to transport to the field of battle.

TO bring them home in a few months was a gigantic undertaking—one to tax all Canada's ingenuity and resources.

CANADA solved the problem, but it meant crowding into a few short months, an expense for demobilization which it was impossible to foresee.

THEN, too, besides the sentimental aspect of the necessity for bringing the men home quickly, the economic side could not be overlooked.

THAT was, to transform efficiently and speedily the nation's army of fighters into a national army of workers.

+ + + + +

Need Divides Itself in Two Parts

The answer to the question "Why does Canada need another Victory Loan?" divides itself into two parts.

(a) To finish paying the expenses of demobilization, and the obligations we still owe to our soldiers.

(b) To provide national working capital.

+ + + + +

Obligations to Soldiers

The obligations to soldiers include:

That already incurred cost of bringing home troops from overseas.

The payment of all soldiers still undemobilized. This includes more than 20,000 sick and wounded who are still in hospital, and who of course remain on the Army payroll till discharged.

The upkeep of hospitals, and their medical and nursing staffs, until the need for them is ended.

These three items alone will use up at least $200,000,000 of the Victory Loan 1919.

Gratuities

There is also the gratuity which has been authorized, and has been and is being paid to assist soldiers to tide over the period between discharge and their re-adjustment to civil life. For this purpose alone, $61,000,000 must be provided out of the Victory Loan 1919, in addition to the $59,000,000 already paid out of the proceeds of the Victory Loan 1918.

Land Settlement

Furthermore, soldiers who desire to become farmers may, under the Soldiers' Land Settlement Act, be loaned money by Canada with which to purchase land, stock and implements. The money so advanced will be paid back; meantime each loan is secured by a first mortgage. Up to August 15th, 29,495 soldiers had applied for land under the terms of this Act; and 22,281 applications had been investigated, and the qualifications of the applicant approved. For this purpose Canada this year requires $24,000,000.

Vocational Training

For this work which, with the Vocational Training and Soldiers' Service Departments, embraces the major activities of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, an appropriation of $57,000,000 is necessary.

These national expenditures are war expenses. They will be accepted readily by every citizen who gives thought to the task which Canada faced following the Armistice, and to the success with which she has met it.

+ + + + +

National Working Capital

Canada needs national working capital, so that she may be able to sell on credit to Great Britain and our Allies the products of our farms, forests, fisheries, mines and factories.

You may ask "Why sell to them if they can't pay cash?" The answer is, "Their orders are absolutely essential to the continuance of our agricultural and industrial prosperity."

The magnitude of these orders and the amount of employment thus created, will depend upon the success of the Victory Loan 1919.

The "Why" of Credit Loans

Farmers and manufacturers (and that includes the workers on these orders) must be paid cash for their products. Therefore, Canada must borrow money from her citizens to give credit, temporarily, to Great Britain and our Allies. Actually, no money will pass out of Canada.

If Canada does not give credit, other countries will; and they will get the trade, and have the employment that should be ours, to distribute amongst their workers. And remember, we absolutely need these orders to maintain employment. If we don't finance them business will feel the depression, employment will not be as plentiful, and conditions everywhere will be adversely affected.

For Transportation

Money must also be available to carry on the nation's shipbuilding programme, and other transportation development work.

These, then, are some of the things for which Canada needs national working capital. She is in the position of a great trading company, and her citizens who buy Victory Bonds are the shareholders.

Those who give thought to our outstanding obligations to soldiers, and to our need for national working capital, cannot fail to be impressed with the absolute necessity for the Prophets On Dr. Their Forecasting at Home.

FORETELLING THE WEATHER.

Adam may or may not have tried his hand at weather prediction, but it is written that as far back as the time of Noah the forecasting art was abroad a long, wet spell, and, sailing a lot of later weather prophets, his name is Noah. Dr. Abbe, professor of meteorology in the local measures to meet the situation. Further, that that, subsequent events proved that Noah was a 100 per cent. forecaster. Many of his successors, however, showing a lower batting average, it is strikingly apparent that Noah went on that in view of the frequency with which his prognostications failed, the subject should be placed on a scientific basis in order to obtain accuracy in the results, or at least to spread a little of that learning and philosophy about it, and thus minimize the curse, as it were, of predicting errors. Hence the weather bureau were instituted, which same have been in full and successful operation now for many years, with attendants on the ground floor, roof, roll, and everything. Entirely apart from scientific weather observations, however, home-made weather forecasting has persisted as a pleasing pastime all these years, and on the very day there is a set of rules governing it more or less recognized by all amateur weather-prophets. For the benefit of those who may be unfamiliar with these rules the New York Herald has obligingly made a compilation of them, which may be set forth as follows:

When the sky is high and the horizon is unobstructed from all quarters, it is safe to predict cloudless, look for a storm within forty-eight hours.

If it starts to rain after seven o'clock in the morning it will continue to do so all day, and when it is the indication of a three days' storm.

When it is raining and it brightens and darkens alternately you can count on an all-day rain, with a chance of clearing by sundown.

When the rain ceases and the clouds are still massed in heavy blankets, with signs of clear weather in the patch of blue sky that shows between, it is a storm enough to make a pair of "sailor's breeches."

Another sign of a continued rain is when the smoke from the chimney lowers low around the housetop. When it ascends straight into the air this indicates clearing weather.

A thunder-storm in winter (usually in January or February) is followed by clear, cold weather. If the storm is not, as many think, the breaking up of winter.

Hearing near the seashore say a storm is "brewing" when the air is salty, caused by the wind blowing from the east.

The old Indian sign of a dry month was when the ends of the new moon were nearly horizontal and not as if they resembled a hook on which the Indian could hang his powder horn.

Many people troubled with rheumatism claim they can foretell a coming storm by the pain. Others, more accurate barometers and can predict changeable weather by "feeling it in their bones."

And the advice of the old weather-prophet: "Never put on your winter clothing in June or your summer clothing in December."

And then, for the special benefit of those who never can remember anything but rules and rhymes, we also have a faculty for retaining jingles, the following important formulas are set out in verse:

Red in the morning, the sailor's warning;
Red at night the sailor's delight.
When you see a mackerel sky,
Twill not be long until you fry.
When the seagulls inland fly
Know ye that a storm is nigh.
A ring around the moon
Means a storm is coming soon.
When the dew is on the grass
Twill clear before eleven.

LOSE FAVOR FOR SERGE AND SATIN

Women Show Partiality to Fabrics That Are More Suitable to the Season.

SILK JERSEY IN LIMELIGHT

Popular Demand Will Be Met and Indications Are That the Material May Be Substituted for Serge.

New York.—The world seems to have made up its mind to wear in summer the clothes that are suggestive of summer.

This may sound like a familiar condition to women in those sectors of the country that prepare for the heat in April and do not think of warm clothes until November; but in the large majority of these United States, observes a fashion writer, there has been a tendency to dress in summer in a way that seems to defy the calendar. Hundreds of these women buy thin serge frocks and suits, gowns with strong silk linings, chiffon or satin bodices that do not wash, and there is always a bit of fur hanging in the closet ready to be used with or without excuse.

There was a time when even the women of the cooler states permitted themselves to look upon lingerie gowns with favor. This was done in Paris, where there has always been a tendency to avoid cool simplicity, even though July and August demand clothes that will give comfort. The average Paris woman, even though she may be a young girl working for her living, never appears in the street or at a shop in a separate white shirtwaist without a coat, and none of the Paris women go about the streets in muslin or linen frocks. It was the French custom in summer clothes that governed the American output for the last decade or so.

Be Warned in Time.

The woman who is watching out for her spring wardrobe and is being guided by the clothes going to pleasure resorts, which are, after all, forerunners of what we will adopt, had best be warned in time that she will regret it if she puts money into sweaters, separate skirts and plenty of shirtwaists where are coming into a new phase of summer clothes. It is really fascinating, and it has been brought back through the mental upheaval we were compelled to turn during the war days. We have a yearning for clothes that are sensible. Nonessentials have rather wearied us. We think it especially silly to wear a serge gown on warm, moist days when we could be comfortable in taffeta, foulard, shantung and printed chiffon. We know that muslin is not an easy fabric to possess, and cotton has been needed for things more grim and serious than a woman's summer afternoon; but the other fabrics fall as thick as leaves in Vallambrosa. One can get them for the asking. A vast amount of them are American made, and one does not have to pay an import price on them. There is a certain quality of chiffon which has been put out by France and which we have not been able to achieve, but of the foulards, the Shantungs and the various types of Chinese crepe and silk, our own markets supply our every needs.

The French designers inaugurated taffeta as far back as December, and the American importers offered Southern frocks of this material the first of January, but it was a taffeta that was a close rival to satin, even thinner and more comfortable for warm days. When the American women attempt the fashionable draping of the bust with taffeta that is not exquisitely supple, it may be that the fabric will have a setback, leaving the way clear for Shantung, Chinese crepe, and foulard.

These are the materials that will come back to fashion, but they need not be twisted and turned into complex and expensive frocks unless the wearer so desires. Many of them are made up like muslins

Insistence Upon Silk Jersey.

No money of the fabrics that are to flash forth after the frost is over, is genuinely good unless one brings in jersey. The knitted weave of this fabric is still used, but the heavy silk weave, plain or fancified, is doing its best to come in ahead of the others on the race track of fashions. The American mills have turned out this French product with more or less success. There is the drop-stitch kind, another that has a thick and a thin square, and still another that has a twisted and a plain contrasting design.

This fabric has taken unto itself the air of a conqueror, for it aspires to a formal place in society. It appears in the guise of an evening gown, not for formal occasions, it is true, but for dinner at a restaurant and the theater afterward. It is handled by the dressmakers in the same way as satin. It has long lace sleeves, sometimes a hip scarf of Spanish lace with a deep, pendant panel in front and again, it has an upper bodice of white chiffon with square Spanish sleeves to match. It is used for coat suits and offers itself as a rival to Shantung, for it does not wrinkle easily. It comes in the majority of good colors and in beige and biscuit it still hangs along at high tide.

It is felt, more than said, that satin has never had its day as a spring fabric. There is a strong tendency away from it, just as there is from serge. No one who dislikes dressing clothes can fail to notice this avoidance of the two fabrics in orders for new frocks. Satin is still good for evening, but it is draped with chiffon or tulle. When brilliant colors are used, as in one of the new gowns named after General Pershing, American beauty red satin is veiled in an oriental manner with long festoons of mauve chiffon, each corner weighted with an amethyst necklace that drops to the knee in front, outlines the sharply cut decolletage over the shoulders and drops in two straight lines below the waist at the back, each end finished with a tassel of the amethyst. This type of gown is chosen everywhere among smart people, when satin is used. It permits the orientalization of a gown, which is the dear desire of dressmakers.

As for serge, exactly what the public has against it, one cannot find out. Perhaps it is just weary of it and wants something that does not suggest the somber, conservative clothes of war days. There is a very soft cloth that looks like serge which the tailors are using for coat suits, but even with the model as ordered women choose another material. They do not want even a semblance of serge.

Covert Cloth Worn Again.

It might be claimed that the leading fabric for coat suits, and even frocks, is covert cloth. It came into fashion through its usage at Thanksgiving by a few very smart women in New York and the same houses that introduced it then have put it forth as a novelty for early spring.

The American people know covert cloth quite well. They had much to do with it during the preceding generation. Its tone today is not as muddy and brown as then; there is a sparkling touch of tan about it which makes it quite becoming. Coat suits made of it, the new ones that are trailing along in genial climates, worn by women best on amusing themselves, have the surface tucked in squares or lattice work, according to an ancient and honorable trick of ornamentation. The coats of these suits are left open after the fashion of three or four buttons at the neck; this is to show a white blouse, usually in a pale color.

By the way, these frilled, pastel-colored muslin blouses may be the forerunners of a wide revival of colored muslin dresses.

Two thousand trains were run in Great Britain yesterday outside of many local services on the underground. Many railway men are returning to their jobs.

Pure Milk

—Always Uniform

At every Borden Condensary, the milk is passed only after a careful physical test, supplemented later by a test for butterfat and minimum bacteria. No milk is accepted which does not come up to the Borden standards, since the quality of the milk accepted regulates the quality of the finished product. This is why Borden's St. Charles Brand is uniformly pure.

Hermetically sealed in sterilized cans, Borden's St. Charles Milk keeps indefinitely as long as the cans remain unopened. Stored on your pantry shelf, this milk solves the problem of shortage, and makes you independent of any other milk supply. Handy, convenient and economical—just add an equal amount of water and you have milk as fresh as when drawn from the cow. Use it for all purposes that require milk. Order to-day—by name—from your grocer.

BACK GO CLOCKS ON OCTOBER 27

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—Sun time will once more operate in Canada immediately after 2 o'clock on the morning of October 27. At that hour all over Canada trains will come to a stand for an hour. Clocks will be turned back an hour so as to switch industry and all the varied manifestations of life in the Dominion back to the old time.

There is no Federal law in order in Council governing the matter in Canada. The railroads adopted daylight saving so that their time tables would agree with those in the United States.

All through Western Canada many cities and towns and country districts refused to follow suit, but for convenience sake in the East daylight saving has become the rule in many places.

The hour of 2 o'clock on October 27 was selected because the night following Sunday is the one when such a change can be made with the least industrial disorder. Some of the large city trains may possibly leave an hour later than usual, and arrive at their destination on time.

THE WEATHER.
Moderate winds, unsettled with occasional showers to-night and on Sunday.

Belleville Men Injured In Auto Accident At Whitby

ON THEIR WAY TO HAMILTON TO SEE BASEBALL MATCH, BELLEVILLE CITIZENS MEET WITH ACCIDENT—MOTOR CAR OVERTURNED—PATRICK BOLAND, HOCKEY PLAYER, INJURED—GEORGE HOPKINS SERIOUSLY INJURED—CAPT. HYLAND ESCAPES INJURY.

WHITBY, Oct. 4.—An accident occurred near Whitby this morning in which two Belleville men were seriously injured, one probably fatally.

An automobile party left Belleville last night en route to Hamilton to see the ball game. At Whitby a stop was made for breakfast, but shortly after the journey was resumed something went wrong with the steering gear and the car swerved to the ditch and turned turtle.

Capt. Hyland, who was in charge of the car, escaped injury, but Fred Hopkins received injuries to the base of his brain which may prove fatal. He is in a very serious condition. Patrick Boland suffered a fractured arm and a dislocated hip, but otherwise his injuries are not considered serious. The injured men were taken to Oshawa hospital

Patrick Boland, mentioned in the above despatch is the well-known hockey player, and leader for Belleville Intermediate O.H.A. team. He is unmarried and lives with his mother on Dundas street. His many friends will hope that his injuries may not prove serious and that he will speedily recover.

Capt. Hyland, who escaped injury, is a well-known officer of the C. E. F. and who recently returned from active service overseas, and resides with his wife on Coleman street.

The late George Hopkins, referred to in the above despatch as Fred Hopkins, a returned soldier, single, employed at the Belleville Hardware factory, Pinnacle street. He has no relatives here but has a brother in Smith's Falls. He is reported as probably fatally injured, but his many friends hope that this is an extreme view of his condition and that he will speedily recover.

Verdict Of Guilty In Murder Trial

PETERBORO, Oct. 3.—In the murder charge against Tom Kosoy, a young Russian, accused of having been implicated in the killing of Philip Yanoff, another Russian, near Havelock, on June 22nd, the jury at the Fall Assizes here brought in a verdict of guilty after being out an hour and a half. Chief Justice Sir William Mulock deferred passing sentence on the prisoner until the four companions of Kosek all charged with murder, have been tried.

The trial of the second prisoner commences today. The five men are accused of having entered a bunkhouse where Yanoff and other men were sleeping, and of having robbed several of the inmates, first shooting Yanoff. They were arrested a few hours after the crime.

The prosecution is being conducted by T. J. Rigney, of Kingston.

First Gun Was Fired In Lennox

NAPANEE, Oct. 4.—The campaign in Lennox on behalf of the Hearst candidate, Mr. Fowler, was opened last night with a large and enthusiastic meeting at Roblin. Alfred McCutcheon occupied the chair and addresses were delivered by Dr. Stratton, Mr. Fowler, the candidate and W. C. Mikel, K. C., of Belleville. Dr. Stratton dealt with the temperance issue and the candidate, who is a well known farmer, showed the good work that had been done by the Government for Agriculture.

Mr. Mikel said there was less real criticism of the government in this election than of any Government in a long time. As in most of the out standing Government legislation the opposition stood in dumb approval. The opposition did not have the courage to object to the votes for women, the temperance policy the expenditure on agriculture which had been quadrupled, the additional expenditure $2,000,000 on education or any of the principal acts of the Government. The opposition did find fault with the Government for not having had nickle refined in Ontario sooner but the Liberals when in power had voted down the Conservative's proposal to have the nickle refined in Ontario and thus delayed it many years. The opposition also alleged that some Canadian nickle found its way to Germany. It has been shown that if any gas is to be blamed for that it is the British authorities, not the Ontario Government.

The biography of H. H Dewart, leader of the Opposition in Morgan's Canadian Men and Women of the Times 1st edition, page 224, says that Mr. Dewart "AS A YOUNG MAN WAS A STRONG ADVOCATE OF CANADIAN INDEPENDENCE AND STILL IS PRONOUNCEDLY IN FAVOR OF IT." If Mr. Dewart's policy of separating Canada from the Empire had been adopted Canada would have been a foreign country and in the same position as the United States or the South American republics as to ceiling food, nickle or anything else to Germany The people of Canada who sent 500,000 of their sons to defend the British Empire, 50,000 of whom laid down their lives for that Empire, will not approve of the leadership of a man who is "pronouncedly in favor of" a policy that would shatter that Empire by taking Canada out of it. A candidate who follows a leader holding those views is not entitled to the support of those who believe in the integrity of the British Empire.

A number of life long Liberals stated that the Liberals when in power had broken their pledges given to the temperance people, yet Mr. Dewart had approved of the Ross government which made and broke those pledges. Would it be to his liquor friends or his temperance friends he would prove faithless next? Even the Globe said in 1916 that it could not support Dewart for member. If he does not deserve support as member surely he does not deserve support as leader. He supported the Ross government through all its career of corruption and no doubt is one of the "Barnacles" which the Globe said the party should get rid of. The Liberal party had an excellent chance to pick a returned soldier as a leader but instead they picked a man who opposed conscripting help for the soldier and whose biography shows him to be "PRONOUNCEDLY IN FAVOR" OF SEPARATING CANADA FROM THE EMPIRE.

Chicago—0.

YESTERDAY'S GAME

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—"Well, boys, Mr. Gleason has tried his pitching leaves and they were beaten by the Reds," said Southpaw Dick Kerr of the White Sox yesterday when he was notified that he would be the Chicago twirler. "Now that the cards have failed to win, the deuces will get a chance, and as they say in the great American indoor sport, if the deuces don't run wild in this game there is a chance to beat the cocky Reds."

THIS BRUCE WASN'T WILD

Richard had the right idea. This particular deuce didn't run wild and he handed the Cincinnatians an artistic trimming by 5,to 0. He gave only one base on balls, evidence enough that even a left-handed deuce is not always wild. One good single, a Texas leaguer, and a scratchy bunt on which Kerr fell when he tried to field it, were the best the Redlegs could do.

BOY DOES MAVIS

Kerr dominated the whole game. There was never a stage when the National League pennant winners have ever an outside chance to beat him. They worked three men as far as second base, but none advanced beyond that point. It was expected that Ewell would be used before the end of the series, but there was no expectation that Manager Gleason would call upon the lad to twirl the game upon which the series hinged. A loss yesterday would practically have put the Sox out of the running. The boy twirled such a game as could scarcely be expected of a comparative tyro. His performance recalled the great exhibitions of Babe Adams of Pittsburg against Detroit in 1909 and of Joe Bush of the Athletics against the Giants in 1913.

WOMAN INJURED

HORSE KILLED

A horse driven by a woman ran away on Coleman street this afternoon about three o'clock. The woman was thrown out and sustained painful injury. The horse ran across the light to Front street where he was stopped. It is said that the horse was frightened by a passing automobile striking the wagon. The climax of the runaway occurred when the horse fell and broke his neck. The lady was thrown out and seriously injured. She was taken to the hospital. Her name is Miss Pow. A lady walking on Front street was knocked down by the runaway and injured.

The horse finally ran into an automobile as a result of which he fell and broke his neck, death resulting.

An Improvement Reported In English Transport Situation

EFFORTS CONTINUE TO FIND SUITABLE BASIS OF SETTLEMENT OF RAILWAY STRIKE — QUESTION OF SYMPATHETIC STRIKES DEFERRED UNTIL AFTER MEETING OF ALL TRADES UNIONS TUESDAY — GOVERNMENT CALLS FOR "CITIZENS ARMY"

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Oct. 4—The Government in its noon communique on the strike situation reported a continued improvement in the transport situation. The statement reads:

"Plans are actively in progress to meet the situation caused by the refusal of strike leaders to accept arbitration. Railroad services are still growing. Freight trains are increasing in number. The food situation is unchanged. Stocks are well distributed and are more plentiful than on the first day of the strike. The response to the call for volunteers shows public determination.

Moonshiners Rounded Up At Bancroft

Stiff Fines Handed Out for Making Contraband Whiskey.

BANCROFT, Oct. 4.—Revenue officers visited Bancroft this week and rounded up some illicit moonshiners. The machinery of the court was rather primitive but this did not prevent the administration of justice fair but stern. In consequence some stiff fines were imposed, in one case $425, including costs with the alternative of 3,30 o'clock. Mr. Crandale, of Toronto, officiated as chairman in a very acceptable manner. The Hearst candidate, Mr. W. H. Ireland, Mayor of Trenton, was present and addressed the gathering.

Organization will be completed Monday afternoon, but the following ward officers were selected at yesterday's meeting:

Centre Ward—Chairman, Mrs. Capt. Smith; Secretary, Mrs. W. Bessch.

Bleecker Ward—Chairman, Mrs. H. McGuiness.

A PLATFORM OF PROGRESS

The policies upon which Sir William Hearst will ask the people of Ontario to pass judgment are set out under the following headings:

(1) The greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every shape and form;

(2) The faithful enforcement of the people's verdict on the liquor question;

(3) Vigorous support of Hydro-Electric development and cheap light and power for our farmers;

(4) Conversion of certain railway lines into Hydro-Electric lines;

(5) Good roads reaching every part of Ontario;

(6) A pension fund for mothers;

(7) Direct repercussation of Labor in the Cabinet;

(8) Establishment of a minimum wage;

(9) Unification of the labor laws of Canada on a just and equitable basis;

(10) Such further labor legislation within Provincial jurisdiction as may arise out of the findings of the National Industrial Conference and the International Labor Conference;

(11) Housing accommodation for industrial workers.

(12) Special consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation;

(13) A new era for education, providing technical and agricultural instruction throughout the province;

(14) Improvement of transportation facilities in Northern Ontario;

(15) Conservation of our timber resources and encouragement to mining;

(16) Measures to reduce the high cost of living;

(17) Protection of the public health, generous assistance to hospitals and charities, and special care of mental defectives.

Students Field Day At Trenton

Large Number of Out-of-Town Pupils—Keen Competition for the Championship.

Yesterday the students of Trenton High School participated in an event which is eagerly looked forward to by all the students of not only Trenton, but Belleville and other nearby towns, the annual field day. A fine programme of sports was arranged and all events were well contested. In the morning the programme was carried out at the High School grounds and in the afternoon at the Athletic grounds.

A number of interested spectators were in attendance. In a number of the events students of the Belleville High School were successful competitors. The championship accompanied by medals will be awarded to the successful students.

In the Assembly Hall of the Trenton High School last evening the Trenton pupils entertained the out-of-town pupils at a social evening. Dancing was indulged in until the midnight hour, there being twelve dances on the programme. Miss E. Rayn of Belleville, presided at the piano, and as on former occasions when Miss Ryan is pianist the music was all that could have been desired. The out-of-town pupils left for their various homes after moving a vote of thanks to Trenton pupils.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

LIBERAL CANDIDATE AGAINST HON. GEO. HOWARD FERGUSON

The Liberals of Grenville riding have decided to enter a candidate against Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and O. Albert Payne, who is running on the U. F. O. platform. A convention is called for Spencerville on October 7th to select a candidate.

EVANTUREL NOMINATED

The Liberals of Prescott in convention nominated Gustave Evanturel. The nomination was unanimous. Mr. Evanturel is being opposed by J. A. Caron, U. F. O. candidate.

ELECTION OFFICERS PAY

The deputy returning officer and clerks and constables who officiate on election day will receive a slight increased pay. The deputies will receive $9.00 for their day's work, the poll clerk, $8.00 and the constables $3.00. The former rate, respectively was $7.00, $6.00 and $2.00.

CLERGYMAN CANDIDATE

In South Wellington, Rev. C. W. Buckland was unanimously selected as the standard-bearer of the Liberal-Conservatives. The nominee is well and favorably known in Guelph, where he has resided for the past 15 years, with the exception of four years spent in Toronto. He is a B. A., B. D. and D. D. He returned about three months ago, and at present is without a parish, having resigned the rectorship of St. James' Church, Guelph, to remain overseas, after a successful pastorate of 11 years. He is popular with all classes a temperance man, a prohibitionist advocate of amateur sports, and is confidently expected to redeem the riding.

JOHN R. DARGAVEL BEATEN

BY MAJ. ANDREW W. GRAY

At the Conservative convention for Leeds, riding held at Delta, Major Andrew W. Gray of Westport was selected as nominee of the party over John R. Dargavel, Elgin, who has represented the riding since the Conservative entered the Government benches four years ago. George Morris, Delta presided, and the attendance was above five hundred, all parts of the riding being represented on the first ballot. The vote stood: Gray 131, Dargavel 108, W. C. Johnston, Lyndhurst, returned soldier, 85. On the second ballot Gray polled 178 and Dargavel 137. Messrs. Dargavel and Johnston joined in making Major Gray's nomination unanimous.

LABOR CANDIDATE AT SUDBURY

A. T. Sweeney is chosen as the joint candidate of the Independent Labor Party and Sudbury Provincial seat at the forth-coming elections. This announcement came after fight with Dr. Arthur, Liberal, and Chas. McCrea, the sitting Government member whom he met in the field. Camps of both old parties to-night accept this latest political happening here as a boost to their cause. Mr. Sweeney was formerly a C. P. R. conductor and of late has been organizer for labor. Taking the results of last election any defection of vote in rural districts would materially hurt the Liberals while any considerable Labor vote would cut into the vote of the Government candidate.

"THIEVES AND LIARS."

SAYS LIBERTY LEAGUER

Challenges him about freely at the Citizens' Liberty League meeting at Accident Hall, Toronto and in addition to the challenges there were some sharp words for the prohibition committee, some of whom, in the opinion of Sergt. C. H. Haight, Ontario organizer for the league, "are thieves and liars." Archie Drainin started the challenge by offering to put up $200 to nothing or a little wager with the Rev. C. A. Williams, of the Ex-e's Memorial Church. His offer was that if he could not prove to the satisfaction of Sir William Hearst, whom he wished to appoint official referee for the occasion, "that there is thousands of dollars worth of whiskey in the homes and basements of the members of Mr. Williams' congregation," he would hand over $200 to any person in need of it. Further, Mr. Drainin asserted the audience that he could give the names of at least two of the prominent parishioners who had failed to build the church, who would vote against prohibition. The second challenge came from Mr. R. O. Wood, barrister, who called upon Sir William Hearst "to state publicly that he will bring before the Legislature at the next sure to return the open bar to Ontario in the event of a majority in the affirmative being given to question one of the referendum." Mr. Wood went on to declare that the Premier would not dare to permit the re-opening of the bars, "because he has no intention of doing so, in spite of what he has said, and secondly, because public opinion is against it."

WOMEN VOTERS

Some women voters have an idea that they can vote on the referendum only. This is a mistaken idea, for the government of Sir William Hearst has made it possible for the women to vote for the legislature candidate as well. Not only that, but Mr. Frasier has been so extended that women can vote for municipal candidates and school trustees. Vote for "Billy" Ireland and the government which gave the ballot to the women.

Although there has been a good deal of political skirmishing and an occasional small engagement, the Provincial campaign will really open to-day, when Sir William Hearst goes to Sarnia for the first meeting of a series that will keep him busy until the Saturday before election day. The Prime Minister is expected to be from the North where he has been getting about in his own riding of Sault Ste. Marie and other ridings in the district. He will spend a few hours in his office attending to pressing business matters and will then settle down to campaigning, speaking at one or two meetings daily.

SIR WILLIAM AT PETERBORO

Sir William will go to Peterboro on Monday to address a big gathering of electors from East and West ridings. He will speak at Bowmanville Tuesday afternoon at 3 at Cobourg in the evening. During the week he speaks also at Smith's Falls and Cornwall, but the dates for these meetings have not been definitely fixed. On Monday the 18th Sir William will begin a tour of Western Ontario, speaking at Simcoe. On the 14th he will be at Walkerton, in the afternoon and in Chatham at night. On the 15th he will be at Guelph. No meetings have been arranged for the 16th, but on the 17th Sir William will speak at Owen Sound and on the 18th at Barrie.

Bovril contains the goodness of the beef.

THE vital elements that give beef its special place and value as a food are concentrated and stored in Bovril.

Just as the equivalent light of 32 candles is concentrated in one electric lamp, so the vital elements of beef—of many pounds of beef—are concentrated in 1 shilling bottle of Bovril.

Bovril is not merely a prepared food in itself: it possesses the peculiar power of enabling you to extract more nourishment from other foods. This gives Bovril its wonderful body-building power, proved by independent experiment to be from 12 to 20 times the amount in beef. Bovril, therefore, is the true sense of the word, a Great Food Saver.

Dearest mother thou hast left us,
And your loss we cannot fill;
But we know that Jesus took you,
Ever more with Him to dwell.

With chastened hearts we mourn and weep,
For those who rest in their last sleep.
Our sorrow Jesus does defend,
He will not weep for His dead friend.

When life's wild is drawing near,
Jesus, our Lord, dispell all fear
And bear us safely o'er the tide,
To meet upon the other side.

MADGE KENNEDY AT PALACE

The many admirers of Madge Kennedy are in evidence at every performance at the Palace where she is appearing this week end in her new Goldwyn play, "A Daughter of Mine." The British Canadian Pathe News and the 14th chapter of "The Lure of the Circus" is also being shown on the same program.

VIVIAN MARTIN

Another story by Frances Hodgson Burnett, the famous author whose greatest achievements are novels written around juvenile characters, has been adapted and produced with Vivian Martin as the star. It is "Louisiana." In the picture which is being shown at Griffin's to-night for the last time, Miss Martin is presented in an ideal characterization, that of a sweet girl who has spent her childhood days high up in the mountains of South Carolina and whose father, desiring that she should see something of the world sends her in a southern resort. There she meets Laurence Feral and the romance begins. The heavy role is played by a young lover who has known the little girl from child hood and who is insanely jealous of her. He follows her to the city, and seeing her in the company of Feral shoots to kill, the events that follow will be found of engrossing interest. On the same program with the above offering will be presented "Evolution of the Bottle," an interesting educational play, a Lyons-Moran comedy, Gaumont News, showing the funeral of the martyred Nurse Cavell, and a Christie comedy. Three good vaudeville features in the DuBarry's, in harmony singing and pianologue, one of the members of this specialty is a clever female impersonator, Valle, wizard of the accordion, and Lew Lewis black face monologue artist.

FAIRBANKS IN NEW STUNTS

"Doug" Fairbanks has a suit case full of brand new stunts that he introduces in his 7-reel picture, "The Knickerbocker Buckaroo," which is to be shown at Griffin's this Monday to Wednesday with a special bargain matinee Wednesday. One of the exciting episodes is that of the screen athlete climbing out of the window of a speeding Pullman, continuing up to the roof of the car and running along on the top of the train, then jumping to the swinging arm of a water feeder from which he leaps onto the back of a horse. This is the start of a thrilling chase in which two hundred cowboys pursue Fairbanks for miles up into the hills. Arrangements were made with the Director General of Railroads for the use of an entire train for the scene as above described. An abandoned track in the San Fernando California desert was selected for the location because of the story demanding the desert atmosphere. Besides the above offering is now Mack Sennett comedy three other selected plays will also be screened. Three big city vaudeville specialties will also be presented on the same program.

Sporting News

GOOD BOXING BOUTS

Only a fair-sized crowd attended the boxing bouts staged at the City Hall, last evening by Mr. A. Drummond, of returned soldiers, of Peterboro, who has successfully promoted a number of interesting athletic events throughout Ontario. The boxing bouts last evening gave complete satisfaction to those present and were clean, clever an dexciting, although there was no blood spilled or any visible marks of punches landed, some of which looked hard enough to leave reminders of the contests. There were two fast preliminaries between local lads and then the main bout scheduled for ten rounds but which ended in the sixth with the Buffalo lad, Kid Jarvis unable to continue against Fred Crompton, the Toronto boxer. Crompton showed himself the best boxer and ring general, slow, careful sure and methodical, while the Buffalo lad was the more clever boxer, fast on his feet and packing a punch when if he had been able to land oftener might have changed things some. Crompton was shifty, however and generally managed to be elsewhere when the Jarvis haymaker swung in his direction. Jarvis was game all through and stood up to the Toronto boxer who bored in constantly and forced his opponent into frequent clinches. Up to the 6th round the contest was very evenly contested with the winner in doubt but the Buffalo lad's actions were seen to have held upon his energy and he signed up while Crompton came on with more steam and went out in the sixth when Jarvis went down for the count of six, gamely rose and tried to continue but was floored again, rising again at the count of nine, but a moment later was counted out.

Jarvis' gameness, his gentlemanly appearance and tactics won the admiration of the boxing fans present, Crompton was also admired for his strength, ability and ring generalship. He also played the game as a true sportsman should.

In the preliminaries, L. Carnahan and S. Casaia, 115 pounders went three rounds, the bout being declared a draw. Carnahan seemed a shade or two the better boxer, but Carson made up in aggressiveness what he lacked in ability.

Two 130 pound boxers, Roy and Sandford furnished a good bout of three rounds which was declared a draw. Roy appeared the better boxer but Sandford evened up by his willingness to lead although his work was not as effective.

Jack Mackie officiated as referee in a very capable manner and announced that Mr. Drummond had arranged a number of good contests and would place Belleville on the circuit despite the rather small attendance at the first bout.

Dreaded Influenza

Medical Men Believe It Will Again Visit Canada This Autumn and Winter

There is a widespread belief among medical men that the epidemic of la grippe or influenza, which swept over the world last year, will again appear in Canada during this autumn and coming winter. This dangerous trouble spares neither age nor sex, but it naturally folds its easiest victims among those who are run down in health, or those whose blood is weak and watery, and it is among the latter class in which the greatest number of fatalities occur. The surest way to prevent an attack of this dreaded trouble is to keep the blood rich and pure, and the safest and best way to do this is through the use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

No reasonable precaution to avert an attack of influenza or la grippe should be neglected. The disease itself is deadly, but its after-effects, among those who are spared, make the life of the victim one of constant misery. Ask almost any of those who have been attacked by influenza what their present condition of health is and most of them will answer "Since I had the influenza I have never been fully well." This trouble leaves behind it a persistent weakness of the limbs, shortness of breath, bad digestion, palpitation of the heart, and a tired feeling after even slight exertion. This is due to the thin-blooded condition in which la grippe almost always leaves its victims after the fever and influenza has been subdued. They are at the mercy of relapses and complications, often very serious. This condition will continue until the blood is built up again, and for the purpose of building up the blood and strengthening the nerves nothing can equal a fair treatment with Dr. Williams Pink Pills. From first to last dose these pills make new, rich blood, which reaches every organ and nerve in the body. Thus the lingering germs are driven out, and the weak, despondent victims of influenza are transformed into cheerful, healthy, happy men and women.

For better still, you can put yourself in a condition to resist an attack of influenza by enriching the blood through the use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and this, it seems, is the sensible thing to do at once.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE GUARDIAN SPEAKS.

The father of Hartley Dewart, Liberal leader in Ontario, at one time occupied the position of editor of the Christian Guardian, official publication of the Methodist Church in Canada. It is natural then to suppose that the Guardian would be as friendly as possible to the aspirations of Hartley Dewart to become Premier of Ontario. Unfortunately for Dewart this is not possible, as the Guardian sees it, and the organ of Methodism has opposed him from the day of his selection as "so-called" leader of the Liberals of Ontario. In this week's issue the Guardian makes strong pronouncement upon the candidature of Hartley Dewart, as follows:

> It may be that there are some people simple enough to believe that the liquor interests are out of politics, and to think that the temperance people who should keep out of politics. But the temperance man who thinks that the liquor men are contented to abide by the result of the referendum, and that they are simply quiescent in politics, is surely a novice at reading the signs of the times. There are two men whom the liquor men around here hate worse than they do their great nameless ally. Those two men are Sir Wm. Hearst and the Hon. N. W. Rowell; and there is nothing being left undone politically to destroy those men. Mr. Rowell is in the Dominion Cabinet and he is regarded as the leader of the prohibition party at Ottawa; while Mr. Hearst will never be forgiven by the liquor forces for making Ontario dry in war-time.
>
> At present the chief conflict centres in Ontario, and there are evidences at work that it is a bitter one. The Conservatives party, as a party, has not declared for prohibition, but it follows Mr. Hearst, and as long as he is leader prohibitionists have nothing to fear. But Col. Machin with his Liberty League has set loose from his party and refuses to follow Mr. Hearst. And last week, Lieut. Col. A. C. Pratt, of South Norfolk, openly repudiated Sir William, and in doing so declared that there were twenty-seven other Conservative M.P.P.'s who were in agreement with him; and he claimed that Sir Adam Beck was one of the discontented ones. Of course Col. Pratt said that he differed with Sir William on the nickel question and on the question of the "Hydro"; but we strongly suspect that the "bolters" are not bolting because of these things.
> From the very beginning of the agitation for the Government control of nickel mining and refining the Christian Guardian has urged the necessity of speedy action in this direction; and we think the Government out to push the great "Hydro" projects with all its strength. But just now the most important issue before the people of Ontario is not nickel, nor even Hydro, but whether or no Ontario shall stay dry. The liquor men are trying desperately to confuse the issue, and to rally men under its banner by means of political appeals; but to the clear-sighted patriot there is but one great issue just now, and that the temperance one. On that issue Sir William Hearst has spoken with a clearness that no one can mistake, and because of his uncompromising attitude, what is perhaps the most desperate attempt ever made in the Province to unseat a political leader, is now being made within the Conservative party to get rid of Mr. Hearst; and to replace him by a man whom the liquor interests will find more pliable.

We have no doubt that we shall carry the referendum by a great majority, but that majority will be useless if the head of the Government is a man over whom the liquor forces exercise control. A prohibitory law, half-heartedly enforced, may easily prove a curse. We are glad to welcome the United Farmers with their strong prohibitory views, and their freedom from liquor control, and we trust that they will have a good representation in the next House.

But from the temperance point of view things have not gone well with the Liberal party in Ontario. The State-man, which claims to be an official representative of Liberalism, is anti-and-out against prohibition, and it will no doubt have the very best wishes of the Toronto Star, the Liberal party, as a party, has declared for advanced temperance legislation, but the liquor men would ask no better leader for their purpose than Mr. Dewart, who, when elected was supposed to be the choice of the liquor men, and who has never yet given any hint that he favored prohibition. We said before that many temperance Liberals would absolutely refuse to follow Mr. Dewart, and we see no reason to revise our statement. For this Mr. Dewart can blame no one but himself.

THE LATEST CHARGE.

The latest charge against Sir William Hearst is that he is getting too old. Too old! Sir William, we find, is but fifty-five—a mere youth, so far as politics is concerned. At fifty-five Sir Wilfrid Laurier was just beginning his premiership. So, for that matter, was Sir Robert Borden. Politics, in fact, seems to be an old man's game. When Palmerston became premier he was twelve years older than Sir William Hearst is now. The same age—sixty-seven—found Mr. Gladstone, after two years of semi-retirement, just starting on his Bulgarian atrocities campaign, Midlothian and all its consequences, with three more periods as Prime Minister still in store for him.

Sir William's opponents must find a better argument. The Conservative leader is still well able to compete in statesmanship with the youthful superman who heads the Liberal party.—Ottawa Journal.

SOLDIERS' GRATUITIES.

There has been prepared at Ottawa a chart showing the war service gratuities given in Great Britain, the United States and the British Colonies which shared in the war in a large way. According to it, a private soldier of up to three years overseas receives the following sums on or after discharge:

	Married.	Single.
Canada	$600.00	$420.00
Australia	114.15	98.62
Great Britain	82.73	82.73
United States	60.00	60.00
New Zealand	54-55	34-09

From these it will be seen that Canada sends the soldier out of the military service with a bonus over his regular pay and allowances, from four to ten times as great as that of the countries named. In Canada, Great Britain and the United States the armies were raised partly by voluntary enlistment and partly by conscription. In Australia the service was voluntary all through. In Canada, the United States and Australia the rate of pay was the highest ever accorded to national armies, and the provision for the health and comfort of the soldiers set a new standard for high efficiency, compared even with Japan and Germany. The question is not one of the sufficiency of the compensation for service that may not be compensated by money payments. The records, however, do show that in liberality of treatment of the men who did their duty Canada is far in the front.—Montreal Gazette.

ON THE ROAD TO GOWGANDA.

Because the Conservative administration of the public affairs of the Province of Ontario has been the best ever experienced by the province, without a breath of scandal in connection with its long term of office, the Dewart forlorn hope is hard pressed for accusations to level at the Government as alleged reasons why Hartley Dewart should be handed the keys of office. Away up in the Elk Lake District of New Ontario Col. Harry McKee, who lives at the end of the Kawagama road, practices law and prospects for gold and silver, with ever a watchful eye out for possible Tory corruptionists, has dug up an alleged scandal against the Government.

Col. McKee says there were nine horses for fifteen men on a road job.

Horrible, isn't it, that away up in the wilderness of Gowganda it might have been found temporarily impossible to secure enough laborers to keep the foremen reasonably busy?

Of course those who know Col. Harry's Baron Munchausen proclivities in political matters only laugh at his latest effort to get the spotlight.

If Col. McKee had not been so busy watching the roadmakers he might have been able to accompany his battalion overseas, with the chance of winning all kinds of glory and honor—entirely non-political.

CRISP COMMENT

Horrors! That an O'Flynn should be fightin' sign Ireland! The black-hearted rascal!

As between the bottle and the boy, Hearst or thirst, wet or dry, the Globe chooses Dewart.

× × ×

The Liberals, with a "so-called" leader favored by the booze-for-profit interests, are posing as the only all-wool-and-a-yard-wide temperance party. All in favor of hypocrisy and two-faced political tricksters vote for Dewart.

× × ×

The Toronto Globe, camouflaged leader of the Dewart forces, declares that "thousands of Conservatives, including a number of candidates, openly disown Sir William Hearst's leadership because he is a prohibitionist," thus insinuating that thousands of Conservatives are so besotted by love of liquor that they will scrap their lifetime political principles and, regard for the welfare of the province generally and support the leader who, according to the Globe and others, is the rising hope of those financially interested in the unrestricted sale of intoxicants. Thousands of Conservatives will resent the Globe's calumny.

"If we are to believe them all," says the Calgary Herald, "the producer makes no money, the wholesaler makes no money, and the retailer makes no money, while at the same time they all live, and the consumer keeps on paying more and more. 'Tis a queer world."

Capt. Dallin has made a record by flying from Toronto to Kingston, a distance of 160 miles, in 70 minutes. That is pretty fast going. But some Toronto bowlers who recently motored to Brampton say that they left here at five minutes past two, and arrived there at five minutes before two—according to the Brampton clocks.—Toronto Star.

The London Post points out that England doesn't grant self-determination to Ireland "for the very same reason that justified Abraham Lincoln in denying self-determination to the South." United States papers and politicians are so anxious to settle things for Ireland should consider this phase of the question.

The Liberals have not helped themselves a great deal by reviving war time animosities or by holding a post-mortem over the elections of 1917. writes the Toronto World parliamentary correspondent. The soldier vote after all, did not cut much figure in the election. Some fifty thousand votes cast by the soldiers were not counted because evidently cast in districts where the soldiers were not entitled to vote. Joe Archibald's case against the wholesale voting of soldiers in Chambly and Vercheres is lost much of its force when the House learned from Mr. Meighen and Dr. Edwards that the great majority of these ballots had been rejected by the chief returning officer.

On Friday the House sat for only two hours, but it was long enough for the Opposition to make another blunder. Hon. Adolphe Lemieux and A. R. McMaster of Brome objected to an amendment to the Dominion by-elections act disfranchising Hindoos, Chinese and Japs in British Columbia, and thereby did their best to bring about the return of D. E. F. Tolmie, the new Minister of Agriculture, by acclamation at the Victoria-Saanich case against the B.C. The B.C. people are never free from the nightmare of the yellow peril, and both the speeches of Mr. Lemieux and Mr. McMaster will be construed as committing the Liberals to a wide-open door policy on the subject of oriental immigration.—Toronto World.

The Liberal party, disorganized for years, is hoping to reassert itself. Mr. Rowell's temperance activities demoralized the liquor element in the party and alienated many votes which had long been Liberal. It is practically certain that this part of the Liberal vote will be solidly behind Mr. Dewart, and it may possibly be reinforced by part of the liquor vote from the Conservative side. But on the other hand, there are temperance Liberals not a few who have long prided themselves upon belonging to a "temperance" party, and there is no doubt that many of these, if they vote Liberal, will do so with more or less misgiving.—Christian Guardian.

OTHER VIEWS

Proofreading.

New York Sun.

Some time ago we were impelled to express a mild wonder as to what had become of the old time proofreader, who seems to have vanished from our book publishing houses. We were inclined to suppose the messy fondness of most of the current books to be some curious by-product of the war, possibly all the good proofreaders (outside of newspaper offices) were making munitions or drawing up treaties for a League of Nations—but it's worse than we thought today. Why?

If it were only here and there, or if it were confined to cheap or hastily made books, it would be negligible. But it isn't. The carelessness and inaccuracy appear in nearly every new book; in scientific or scholastic treatises, histories, poems, as well as in the most hustling "best seller" novel. Is the proofreader becoming extinct, or have the publishers ceased to care for accuracy?

We do not refer to mere occasional lapses, the lapus linoiyph—the lost comma, wrong accent or dropped letter, but to the more egregious blunders that make sheer nonsense out of the author's work.

Quite a Good Many.

London Free Press.

An agitation to increase the indemnity of $2,500 to $4,000 per session was begun at Ottawa this year, and it is just possible that the Government's answer was found in the second session. The consequence, anyway, is that each commoner and senator draws $5,000 for his services this year, and there are a good many members in the House who at this figure have not earned their money.

The Wasteful Strike.

Buffalo News.

It is to be hoped that in the evolution of industrial relations, which is proceeding, conditions will be made such that all need of strikes will be eliminated.

Complete establishments and permanent maintenance of social justice and the spirit of equity and democracy in industry should eradicate the strike as something altogether unnecessary. These are the goal all elements of society should strive. For it is in the interest of all concerned—labor, capital and the public.

Bucking Up.

St. John Telegraph

Sir Charles Hanson, High Sheriff for Cornwall, England, and a former Lord Mayor of London, brings an encouraging message to Canada on the financial and industrial conditions in Great Britain. The British people are not breaking under the strain of the after-war burdens, he says, and there never was a time when they "displayed more brain, more resource, more enterprise, or were so keenly alive to the necessity of overcoming all obstacles that confront them."

The Poet's Corner

HAIL AND FAREWELL

Like ships that pass upon the mighty ocean,
And speak to each other—then to pass away
Into the vastness of the endless waters—
So did we meet on one fair Summer's day.

A quiet sojourn by a leafy dell
Where the bright glow-worm sheds its brilliant splendour
A word of greeting—then a fond farewell.

So it is ever in this world of shadows;
Love weds—and sleeps again—but never dies;
And in my dreams I'll see the winding river
That flows forever 'neath the Bridge of Sighs.

Though far apart the road of life must lead us
I shall be ever present at your side,
In spirit we shall wander in fair places
Together—where true love and hope abide.

Hail and farewell, companions of the twilight,
Love will endure when earth has passed away;
The sweetness of its memory passes ever
Into the dawn of everlasting day.

A Laugh or Two

Unreasonable.

A New York literary agent was talking about Alfred Noyes, the English poet, who recently wrote an article to prove that many of his brother poets are immodest in their verse.

"Noyes," said the agent, "was always a bit of a prude. Yes, even in childhood the unhappy trait manifested itself.

"Once when he was four years old, Noyes had just got out of his bath, and his nurse was advancing on him with a bath towel when the door opened and his aunt entered.

"The youngster flew into a prudish rage.

Gets Ahead of Stranger.

The stranger on a walking tour came across an "old man sitting on a gate" and began to ask questions.

"You are a farmer, I suppose?"

"Not now. I used to be, but I gave it up."

"Well, you don't seem to be very busy. You have plenty of time on your hands, haven't you?"

"Lots of it."

"Ever do any work?"

"Once I did."

"What do you do now, if I may ask?"

"Don't do nothing. Hain't done nothing for nearly 10 years."

"So, why, you're in luck. If I had done nothing for half that length of time I should be in the poorhouse."

The old man's face beamed with a glad surprise, and then, as one who knows his rare good fortune and values it at its just worth, he cried delightedly: "That's where I be!"

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER III—Continued

It was as Kent had said, intensely still. The practical disrobing itself; for a moment, he thought how blessed it would be to work here, where doors could never slam and the yells of children were unknown. They monopolise a hillock, and looked across the endless landscape silently. In the dungeons under their feet lay dead men's bones but such facts concerned him little now. Far away some cattle—or were they deer—browsed sleepily under the ponderous trees. Of what consequence if they were cattle or deer? Still further, where the blue sky dipped and the woodland rose, a line of light glinted like water. Perhaps it was water, and if not, what matter? It was the Kingdom of Imagination: deer, water, fame or love—the Earth was what he pleased! Among the crumbling walls the girl's frock fluttered charmingly; his eyes left the landscape and sought her face.

"It is divine!" she said.

He did not disguise from himself that life without her would be unendurable.

"I knew it would please you," he said unsteadily.

Kent stood beside her in a pause in which he believed he struggled. He felt that she was unattainable; but there was an intoxication in the moment he was not strong enough to resist. His touched her hand, and his heart pounding, met her gaze as she turned.

"Cynthia," he said in his throat. The color left her cheeks and her head drooped. "Are you angry with me?" She was eminently graceful in the attitude. "I love you," he said.—"I love you. What shall I say, besides? I love you."

She looked slowly up, and blinded him with a smile. His nerves jumped and quivered through his nerves.

"Cynthia! Can you care for me?"

"Perhaps," she whispered.

He was alone with her in Elysium; Adam and Eve were not more secure from human observation when they stood under the apple-tree. He drew nearer to her—her eyes permitted it, a miracle he had elapsed a goddess, and he would not have been aware of it had all the pins of Birmingham been concealed about her toilette to protest.

Presently she said:

"We must go back to mamma!"

He had forgotten she had one, and the recollection was a descent.

"What will she say?" he asked. I'm not a millionaire, dearest; I am afraid she won't be pleased."

"I will tell her when we get home. Oh, mamma likes you!"

"And you have a father?" he added feeling vaguely that the ideal marriage would be one between orphans, whose surviving relatives were abroad and afraid of a voyage. "Do you think they will give you to me?"

"After I have spoken to them," she said deliciously. "Yes—oh, they will no nice, I am sure, Mr. Kent!..... There, then! But one can't shorten it and it sounds a disagreeable sort of person."

"Not as you said it."

"It was very wrong of you to make me say it so soon. Are you a tyrant? ..... We must really go back to mamma!"

"Did you know I was fond of you?" asked Kent.

"I—wondered."

"Why?"

"Why did I wonder?"

"Yes."

"I don't know."

"No; tell me! Was it because—you liked me?"

"You are vain enough already."

"Haven't I an excuse for vanity?"

"Am I?"

Language failed him.

"Tell me why you wondered," he begged.

"Because——You are wickedly persistent!"

"I am everything that is awful, Cynthia?"

"Yes!"

"Because you liked me?"

"Perhaps; the weeniest scrap in the world. Oh, you are horrid! Who things you make me say! And we are only just——"

"Engaged! It's a glorious word; don't be afraid of it."

"I shall be afraid of you in a minute. How do you think of your—your proposals in your books?"

"I have only written one book."

"Did you make it up? He didn't talk as you talk to me!"

"He wasn't so madly in love with her."

"But he said the very sweetest things!"

"That's why."

"You are horrid!" she declared again. "I know what you mean a bit..... Mr. Kent!"

"Who is he?"

"Mr. Kent!"

"Yes—sweetheart?"

"Now you've put it out of my head" She laughed softly. "I was going to say something."

"Let me look at you till you think what it was."

"I believe you're being silly," she said, in a puzzled tone. "I don't understand. Oh, we must go back to mamma; she'll think we're lost!"

Same Priveleges For Imperials

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—Arrangements have now been concluded by which ex-members of the Imperial forces who were prewar residents in Canada and who have since resumed residence in the Dominion are to receive pensions, medical treatment when necessary, vocational retraining and prosthetic appliances under the same rates and conditions as applied to ex-members of the Canadian forces.

Although the care of ex-members of the Imperial forces, who enlisted from Canada to the number of about 60,000, is not one of the duties with which the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment is charged, it was felt by the Minister, Sir James Lougheed, that certain anomalies existed in regard to these ex-members of the Imperial forces resident in Canada as to Governmental benefits.

Went to Consult Imperials

In order to remove such anomalies, Mr. E. H. Scammell, Assistant Deputy Minister of the department, was instructed to proceed to England in order to discuss with the Imperial authorities reciprocal arrangements for the administration of pensions, medical treatment and vocational retraining of ex-members of the Imperial forces in Canada, and of ex-Canadians who have taken up residence in the United Kingdom. Associated with him in the negotiations were Mr. T. W. Stockdale, officer paying Imperial pensions in Canada, and representatives of the Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada.

Have the Option

As a result of the movement initiated by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment and the Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada ex-Imperials in Canada, the United States and Newfoundland have the option of taking the Canadian rate of pensions based on the Canadian disability table.

Under these arrangements the pensions of widows and children resident in Canada would be paid at the Canadian rate.

Receive Medical Treatment

Ex-members of the Imperial forces in Canada requiring further medical treatment for war disability are to receive such treatment at the hands of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, and will receive the difference, if any, between their Imperial pension and the Canadian rate of treatment allowances.

Ex-Imperials in Canada are eligible for retraining under the Canadian regulations, and are to receive Canadian allowances during such training.

Ex-Imperials in Canada and the United States requiring artificial limbs, surgical and orthopaedic appliances are to be dealt with by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Reestablishment.

Applies to Newfoundland

All these arrangements also apply to ex-Imperials now resident in Newfoundland, who will be dealt with by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment and the Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada by arrangement with the Government of Newfoundland.

On the other hand, ex-members of the Canadian forces now in the United Kingdom will come under the care of the British Ministry of Pensions and the British Ministry of Labor for such treatment as may be necessary, and will share in the benefits of the retraining offered in the United Kingdom.

Pensions paid to ex-Canadians now resident in the United Kingdom will be at the Canadian rate but treatment or training allowances will be paid to such men at the British rates. Canadians now in hospital in the United Kingdom will be taken care of by the Imperial Government, and provision has been made to supply, where necessary, artificial limbs and appliances and for the renewal and repair of such limbs and appliances.

A SIMPLE METHOD TO REMEDY RHEUMATISM

AGE DOES NOT INTERFERE IF TREATMENT IS PROPERLY FOLLOWED

Many persons contend that there is no sure remedy for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Neuritis, or their kindred diseases, but don't be biased: draw your own conclusions from the proof submitted.

Over two years ago, William Nesbitt of 113 John St., Toronto, Ontario, was attacked by Rheumatism. Mr. Nesbitt was 52 years of age at the time and he feared the worst. After trying many remedies and prescriptions without obtaining relief he took a friend's advice and used Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules. To-day Mr. William Nesbitt says, "He hasn't lost a day's work since nor fears Rheumatism any more."

Alcoholic Insanity Disappears

Our Foremost Alienist Says It Has Now Practically Vanished

"SINCE the passage of the Ontario Temperance Act Alcoholic Insanity has practically disappeared," says Dr. C. K. Clarke, Canada's foremost Alienist.

Dr. Clarke's statement to the Ontario Referendum Committee continues:

"ALCOHOL is one of the important factors among the causes of insanity, especially indirectly. Since the passage of the Ontario Temperance Act certain forms of insanity in this province have practically disappeared.

"The abolition of the bar has undoubtedly had a wonderful effect in protecting the weaklings in the community from temptation and inevitable degradation.

"It is much too soon to determine how far-reaching the benefits of prohibition have been, but doubtless police and jail statistics will bear testimony as to the diminution of crime.

"The removal of the bar must be regarded with satisfaction by every right-thinking person in the country, especially by those who know how easily mental weaklings and neurotics fell into deplorable habits through its malign influence.

"It was not that these persons suffered alone, but that many of the next generations lost whatever chance they had of living down the curse of a bad heredity.

"Alcohol simply intensified the defects of the parent and thus made hopeless the lives of the children."

DR. C. K. CLARKE

The Menace of Insanity

"Insanity is the Mad Son of Alcohol, Idiocy is its Driveling Daughter," says Vance Thompson.

ONTARIO maintains 6,000 patients in the Insane Asylums at a cost of about $1,000,000 a year and an indirect cost of many millions more.

Ontario has one insane patient to every 417 people—not including the feeble-minded. Kansas, pioneer "dry" state of the West, has only one case to every 873 people.

The menace of insanity has alarmed government authorities and brought about the recent appointment of a National Committee for Mental Hygiene, of which Dr. C. K. Clarke is the Medical Director.

Read what he says:

"Since passage of the Ontario Temperance Act, Alcoholic Insanity has practically disappeared."

Next to "mental strain, overwork and worry," "Alcoholism" is the chief assigned cause of insanity, according to the yearly reports issued by the Ontario Government. Since the Ontario Temperance Act went into force private hospitals for alcoholics, "Gold Cures," etc., have been closed.

Remember what experts on insanity say when you answer the questions on the Referendum ballot and vote for sane legislation by marking your ballot with an X after each question under the word "No."

PRINCE ELECTED CHIEF

It was at Banff that the Prince of Wales was made Chief Morning Star with the right to wear the shining buckskin robe with a blue belt of beads and a head dress of bright and nodding feathers of a chief of the Stoney Tribe.

When the Prince stepped off the train amid the high peaks and exquisite forest-clad valleys of Banff, he found himself among Indian braves clad in all the vivid colors of the spectrum, feathered and beaded from chest to moccasins and mounted on their small, swift horses.

At each branch road, a fresh body of Indians, a fresh splash of vermilion and yellow and chirrty and blue and green, moved out from amid trees and fell in behind the escort, so that as it went the cavalcade became a moving train of shifting color.

The procession went until it reached a big open race course where Indian tepees, red starred on white, and gay with flags, were set and where the ceremony was to be held. As the Prince came on to the ground, Stoney whirled their ponies about and raced through veils of dust in a ride of welcome, while the low throbbing of tom-toms joined itself to the high, thin whoop of the Indian welcome.

On a dais and in the centre of a circle of braves, some with skins painted from yellow to red, they looked like masks of death; some daubed with red, some barred with blue, some with yellow paint on dark hair, the Prince received the welcome of Young Thunder, the chief. He was a big roughly carved Indian clad in white, hairy chaps and corduroy shirt and as he read his address in singsong Cree, his body was curved back as though he still sat on a pulling horse.

He read first in his olden tongue and then in English of the honor the Prince was paying to them, and of their enduring loyalty to him and to his father, and he asked the Prince "to accept from us this Indian suit, the best we have, emblematic of the clothes we wore in happy days.

"We beg you to allow us to elect you as our chief and to give you the name of Chief Morning Star," he said. Then he handed the Prince a magnificent headdress of feathers and beads and fine buckskin robes. The Prince put on the head-dress, spoke to the circle of braves of the honor he felt they had done him.

When he finished tom-toms were beaten again, and the high thin wi[illegible] rose up from the ring which almost at once began to circle around the dais.

BURNED AT KINGSTON

The body of Marie Rosalia, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Silvia Barrette, of Pinnacle street, was taken to Kingston to-day for interment.

THE MARKET

The attendance upon the market this morning was small. Prices as usual were good. Fresh dairy butter sold at 60c and 65c. per pound. Fresh eggs commanded a high price, namely 60c. and 65c. per dozen. Potatoes sold at 40c. per peck, chickens $1.00 to $2.00 per pair, ducks from $1.00 to $1.50. Garden produce at various prices

AN ATHLETIC FIELD

A general athletic field, centrally located, is one of the public necessities missing in Belleville. There is a strong feeling that a recreation park equipped for all kinds of athletic sports should be provided and Alderman Hanna is calling a meeting of citizens for Wednesday evening in the City Hall to consider the question. There should be a large attendance as this is a most progressive movement worthy of united support.

ELECTION OFFICERS MEET

Mr. A. M. Dymond, chief election officer for the Province of Ontario, was in the city today meeting the various returning officers for this district and clearing up any points of law or procedure in regard to the conduct of the election upon which they might not be clear. The following returning officers were in attendance at the meeting: W. H. Stallwyer, Trenton, West Hastings; E. Z. Calnan, Picton; Peterboro and Edward: G. F. Rattan, Napanee, Lennox; George H. Dickson, Frank, East Hastings; John West, Harold, North Hastings.

ADVERTISING COPY

Owing to the large and rapidly increasing number of tradesmen of Belleville it will be necessary to insist that advertising copy, changes, etc., be left in the office by the day 24 hours prior to publication to insure insertion. Even with an increased staff it is impossible to put advertisements into type when the copy is delayed. To make absolutely certain of publication have the copy the day before publication is required.

TREASURE HUNTERS

A treasure hunt is on today which may dwarf the wildest scenes in "Treasure Island" and uncover treasure troves of amazing value. Certain it is that the thirty-five Y. M. C. A. boys who took to the bush this morning upon a regular treasure hunt came back with something—it is only hickory nuts, Messrs. P. F. Brocks and Fred Deacon provided the pack and left scout signs along the trail indicating the general direction in which a hunt for the buried treasure would be most successful. Mr. Angus Buchanan, Director of Boys Work, led the gang, and at last reports the treasure hunters were going strong and picking up the trail with the skill of the best of Fenimore Cooper trackers.

PREMIER COMING

Sir William Hearst, Premier of Ontario, will address a mass meeting of citizens in Belleville next Saturday, October 11.

Y. M. C. A. FOREIGN WORK

A number of Belleville business men interested in Y.M.C.A. work, assembled in the Association building last evening to meet Mr. George Gleason, a Y. M. C. A. worker in Japan, who has just spent some time in Siberia recently. He was served, and a very interesting hour or two spent. President H. W. Ackerman was in the Chair and introduced Mr. H. R. Caskey, International Secretary, now stationed in Toronto in connection with the foreign work of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Caskey gave a very interesting talk on the Y.M.C.A. work in foreign fields, and the need for more workers. Mr. Gleason, who with his wife have served eighteen years in the Y.M.C.A. work in Japan, gave a very illuminating and interesting account of the necessity and benefit of the work. He was in Manchuria during the Russo-Japanese war, and has recently returned from Siberia where he conducted Y.M.C.A. work among the soldiers, principally those from Japan, travelling 4,000 miles in a freight car fitted up as a club room, canteen and living apartment. Christian leadership is the one great need to settle all the friction and problems of the Orient at present. Mr. Gleason's opinion, and the League of Nations with Christian leadership is bound to be a success. He made a strong plea for workers and financial support of the foreign Y. M. C. A. work, and said surely there were men in Belleville who could and would undertake the support of one worker overseas for the cause of Christianity, and as an insurance against the menace of an unchristian

Long-Standing Evil
Effective Measures Taken

Have children? Mr. A. Citi who sells a standee is a great evil when sleep is disturbed by baby's cry. Said what he says:

"For two years baby my 3 1/2 years since childhood and spent a huge amount of money trying to relieve baby's suffering. Then baby 7 box getting worse until I got Dr. Chase's Ointment. The first box gave relief. I did so, and after using two boxes baby was entirely cured. I am still a user of Dr. Chase's Ointment as it is the best and most reliable for children's skin troubles. I have had no end of trouble with baby's head but after using Dr. Chase's Ointment it cleared right up. Mothers, if you have baby's head and have tried without success, get Dr. Chase's Ointment. You will be delighted with the results. Price 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Ointment is the best remedy for eczema, salt rheum, piles, chafing, scalds, sunburn, chapped hands, chilblains, and all skin troubles. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are unequalled for kidney and liver troubles, backache, headache, biliousness, dizziness, sleeplessness, indigestion, and all stomach disorders. Price 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Superintendent of Nursing School Says Internal Bathing Gives Best Results In Constipation

Dr. R. M. Smythe, President and Superintendent, Dominion School of Nursing, Toronto, writes: "I have much pleasure in stating you a letter recommending the J.B.L. Cascade. I shall also be pleased to do so personally or by phone. From personal experience also from that of many patients who are using J.B.L. Cascade I have no hesitation in recommending it to anyone with constipation or any trouble arising therefrom. It benefits in such cases at once, in my own case as well as in others it has have completely under my notice. It has certainly been the means of bringing about many wonderful cures of constipation and various stomach troubles. I have much pleasure in recommending the Cascade."

If you are troubled with headaches, biliousness, bad breath, rheumatism, sallow complexion, or any trouble arising from imperfect elimination, we would urge you to try Internal Bathing by means of the J.B.L. Cascade. This wonderful health-giving appliance is shown and explained at J. S. McKeown, Drug Store, Phone or call them for free booklet all about it—or write Tyrell's Hygienic Institute, 163 College St., Toronto.

Letters To The Editor

BIBLE SOCIETY

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir:—May I crave by my practice of past years, of making free use of your valuable reading space, in the interests of the Belleville Bible Society. In response to the request of the Executive, the needs and work of the Society, and its benefit to the world at large were presented from the pulpits of your city last Sunday. The city has been divided into fourteen districts. Ladies, sufficient in number to have one in each district, have kindly consented to canvass the citizens for their yearly contributions to the Society.

Those good "Tokatallows" will now be entering upon the duties they have willingly and cheerfully assumed, and humbly, and respectfully ask, for them, from the good people of Belleville, a kind reception, and also a generous response to their appeal.

Life membership certificates may be had in the Upper Canada Bible Society for $50.00, in the Belleville Society $25.00.

The annual public meeting, for presenting reports, electing officers and conferring life membership, will D. V. be held in St. Andrews Church on December 10.

Thanking you Mr. Editor, believe me,

Yours sincerely,
A. M. HUDLY, Pres.,
491 Euclid Ave, Toronto.

A Tip Top Investment

Foresight is the greatest factor in saving yourself time, money and annoyance.

Don't continue sending good money after bad—by buying poor roofing to patch and repatch your old roofs. Invest in and obtain lasting satisfaction, durability and economy.

PAROID

Once Neponset Paroid Roofing is laid it forms an ideal roof, either on new buildings or over old shingles. It can be put on quickly without litter or fuss. Costs half the price of shingles and pays for itself by wearing for years.

Neponset Paroid Roofing can be used on any building no matter how large or small. Its fire and weather-resisting properties give it first place among roofings.

67 YEARS OF GROWTH

IN the early days the founder of this business made a few gross of matches a day, and sold them himself, driving his horse and waggon as far as Toronto. To-day, from automatic machines, 70,000,000 matches a day are turned out to keep Canada's home fires burning. And not matches alone: Indurated fibreware, household helps, and a host of paper products have been added to this line.

The House of Eddy

has become an institution which touches the daily life of the Canadian public in a thousand different ways.

There is a reason back of this steady and consistent growth. Business institutions do not grow to such proportions by accident. It takes real merit to accomplish such a result; merit in the goods themselves, and in the concern which is back of them.

When you buy matches, see that Eddy's name is on the box. When you are in need of some of the familiar household helps, such as a washtub, a pail, or a washboard, remember that there is an Eddy product which will fill your needs, made from light and durable Indurated Fibreware. Remember, also that Eddy's Paper Specialties are standard.

Our Prestige is your Safeguard when you buy Eddy Products

Doubly-Saving and Double-Acting

Paying a high price for a baking powder does not guarantee you the most. High prices are sometimes charged for the impression they make.

EGG-O Baking Powder

is doubly saving because it is sold at a fair price, and its double action—in the bowl and the oven—makes it a never-failing leavener.

Buying Egg-O in the larger sized tins is most economical for family use.

Always follow the directions—one level teaspoonful to one level cup of well sifted flour.

Willard Storage Battery

Service First Advice Second Sales Third

There's our policy in a nutshell.

First—When the customer comes in, find out what HE wants. Give him satisfaction at the lowest cost consistent with a good, thorough job.

Second—Tell him how to prevent battery trouble. We'll not endeavor to repair his battery, except to make it last longer.

Third—When he really needs a new battery, be glad to sell it from us, naturally, but if he wants to buy elsewhere, tell him the best installation—because we have the reputation of Willard Batteries and Service to maintain.

Come in and find out the wonderful merits of Willard Batteries and Service for yourself.

FOR SATURDAY ON

WARM WINTER BEDDING

For this season The Ritchie Store stocked up heavily months ago so that we could keep up our reputation as being the "Best" place to Buy Bedding. We think our values this season are unusually exceptional, when one considers the prevailing high cost of materials that go to make warm and dependable Blankets. This department is now located on the Main Floor opposite the office, thus making these extra special Blanket values easily accessible to all economizing shoppers.

Real Genuine Bargains on Wool Blankets

Blankets that we have had in stock for several years and all marked at the orig'nal price. Not a large quantity, of cour'e, but every pair in a high grade all-wool quality that could not be duplicated today for almost double our asking prices. CARTIER'S MONUMENT

SUITABLE MEMORIAL ERECTED TO GREAT STATESMAN.

Speaking of the French-Canadian Leader, Sir John A. Macdonald Said: "But for Him Confederation Could Not Have Been Carried.—He Believed Strongly In British Institutions.

THE first stone of the national monument erected at the foot of Mount Royal in honor of the memory of Sir George Etienne Cartier, champion of Canadian liberties, statesman, legist and patriot, was laid on September 21, 1913, with state ceremonial, by Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, G.C.M.G., administrator in the unavoidable absences of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. Many notables were present, among them the Prime Minister and Mr. W. Taft (ex-President U.S.A.). September 6, after six years delay, caused by the war, the monument was unveiled with fitting ceremonial by His Majesty the King. Although seated in the heart of the Empire, the marvelous advance of electric appliances has enabled him, by touching a button, to inaugurate the monument in Montreal, which is so stately and fitting in memorial to one of the most faithful servants of the Crown and Empire, and devoted champion of British interests.

Only a brief resume of the life and work of Sir George Cartier can be given here, for both may be held to represent the history of Canada during the twenty-five years of national events, in which he figured on the public stage. He was born of stern ling old French-Canadian stock at St. Antoine-on-the-Richelieu, September 6, 1814. He was barely more than of age when, in a law office headed by an enthusiastic contestant for constitutional rights and liberties, he found himself in the midst of the political agitation which culminated in the armed insurrection of 1837, for That he took a part with those we are accustomed to hear called "rebels" is true, and judging from the history of the times he was not wholly inexcusable. But the cause of the unfortunate friction were smoothed away and evil influences in the circle of Government corrected. Ten years later, when certain people, many not classed as rebels, formulated a program of annexation, Cartier was foremost in denouncing the proposition and asserted, in words fitting in which other concerned, that British institutions would remain all prot ected evils and "publicly and solemnly protested against the opinion enunciated" in the annexation manifesto. And his whole public life after that dark period was given to the task of loyally advancing Canadian interests, under the all-protecting British flag. It was not until the year 1848 that he left the seclusion of his law office and study and entered public life, but from that date until his death in 1873 he never left it, and his life was given to the welfare and advancement of the country he loved so well. And it was not long before his great ability placed him in the foremost offices of public trust, firstly Attorney-General of Lower Canada. From 1858 to 1862 he occupied the position of Prime Minister in the old Province of Canada, and his treasure of office was signalized by great provincial progress and administrative ability. He notably devoted himself to reform in legal matters. Civil law were codified and Superior Court districts established.

The period was one in which political agitation ran high and Cartier held the helm with a firm hand and kept the ship of state on a steady course and led to the haven of Confederation. When the great scheme was brought within the arena of possible accomplishment he fought for it with all his great force and influence in the teeth of great, and well conducted, opposition. And with such effect that we have the recorded assurance of Sir John Macdonald that "but for him, Confederation could not have been carried," and Sir Charles Tupper has also stated that "without Cartier there could have been no Confederation," and has truly added that "therefore Canada owes him a debt of gratitude that can never be repaid." Did nothing else stand to his credit he would deserve the best monument his country could give him. But he has to be credited with the composition and construction of the Grand Trunk and Victoria Bridge, the Seigneurial Tenure abolition, the establishment of Normal schools and organization of the educational system, canalization, establishment of the Provinces of Manitoba and British Columbia, and the International. It was he who, in 1872, introduced the Canadian Pacific Railway proposition, before the House of Commons. This proved to be his valedictory for his premature death occurred in the following year, and Cartier's work was left for others of Canada, and the fleeting reek of popular applause for years indicated that his fellow citizens felt and appreciated the fact. But in the year 1872 the uncertain of popular applause was demonstrated in Montreal East, when he met parliamentary defeat, a comparatively unknown aspirant to parliamentary favors being his opponent. Although elected elsewhere within a few days, the setting was evidently keenly felt by his sensitive nature and he went to England, a sick man. The best specialists failed to check the fatal malady he was suffering from and he died in the following year. Every form of public honor was paid to his memory. Parliament adjourned after passing eulogistic resolutions and deciding to erect a monument, now on Parliament Hill, and voting for a public funeral, that the tribute was more than deserved. After his defeat in Montreal East the Governor-General (Lord Dufferin) wrote to him a sympathetic letter in which the following words very truly summarized the life work of the distinguished Minister: "The distinction your career has not been merely personal for your name is inscribed among the most eventful and most glorious epoch of your country's history, commencing as it does with your entrance into political life and culminating in that consolidation of the provinces to which your genius, courage and ability so materially contributed."

The monument erected by the public in Montreal is a noble specimen of the sculptor's art. A base and column 100 feet high bears a winged figure of Heaven crowning the statue of Cartier, a very likeness of the day. Other figures are emblematic of the provinces; education and law; the figure of a soldier defending the flag, typifying the thought expressed by Cartier in a speech at the Provincial Conference at Halifax in 1864—"The defence of the flag is one of the bases of Confederation." In all, sculptors' skill has adorn the granite column. They are from the studio of Mr. W. Hemy, and were cast in Brussells. For a time it was feared that the bronze had sent them to the bottom of the Atlantic, but fortunately the fear proved groundless. Enjoyment was felt notably "Before all let us be Canadians." Such a sentiment from a writer when a youth; "O Canada, Mon Pays Mes Amours" is the theme which gave great pleasure to Edward VII. when hearing as Prince of Wales with Sir George, in 1860. Mr. Hemy Villeneuve, ex-controller, Montreal, president of the Centenary Committee, has to be credited with much of the effort that has brought the undertaking to its final triumph.

Strategem Used by Horse Thief.

Among the many interesting stories told by members of the Canadian Mounted Police is one that has to do with the cleverness of an Indian.

One snowy morning a band of Crees was on the trail about a dozen of their ponies had been stolen during the night. The trail of the pursuit was immediately organized, and in the course of an hour the trail was struck. The band followed the trail for many miles, until it entered a river and headed for a little wooded island.

Smoke was rising from the trees and an opening, apparently the mouth of a cave, in the bank. Instantly a Pigean Indian showed himself in front of the opening. At his heels was a dog.

Instead of soon the dog scented the Crees, who were there like a flash, began growling and barking. The Pigean looked up, placed his hands for a moment and then instantly entered the cave. A few seconds later another Pigean came round the rocks and also went in; then another and another and another. The Crees hesitated in the bushes, counting, till upward of fifty Pigeans had come round the rocks and gone into the cave, and still the dog continued to carried a rifle.

When at last seventy men had disappeared in the cave, the superintendent of police and his constables saw that the evil spirit had something to do with it. So thoroughly were they filled with the idea that even when re-enforcements came, which they did, they were afraid to venture to attack the island.

That night, however, one Cree, less credulous than the others, crossed over in the darkness, and approaching the supposed cave, he found that it was no cave at all, but simply an opening in the ground ten feet into the rock, where it made a sharp turn and led to the open air.

There was the remnant of a single camp fire, the Crees gone, and the rifle not an Indian was in sight. The inhabitants Pigeon had been making the circuit of the passage and the end of the island seventy times, had so deceived the Crees that they gain the time necessary for his escape.

Big Appetite for Bugs.

A cliff swallow will eat a thousand flies, mosquitoes or grasshoppers or beetles that injure fruit trees in a day, and there should be a bird census taged, says the American Forestry Association, Washington, which is conducting the nation-wide campaign among school children for bird-house building. Bird houses are shown at the cave swallow because it plasters its nest on the outside of a barn or other building up under the eaves. Colonies of these birds should be built their nests together on the side of a cliff. These nests shaped like a flattened gourd or watermelon are made of bits of clay rolled into pellets and lined with straw or feathers. This bird winters in the tropics.

World's Greatest Cataract.

Niagara Falls is not the greatest cataract in the world. The greatest cataract is said to be on the Iguazu River, between the provinces of Brazil and Argentina. The precipice over which the water falls is 250 feet in height, that of Niagara being 167 feet; but the Iguazu is 2,000 feet wide, or about two and a half miles, as against Niagara. It is estimated that 100,000,000 tons of water go over Niagara in one hour. A like estimate gives the falls of Iguazu 140,000,000 tons.

First Letter to Cross.

The first letter to cross the Atlantic Ocean from America was that written from the harbor of St. John's, Newfoundland, by Cabot to John Rutt to King Henry VIII. add forwarded to England in the English vessel on August 2, 1527. Captain Rutt was on a voyage of discovery to China under the patronage of King Henry. One of the two ships under Rutt's command was lost in the Straits of Belle Isle, and it was this vessel which carried the letter reported in his epistle to his royal master.

Proud of Food Destroyed.

In the port of London 5,644 tons of unsound food was condemned in 1918, as compared with 3,119 tons in the previous year.

HARVEST FROM UNDER OCEAN

Kelp Has Been Proved of Such Value In Industry That It Is Now Carefully Gathered.

A good deal has been written about the use of the seaweed, kelp, for the production of potash, and a good deal of extravagant dreaming has been indulged in. However, the kelp industry has put itself on a solid and prosperous footing, and gold in the shape of the indispensable potash is being harvested from the waters of the Pacific. The cutters or harvesters are occasionally seen, and easy one at best all the time, while the barges carry the machinery and kelp back to the wharf, where it is pumped from the boats into the fermenting tanks. Foreign matter such as bolts, nuts, etc., brought in with the kelp are removed by electromagnets before the pumps are reached.

Harvesting consists in cutting the plant about six feet below the surface of the water. It has actually been found that this treatment improves the growth and gland of the beds to such an extent that they may be cut about every 90 days. The area cut at present extends from Point Conception south to the Santa Barbara line.

The potash is all used for chemical purposes, owing to its unique purity, and there is no question of it's supply this demand. The total quantity of potash contained in the plant is not great enough to be considered seriously for fertilizer purposes. There are, however, a number of other products produced from potash which amount to quite a tonnage.

CANADA'S PROGRESS.

Another Page In Story of Country's Development.

The rush to Peace River is on. Every north-bound train is crowded with prospectors for land, for hay, for timber, for oil, for coal, for above all for chances to apply their energy, their enterprise, their experience, industry, or money to the development of the immense resources of the country for the benefit of mankind and particularly for their own personal profit and welfare.

The largest area as yet unoccupied, offering unsolicited facilities for grain and stock-raising, is the Vermillion district, which is over 150 miles in length by 50 in width, with a large watershed or river down through its centre, and with a railway 125 miles away. With the railway and Peace River the trip to this region can be made by rail, flat boat, or steamer, and the little poor lived in by one life and realized its simple customs, the fresh the stress and worry of our greater centres. The dawn of a new era is just approaching, but the transition will be a rapid.

Before the war the development of the west, the industrial activities, the breaking of new ground, was the subject of much descriptive writing. The war turned our attention to things and called the Canadians to the fails largely to the back pages of the newspapers. The Peace River is one of the great habitations that we are getting back to normal conditions, and it is destined to have an interrupted story of national possession. The country is the most dramatic; yet the more prosaic story of one of steadily growing strength. Our country is about as large as Europe, and is capable of sustaining a population equal at least to that of the greatest of European states.

Salaried Man and H. C. of L.

A prominent authority on social questions said nothing the other day when he was discussing the proposed investigation into the apparently too-high cost of living. He said that, in his opinion, investigations were the fundamental cause of the high prices of necessities, violations of laws against the unrestricted and raising of prices also might be partly responsible, and then he went on:

"There is no doubt that the man chiefly to be blamed is more prosperous than ever before, farmers and manufacturers especially. The man who has suffered from high prices is the salaried man. I wish we could do something to help him. I'm open to suggestions."

While the ones who have suggestions to offer are putting them into presentable and workable shape, it is an appropriate time to pay a deserved tribute to the qualities of the salaried man who has borne the burden of the high cost of living during the war and who has suffered perhaps more than the men who have been in big profitable businesses, more than the farmer who has sold his harvest of gold from his fields (more than the wage-earner who has found increase after increase of pay him on demand).

The average salaried man has kept on the job; he has fed and clothed his family somehow; he has done his bit by buying Victory bonds and sticking away thrift stamps and in giving to all the war causes; he has pinched and economized, and, as a rule, work evenings and spent his holidays and vacations at the home garden. He has done his duty in the main bravely, and, too, patiently, nobly.

The biggest thing about him is that he hasn't kicked and bowled—he hasn't threatened and menaced; he hasn't combined or Bolshevized; he hasn't often complained. He has, indeed, borne the middle of the big load and been a good citizen about it. He is not a whit less of a hero than many others whose work has been more spectacular and whose suffering has been more sanguine. He deserves a tribute!

INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

Plans Made by Government to Avoid Social Trouble.

More than once, during the past four years, Canada has given the pace to other countries in the matter of settling great questions, whilst on all the many issues of international concern, for the settlement of which the times are making demand, the Dominion is well in the van of progress. This is notably the case in regard to the labor situation. In Canada, as everywhere else, the labor world is in a state of flux, and the Dominion is very far from being exempt from the world agitation of the extremist, whether it be in the form of Bolshevism or One-Big-Unionism or any other form of revolutionary Socialism. Indeed, according to Mr. C. H. Cahan, head of the Canadian Department of Public Safety, the Bolshevist and Socialist element in Canada is of a peculiarly vicious type, and, only a few weeks ago, he made the statement that, in his opinion, it needed to be dealt with promptly and fearlessly.

In Canada, perhaps, more than in any other country, passing through a similar experience, Bolshevism in all its phases is seen to be largely parasitic on the life of the country, its spread is almost entirely confined to alien elements, as is abundantly shown by the fact that the Canadian issue of the Bolo' vist literature, recently seized by the authorities, was printed in various languages other than English. Revolutionary Socialism, of course, attracts to its ranks a certain number of Canadians, but that the great bulk of Canadian labor is quite free from the taint, and genuinely desirous of coming to an understanding with capital is quite evident from the course of events since the signing of the armistice. Thus, speaking in the Canadian upper house, a short time ago, Senator Gideon Robertson, the Minister of Labor, was able to tell us that the Government had recently conferred with representative employers and with representative labor leaders; that it had, before them, representatives the course of action it proposed to take, asking for expressions of opinion, and how, in each case, the proposed Government action had won nothing but approval.

Senator Robertson then went on to explain that the Government proposed to appoint a small commission of five or seven men, who would absolutely command the confidence of the public, and to ask them to proceed to all the centres of industry to survey the situation; to get all the facts; and, before May 15, to let the Government have their recommendations as to what should be done in the interests of both labor and capital. Upon that report, he said, the Government proposed basing a Government policy for the promotion of greater harmony in the industrial and labor world.

The great aim of this joint commission will, of course, be to discover what are the possibilities of Joint-Control, and it is in joint control that Senator Robertson quite evidently sees the solution of the problem. In his statement to the Senate he did not ignore the fact that it would be easier to bring about joint control in some industries than in others, but he was quite definite concerning the point that, wherever it was instituted, it would, at once, result in increased production. Employers, he declared, sometimes made the charge that increased wages brought no corresponding increase in efficiency from the working man. That charge, he granted, was, in some measure, true, but he was of opinion that if there were joint control, if the employees were jointly interested with the employer in the success of the industry, the case would be very different. Such matters are, of course, all questions which the future will decide. But the fact that the great problem is being approached with in this sane spirit of understanding and good will has already gone a long way toward its solution.

The "Flue" In Labrador.

The ravages of the Spanish influenza in Labrador during the past winter and the many deaths in that portion of British North America has created a new problem to be met by the friends of the Labrador Mission. In a letter from Dr. Wilfred Grenfell an account is given of the effect of the influenza epidemic in the Battle Harbor district of Labrador, Twenty per cent. of the population perished as a result of the illness. Dr. Grenfell gives a long list of the dead, and adds: "As these Labrador settlements are very small, each one generally consisting of a few houses, some idea can be gained of the catastrophe to that part of the country. The distances are great between places and families, and the difficulties for the doctor and nurse travelling over that area are almost insurmountable. The point that I should like to emphasize in this connection is the pressing need for care for the orphan children who are left as a result of this epidemic. A number of men left young families, and in several cases both parents were taken. Our present orphanage, besides being so poorly constructed and difficult to run, is full to capacity, and there are at our wits end to meet the problem of caring for so many helpless children."

Sounds a Call to Arms.

That of 12,446 teachers in Ontario, 11,359 are women, was stated by Miss Penelope Johnston, of London, in her presidential report to the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario, which was organized just a year ago. In the coming period of reconstruction, said educational work our united efforts is needed, proceeded, "so let us get a large vision of what we can accomplish, and let us endeavor to realize the power in our hands when we are 11,000 strong—the power to educate the future parents, to better grade the big issues of life."

OUR GUNS IN FRANCE

SOME FIGURES CONCERNING CANADIAN ARTILLERY.

During the Entire War, Our Army at the Front Lost Only Two Cannon in the Battle of Sanctuary Wood and They Were Recaptured—Guns Were Moved When the Troops Advanced.

GEN. SIR EDWARD MORRISON, who was in command of the Canadian artillery in the war, addressed the Canadian Club at Hamilton the other day—in which city he was at one time a newspaper editor—and gave some information about the work of the Canadian guns in the war which the people of this country will be proud to learn.

He repeated the statement of Gen. Currie that in the war the Canadians never lost a gun, although the artillery fought in something like twenty-three battles.

A newspaper report appeared at the time of the Canadians had lost a battery, but the facts in that case were that the 12-pounders had been placed close to the front-line trenches for special purposes and were overrun by the enemy, but the Canadian artillery, from their position with fire, the enemy could not withdraw the guns, and our troops reoccupied them and the gun crews joined their units just as they had fallen. The general himself was the first soldier officer to reach those guns after they had been retaken; they were as he left them, seen at the last moment of the fight—the sights of both guns and the breech of the 18-pounder had been put their crews, so that they would be ready for action. One gun had had a live shell in the bore, and the dead gunner was found with his hand on the lanyard in his hand. This gallant exploit of our artillery was one of the incidents of Sanctuary Wood.

The first achievement of the Canadian heavy artillery was to knock down, with two rounds, the dominating tower of the chateau of Hooge, a German observation point which had been impervious to shot for weeks without result. This notable feat resulted in the Canadian heavy battery being complimented by the whole army; and, as the general puts it, "we have always had the best heavy artillery in my hand. This gallant exploit of our artillery was one of the incidents of Sanctuary Wood.

The first achievement of the Canadian heavy artillery was to knock down, with two rounds, the dominating tower of the chateau of Hooge, a German observation point which had been impervious to shot for weeks without result. This notable feat resulted in the Canadian heavy battery being complimented by the whole army; and, as the general puts it, "we have always had the best heavy artillery in my hand. And, by the way, this seems to remind me that our guns sometimes, as well as those of the enemy, go on churches.

The first Canadian division went to France equipped with nine batteries of 18-pounders and one battery of 4-inch guns. A total of 60 in all. In France a brigade of midi-ers 44.6 howitzers was loaned by the British, and a Canadian brigade arrived after the second battle of Ypres.

By the time the armistice was signed the Canadians had 212 field guns and 19 batteries of heavy artillery. On October 1, 1918, the Canadian guns fired 7,000 tons of ammunition in the course of a day, while the Canadian corps fought thirteen different actions. In a month, at Passchendaele, the Canadian artillery fired nearly two million shells, and landed on the enemy lines what would make a train 17½ miles long. In about twelve days at Amiens and after, the ammunition expended, if loaded on motor lorries, would fill the whole street 37 miles. During the famous hundred days, less the battle of Arleux, the Canadian artillery fired 45,186 tons of ammunition, or a total of 171,618 shells.

These figures give some idea of the work done by the Canadian artillery, and it is a matter of common report that Gen. Currie deserves great credit for the skill and enterprise that characterized his command. It was he who suggested the use of fifty heavy guns of the Canadian heavy artillery, the only heavy guns that kept pace with the march of the infantry when deployed on the banks of the Rhine to cover the crossings at Cologne and Bonn on the advance to Berlin in 1918. On the previous day these fifty guns had fired the greatest concentrated march of forty-two miles.

What is a "Canadian Citizen"?

All Canadian citizens are British subjects, but all British subjects residing in Canada are not Canadian citizens. The Chinese in Canada, for example, is not a Canadian citizen, although he is not domiciled here. According to the Immigration Act the term "Canadian citizen" means: (a) A British subject, born in Canada, who has not become an alien; (b) A British subject, naturalized Canadian domicile; or (c) A person naturalized under the law of Canada, who has not subsequently become an alien or lost Canadian domicile." "Domicile" has a legal meaning. "Place in which a person has his present home, or in which he has fixed his habitation for the future as his place of present permanent residence, and not for a mere special or temporary purpose." It is thus possible that after three years under these conditions for an alien to grant to acquire Canadian domicile.

A TOUCHING TRIBUTE.

English Children Decorate Graves of Canadians.

The following excerpts are taken from the Hythe Reporter's account of the British school children's tribute to the Canadians buried in Shorncliffe Cemetery:—

With the passing of the years and the rising of a generation which knows nothing of the horrors of war, the memory of the fighting gentlemen of the children to take the part of trying to keep alive, with one generation of the Canadians in Shorncliffe Cemetery will gradually diminish; but so long as Hythe remains, and children are concerned there was no memorable difference. The day was perfect, and a prettier or more touching picture has seldom been presented than that which the serried ranks of the little ones, each carrying their posy and surrounded by a Guard of Honor formed by the Machine Gun Corps, Royal Irish Regiment, 8th (R.E.E.) Hussars, and Canadian Forces, wended their way on the overlooking hill were grouped the mothers and fathers, sisters and brothers, and also visitors present by hospital bus. Among those who attracted attention were the Canadian nurses. In the centre of the scene was a distinguished party which included Sir Reginald Pownall (Major-General), Staff, in his robes and chain of office, with his wife (Lady Pownall), Lieut.-Col. Wickwick, the Rev. Canon Hawkins (Hythe), Ald R. Price (Hythe Town Mayor), Mrs. Mayor (Cr. Mrs. Price), besides unfortunately unable to be present, Gen. A. M. Pinhey, C.B., D.S.O.; Col. W. A. Scott, C.A., M.C., Fairlie, representing the Folkestone Water Company; Mr. W. C. Cross, the Amusement Association, Mr. H. Bradley, the Golf Club, and Mr. Knott on behalf of Sir Philip Sassoon, M.P., there were also so many staff officers, and a constabulary as to render a short account.

The excellent band of the 8th Hussars, the Bandmaster Cheeseman, played the following selections, while the children were assembling: "Sylvia," "March of the London Scottish." "O Canada," and the incidental music from The Merchant of Venice."

The ceremony followed the general lines of previous years, the 8th band of the 8th (K.R.I.) Hussars, under Bandmaster Cheeseman, it began with the singing of "The Maple Leaf," then came a short address from Sir Stephen Penfold, who said it was the first time he had had the privilege of addressing such a new words on the object for which they were assembled that afternoon. The first and second years, as they knew, they were fully engaged on one of the most terrible wars the world had ever seen. Only that morning they might say there was every prospect that peace was in sight, and he hoped that before another week the treaty would be signed. They were all very thankful that the terrible bloodshed had ceased, but they were not here to-day to pay a tribute in respect to the memory of those brave men who left their homes and crossed over to help the Empire in its great battle for justice and righteousness. It was fitting, however, to know that after the first celebration they had, in the year, from British Columbia sent him some seeds for his children to plant in their graves that they might lay some of the flowers on those graves. Some of the seeds had been planted there and some of the flowers had been brought. He thought that was very touching, and it must be a solace to the sons, and to the wives and sons back to their own country to know that the memory of their dear ones left here was being respected. The association also reminded them of those Belgians who were driven from their country and whose cause they espoused in the struggle, and to whose memory they were also paying a tribute. In conclusion, he said how glad he was to see the children present, and he hoped they would be leaders in respect to paying their tribute of respect.

The Rev. H. D. Bell said they might be sure their French friends did not forget to lay flowers on the graves of those soldiers who were buried "over there." They did not forget that they had died that France as well as for Britain, and their dear brothers from Canada had done the same for the Old Country and for the cause of justice.

Major Cross, M.C., said he should like them to know he had received no parade that day, officers, N.C.O.'s and men had come there of their own accord.

Col. Scott said they had come there to-day to decorate the graves of the Canadians who laid in that beautiful place. The most touching thing in connection with that is a striking manner, the feelings they had for those who died for the cause they paid to those who had fallen in the cause of peace and freedom. When the people of Canada knew that they were doing there to-day, they would be immensely pleased. These men heard the call to duty and responded to it, and their lives in the cause of what all proper thinking people regard as right. For those who were left there, they paid them the tribute of respect by adorning their graves, and on behalf of Canada, and on behalf of the Canadian Mayor, he thanked them profoundly.

The National Anthem was then sung and whilst the band played a selection the children advanced and placed flowers reverently on the graves marked with the wooden crosses, on which were the names of those who had died. So many and beautiful were the flowers that they covered the ground and made it a perfect bower and display that, as the 2,500 children from Cheriton, Hythe, Sandgate and Folkestone took part, and it can easily be imagined what a moving spectacle it presented, and one which will ever linger in the memory of those who witnessed it.

Correct.

A funny one occurred in Judge Wood's court the other day, observes the Los Angeles Times. It was a divorce case and the witness was inclined to be vague. Finally he mustered up courage and said:

"Cold feet and hot words," snapped the judge.

Presidential Opinion on Life Insurance

What President Wilson Says: "If a man does not provide for his children, it he does not provide for all those dependent upon him, and if he has not that vision of conditions to come; and that care for the days that have not yet dawned, which we sum up in the whole idea of thrift and saving, then he has not opened his eye to the adequate conception of human life. We are in this world to provide not for ourselves, but for others, and that is the basis of economy."

What Ex-President Taft Says: "A man in office without means must abandon the hope of making the future of his family luxuriously comfortable. All a man can do under existing circumstances to safeguard his family is to get his life insured."

What Roosevelt Said: "Life insurance increases the stability of the business world, raises its moral tone, and puts a premium upon those habits of thrift and saving which are so essential to the welfare of the prosperity of a body."

What Grover Cleveland Said: "Get a policy and then hold on to it. It means self-respect, it means thrift, it means everything. Any other thing is a hat for you or your dependent ones if you should be snatched away from them."

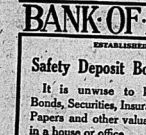
WOMEN CURED AT HOME



Women's disorders always yield from the very beginning of the treatment to the mild but effective action of Orange Lily. Within two or three days after commencing its use the improvement becomes noticeable, and this improvement continues until the patient is completely cured. Orange Lily is an applied or local treatment, and acts directly on the womanly organs, removing the congestion, toning and strengthening the nerves, and restoring perfect circulation in the diseased parts. In order to convince all suffering women of the value of this remedy, I will send a 40 cent box, enough for 10 Days treatment, absolutely free to each lady who will send me her address. WAR AND CONTROVERSY

RENEGADE CANADIAN INSULTS THE ALLIED ARMY.

Offensive Article Written by Man Who Claims That Americans Raised the Broken Morale of the Fighters In France — Canadian Officer Exposes Ignorance of Mr. Pattullo.

"AT this time no troops except the Americans were personally leading the Roches. Strategic retreats were the vogue; sometimes at a run, again at a walk. Rearguard actions were the fashion—and all honor to the men who stood and died, to gain time for their companions.

"I went to the Chateau-Thierry sector, and to other sectors as well, in those trying days, and I pledge my word of honor that never have I seen the morale of fighting forces lower than it was among the Allies at that period. They didn't seem to have a punch left in them. They were sullenly awaiting the next onslaught, fearful of its success, and hopeless of their ability to stop the Boches. And then a small force of Americans—"the temporary"—arrived, and presto! — hope revived. They took a new lease on life; their spirits rose."

So writes a person named George Pattullo, a renegade Canadian from Woodstock, Ont., in the Saturday Evening Post of May 10, 1919.

George's military capacity and sagacity lies in a certain reputation built up on tales of ranches in the wild and woolly west. Texas is his home of adoption, and on these days of war interest he seems to have taken upon himself to prove that the Americans won the war.

With that absurdity these few lines have nothing to do. The American dad all that was asked of them and did it. like the splendid soldiers they were. What they did do or what they didn't do, what the British, the French and other allies did or did not do, Pattullo is scarcely in a position to say. He went over as a newspaper man to France in May, 1918, and was back home in time to pay a visit to America in August of the same year.

Those who were in the firing line know pretty well how much of the fighting Mr. Pattullo was likely to see. Neither is that even remotely the object or this article.

Mr. Pattullo found the morale of the allies—barring the Americans—at the lowest possible ebb, and that in June their reserves were exhausted and there was no striking power left, he remarks elsewhere. Just by way of information, let it be remarked that at the time of which Mr. Pattullo speaks three of the four Canadian divisions were away from the line, not only as reserves, but training for the open warfare that it had been long foreseen would arise. Imperial divisions were also hard at this open warfare training and doubtless the French and others were doing the same thing.

Canadians may expect a certain amount of boasting with regard to the war from our cousins across the border. Canadians brag a bit, themselves. And it is inevitable that a certain amount of bumptious talk, blow, intended purely for home consumption, should slip over to this side of the border. But when Mr. Pattullo, a former Canadian, a writer of magazine stories, lets loose as he does in "Who Won the War?" it is bringing matters into the Canadian camp. Mr. G. Pattullo went to the States some years ago, to sell his stories, before being no market for his inferior style in his native country; and that now, he is in no sense to be considered as a Canadian. Offence cannot genuinely be taken to his writings on the ground of his being one of us, although he was a permanent in our militia for many years before the war. Possibly Mr. Pattullo realizes he has missed one of the biggest "stories" of his life in failing to relish his old regiment, on the outbreak of war, and in his article on who won it is trying to "kid" Canada of a bad job.

Canadian soldiers have no desire to belittle the part the United States soldiers played in the war. We did not all and time come in touch with them, except when their officers came over the line for short visits to us, to learn the game. Those were all fine fellows, keen and dead anxious to get on to the bricks.

One Canadian officer who saw a great deal of the fighting that actually won the war makes the following comments upon Mr. Pattullo's article:—

"After examining one or two little sectors of the western front Mr. Pattullo is satisfied that upon his honor, he never saw morale lower than it was among the allies at that time. If he meant among the few odd French and British battalions, he may be right, I mean what. He means among the allies, all the allies, all the way up the line. For his claim is that the stunt of one American Division so revived the spirits of all the allies that disaster was turned into victory—

"Will Mr. Pattullo believe me when I say that although I was in France all the time, with an infantry battalion, I never heard of the morale of Chateau-Thierry or of the St. Mihiel show until I got home to Toronto?

"I will admit we were a little disappointed at the success of the German rushes in March and early in April. But to say that either the Canadians or any of the British regiments we accountered in May, June or July were depressed or suffering from alimony of morale, is nothing but a bumptious piece of fiction born of ignorance.

"Mr. Pattullo's conception of a battle is quaint, if not comical. He says:

"In May and June he broke through the French front to the Marne and almost reached Compagne. His reference to Compagne troops here; but who stopped the Boches? Parts must be be dressed, and the French were aghast; but suddenly twenty hordes were thrown back and held. Ask the mayors of Meaux and scouring towns; or ask the inhabitants of the Chateau-Thierry region. Poor knew. So did all of us who were up there in France at the time. The Second Division of the Americans did it!

"A lone division stopping a horde! It must have been some horde.

"Mr. Pattullo suffers from shortsightedness. He thinks he saw the whole war down on that small section of the western front. He should have gone over with his old regiment here, and even then he would have hardly admitted that he saw only a little of it.

"He also claims that the United States army so fiercely engaged the Hun, that it withdrew all the reserves of the German army down in front of the Yankees, so making it easy for the British to sweep on to victory. He says:

"One has only to glance at the progress reported by the French, British and Belgian commands in those latter days of the struggle to realize that the resistance opposite them must have been half-hearted, and in some cases almost nonexistent. Anybody who knows troops knows that this cannot be done against obstinate resistance.

"Anybody who knows anything at all about the war besides one battle sector will know that, according to official figures, that tardily small Canadian force of four understrength divisions engaged and decisively defeated between August 8 and November 11, forty-seven German divisions, that is, nearly one quarter of the total German forces on the western front. And 21,317 prisoners happened to get safely past our attacks. Mr. Pattullo is entitled to think what he likes about half-hearted resistance. So is an Eskimo.

"The body of Mr. Pattullo's article consisted of quotations from observers generally, German restaurant waiters, hall porters, etc. I, too, could quote at random such people as a United States staff officer who told me that the only distinguished battle the United States engaged in was the St. Mihiel battle, in which all the staff work was done by British officers, and the artillery was British, and that the Argonne fighting was a gigantic tragedy of mismanagement and stuff and bungling. I don't believe all that. I'm just quoting as Mr. Pattullo did.

"But in conclusion I think every veteran association, patriotic organization and every Dominion will thank the good of the nation at heart should take the British statistics to secure, before the Peace Conference breaks up, a definite statement of the exact and relative parts played by the different nations in the concluding battles of the war, signed by Foch, Haig and Pershing. The future peace and good-will of the world demands it."

Illiterates In Canadian Army.

Illiteracy in the United States army was so prevalent that a committee was appointed by the Government to compile statistics of it. They found 700,000 men in the drafted army who were not only unlettered, but were ignorant of most of the elementary facts of existence. The committee concluded its work by discovering that there are nearly 4,500,000 natives men and women in the United States who can neither read nor write.

Illiteracy in the Canadian army was so slight that it was never necessary to compile statistics of it. The soldier who could neither read nor write was so rare a member in the Canadians that he constituted no problem to anyone but the regimental padre, who spent his time between teaching the rare illiterate the three Rs.

Col. John I. McLaren, the A.A.G. of Toronto Military District, who has had wide experience among the troops during the entire war, says:

"Illiteracy has never been a problem. Now and again a man would turn up who had to make his 'mark' on military documents, being unable to write. But such were extraordinarily rare."

A paymaster of a Canadian battalion says:—

"About five thousand men have come under my notice. Only three could not sign their names. Two of these were foreigners."

All officers who have censored letters for troops know what Canadians can write letters, in fact, are prolific writers. And while spelling was in many cases a careless art, the letter indicating extreme ignorance was an infrequent find. Even the troops were many veritable Chesterfields, whose letters were masterpieces in composition.

As the Canadian corps was drawn indiscriminately from the backwoods settlements as well as the cities, from the mining camps of the north as well as the collegiate towns of the long-settled older provinces, the high standard of education and intelligence disclosed in the war effort is most gratifying.

Addressing the Prince.

It is officially announced that addresses for presentation to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales during his visit to Canada, should begin as follows:

"To His Royal Highness Edward Albert, Duke of Cornwall and Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick and Baron of Renfrew, in the Peerage of Scotland; Lord of the Isles and Great Steward of Scotland; K.G., G.M.M.M., M.C., etc., etc.

"May it please Your Royal Highness."

Addresses should end as follows:

"We have the honor to be, Sir,
"Your Royal Highness' most obedient humble servants."

Will Mark Battlefields.

The commemoration of Canadian battlefields is now occupying the attention of the Dominion Government. Hon. A. K. MacLean has made a tour of what was so short a time ago known as our western front, and his visit was mainly in connection with this object. It has been proposed to erect eight memorials commemorating probably the Canadian battlefields at St. Julien, Courcelette, Hill 60, Vimy Ridge, St. Eloi, Passchendaele, Amiens, and Cambrai. It is understood the Government has already selected a site for the Vimy memorial.

To Travelling Salesmen

WHEN showing goods the traveller's cuffs as well as his goods are brought right before the prospective customer's eyes. A soiled cuff doesn't create a favorable impression. And it draws the attention away from the article to the soiled cuff.

The alert, particular traveller, therefore, has to take a big bunch of shirts on his trips and change often—unless he carries the W. & G. Shirt with Double Wear Cuffs with him when he needs just half the usual quantity.

Everyone knows that the cuffs—the most exposed portion of a shirt—get soiled first. And it doesn't take long for a dirty train or dusty road to soil them.

But when one side of his Double Wear Cuffs gets soiled the traveller just turns the cuffs, which fold easily and lie perfectly flat either way they're turned. He thus wears his shirt twice as long.

If he is away for a period of two weeks to a month or longer every inch in his grip or personal trunk is valuable. W. G. & R. Shirts with Double Wear Cuffs save space for him. Get laundry bills for shirts in half, and wear longer.

VEGETABLE MARKETING

High Prices Are Paid for Best Quality.

Provide Abundance of Good Water and Shade.

By J. Alfred Prince, Dominion Horticulturist.

FEW growers realize the importance of properly harvesting their vegetables. The large majority are expert enough to produce an excellent crop, but they lose from 10 to 50 per cent. of it, or more, every year, perhaps more than before, demanding a high grade product. They are willing to pay the price if they get the quality; and it is the quality that will make the greatest success will be the one that caters to this demand.

There are several factors of great importance necessary to achieve the greatest amount of success. For most of these, perhaps, is proper harvesting. Few, even of our growers, realize how rapidly our vegetables deteriorate in quality after they are taken from the ground. Much of the fine flavor and crispness is lost in the case of such products as onions, lettuce and radishes in only a few hours unless special care is exercised in handling. Such crops should never be exposed to winds or the hot sun and if they can be kept in a cool, fairly moist condition, the least possible loss in quality will be maintained.

To market the vegetable crop to the best advantage the grower must ever keep in mind the ultimate destination of his goods. The housewife in the one that I have in mind. If she is well pleased the tells her neighbors about it; if she is disappointed, it is safe to say that she has received something that is inferior quality then she proceeds to buy elsewhere from the housetops and forever after will be hard to convince that there is such a thing as high quality.

The most important factors to bear in mind are:low in number and are easily put into practice. Perhaps the proper degree of maturity is the first one that must be considered. Carrots, beets, onions, radishes and the other bunching crops should not be pulled before they reach the proper size. They should be carefully pulled and not left to wilt in the sunshine. They are easily bunched, tied and packed in crates. Protect the product from the atmosphere as much as possible by covering. Lettuce, spinach, parsley and the cauliflower crops should be carefully cut and placed in crates. Great care should be taken that none of the dirt is taken with the product. Although a few wilted leaves, as this is hard to remove even by washing and will always lower the quality.

There is perhaps not more than one person in fifty that can be called a really successful salesman, and there are a good many of our best growers fall down, and after producing a high grade product, are unable to market it to the best advantage. The first requisite, as has already been mentioned, is a high grade article. An inferior grade cannot be forced to obtain the highest prices. The proper care in preparation is also important. A neat, attractive package, well-packed, with high grade vegetables will always command the highest price. Furthermore, an attractive article will be its own salesman, and no matter where restocked the market may be, will command a high price. The proper care in sorting and grading is also quite important. Vegetables of poor quality should never be placed on the market, as they will not only have to be sold at a much lower price but will also have the effect of lowering the price on higher grades, as it is the result that many a good market has been destroyed by the large quantity of inferior goods.

From this we see that the greatest results can only be obtained by growing a high grade article, carefully harvested and attractively packed and cleanly marketed.—A. M. McLennan, B.S.A., Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

A Parallel.

Not since the Middle Ages has there been such a popular Prince of Wales in England as the son of George V. People going to see the kiddies remember how the youthful Henry V won beloved by his subjects. Strangely enough it was also a Prince in France that gave him his opportunity to show his metal, but in those days the English were fighting against the French, instead of side by side with them. When one takes into consideration that Henry lived in the days when the mediaeval spirit of an autocratic king existed and the Prince of Wales lives in days when the most democratic royal household that the world has ever seen, there are many parallels between the two young men. Both grew into love in their fellow-countrymen during the days of a great war; both were popular amongst their boon companions; both "led the field" and had the willing spirit to start at home; and both of them accepted popularity in a straight-forward manly way.

The War Toronto.

Something sentimental attaches to the good ship, War Toronto, which has been plying between the St. Lawrence. She is the last wooden ship to be built for the Inland Navigations Board in Canada, since vessels of her type are no longer needed to transport munitions to the war zone. She carries a cargo of about 1,500,000 feet of lumber which she will discharge at a British port. Her type is a type of a bygone day, but it is a type to which all honor is due, and no record of the war would be complete unless her name were inscribed upon the honor roll.

REPAIR FARM BUILDINGS

Now and When to Paint—Time Efficiently.

Is the Fall the time for repairing buildings? Is it not rather the time for painting? Should not repairing be done in the Spring? Should not painting be done in the Fall? These questions are answered by Professor Bigelow of Cornell and Whitcomb.

(Government Bulletin, Department of Agriculture, Washington.)

EVERY farmer should care for his farm buildings in such a way that they will last as long as possible. To accomplish this purpose requires a knowledge of the causes of decay, and of the best methods of preventing it. On many farms, however, many details in themselves of major importance, but in the aggregate of tremendous influence, are entirely neglected. Many of these are included in addition, generally, of the conditions existing in their interior. Blocked gutters and leaky roofs, rain-spouts that do not properly conduct the water, and general run-down conditions are the hall-marks of inefficiency and unsatisfactory management.

The latter may not be able or change the location of the farm, but to a great extent he can control the appearance and general conditions by seeing that the roofs are in good repair and weather tight, the fences in place, gates in order and the lawn free from rubbish or dragging on the ground, the kitchen and knobs of all doors and gates in good working condition, and no broken lights in the window sashes. The yard should be kept in a stable'dorrure in order, the stanchions and mangers and floor in good repair, and the whole place the highest attention that it merits by regular and regular attention.

Investigations have disclosed the fact that concrete is an ideal material for the construction of floors, and the hands of a reconstructed person on the farm. The floor constructed by careful manufacturers as to tools and materials used, segregation, proportioning, mixing, placing, finishing, and plan forms, reinforcement, etc., may be recommended for the asking.

Doors—The ordinary stable door is usually made in two parts, each matched lumber is not satisfactory, because the shrinkage of the warm moist air of the stable is so great that the of lumber causes it to swell, while the outside of the door is exposed to causes the door to spring out top and bottom. Battens, or "cleats," are a defect because the expansion and contraction of the wood forms steam chests' conditions is taken up by the battens.

To hang a door hold it up against the jamb and mark round with a pencil. Then cut down to these lines. Make it ⅛ narrower and ⅛ shorter, to allow clearance. Then mark about six inches from the top and the lower edge of the door from the floor. The thickness of the hinges should be taken from the total width of the hinge. The hinges should be set to give the distance the hinge is to set back from the face edge of the door. In all cases the hinge should be wide enough to allow the two-thirds of the thickness of the door. Heavy doors should have three hinges. The mortise for the hinge on the jamb should bevel slightly toward the front, so as to allow the door to strike the jamb.

Setting the door for the door—Hinge locks are those that are simply screwed on to the face of the door. Mortise locks are those set into a mortise in the door itself. The rim lock is held to the door by screws and for keyhole, knob-bar hole, and screw holes. The latch is set into the door, the latch bar bored and the lock screwed into place. The screws used for these plates are put on, and the keeper is set in the jamb.

The mortise lock is set into the mortise cut in the door just wide and deep enough to take it. The face plate of the lock being set flush with the face of the door. Mark for the knob-bar and keyhole plates. These are set and the latch bar bored and the lock screwed into place. The screws used for these plates are put on, and the keeper is set in the jamb.

Cattle Ties and Mangers.—The comfort of the cattle is of great importance, and has a direct effect upon their profit. It is made also as simplicity of construction, convenience in feeding and cleaning should be considered.

The comfort of the chain cow-tie should be examined to see if it works freely. In any case apply a little oil to the joints. Cow chains or ties may be neatly and effectually made from a half-inch bar or strap, link made out of two or three turns of 5-mm. wire through the links, leaving the ends long enough to be twisted around the round of the strands in opposite direction, after the manner of the lineman's splice. The ends should be cut and rounded should be attended to in similar way. Ormond, John Evans, O. A. College, Guelph.

New Textile Material.

Textilit, said to be used in 25 of the largest German factories, is a substitute material that is produced to sustain the war as a permanent addition to the textile industry. It consists of a thread and a fine thread twisted together and, though the percentage of long fiber is very small, it is claimed to have yielded products that the uninitiated cannot distinguish from the former linen and fats fabrics. The fiber gives a firmness that paper fabrics do not possess. The material is made into weaving and sewing yarns and webs of all kinds.

TWO FALLS CONTRASTED.

Impressions of Niagara and Lower Falls of Saguenay.

While Niagara Falls will continue to hold their own as a scenic attraction, the Lower Falls of Saguenay must necessarily appeal to the artistic temperament, writes Mr. Lester Victoria Falls of the Saguenay, in Sketches of Travel published by tourists. From being a place of scenery, so feared that fishing parties, Mr. Sherwood tells us, in 1859, had great difficulty in persuading the Indians to accompany him, the fall now are visible from a railway. Not steam ship ever built a mile below them, and they lie under the Laurentian Plateau of the Cape to Cape, solid service, which is the greatest thing this autumn.

"Louis Jorteaux thus describes a visit to Victoria Falls and contrasts them with Niagara, as follows:

"Our approach was made by rail from the Indian Ocean at Beira, near the mouth of the Zambesi (that hotbed of hitro-organisms, described by James Bryce as the hottest spot in Africa), and across the narrow belt of swamp and jungle that lines the coast; thence up the gradual slope to the volcanic plateau that forms the real continent of Africa.

"By morning an altitude of nearly 5,000 feet was reached, and a transition from the excessive heat and moisture of the low-lands was experienced that was most grateful and exhilarating.

"This section still abounds with antelope, elephants, lions and other large game, which and excellent cereals and fruits. Above the falls the river flows still gambol and meander in many channels, with wooded islands of rank vegetation and wild fowl in plenty.

"With the altitude, however, came another and less grateful change. The forests were no longer dense, but in their stead were vast arid, birdless plains, with scanty hungry vegetation, whose cassette and stunted growth were due to the scarcity of moisture that so seriously affects Rhodesia as a whole, stretches of veldt far away to the Transvaal.

"And in the morning of the third day we were suddenly awakened by the roar of the falls, and from my cabin window. Misery to loan on mortgage.

BUILDING EDUCATION.

Famous Canadian Gives Advice to the English.

Very quaintly does Dr. William Osler, the famous Canadian doctor, suggest to the members of the Oxford Classical Association that what their cult of the humanities stands chiefly is to be humanized. No man ever praised the Greeks more fervently. "The name of Greece stands in our minds for the name of a race, but as the name of America' or, as more recently put by Maine, 'Except the blind forces of nature, nothing moves in this world that is not Greek in origin.' Yet, though steeped in the classical association, it is as a scientist that he speaks to these humanists—Raglan, professor of medicine; and he thrusts his charges home with masterful skill. He says the humanities mean only history, literature and philosophy; to the Greeks science was of equal import. And in its application to the humanities the science of the Greeks has a very special meaning for the world of to-day.

What Osler says of "Orexis," the well-famous school of literae humaniores, is doubly true of classical instruction in Canada. The moral forces which have made the modern world are simply ignored. Yet they are all Hellenic, all part and parcel of the humanities in the true sense. And all of prime importance in modern education." To the student in Greek, Aristotle is known as the author of the "Metaphysics," "Politics" and "Poetics," but not as a scientist. Yet so was pointed out to Darwin and admitted by him, "the principle of natural selection" was shadowed forth by Aristotle. "In biology," says Osler, "Aristotle speaks for the first time the language of modern science, and indeed he seems to have been the first and foremost a biologist; his natural history studies influenced profoundly his sociology, his psychology, and his philosophy." studied scientifically "the problems of heredity, of sex, of nutrition, of growth, of degeneration and of the struggle for existence." Though encyclopedic in his knowledge, he was a specialist in embryology unrivalled for 2,000 years. His discovery of a "special mode of nutrition in the case of the species of sharks" walled until the nineteenth century to be confirmed. Yet Osler searched the examination papers of the school of literae humaniores through the past decade and found no reference to Aristotle as a scientist. Other cases are almost as striking. Lucretius had views of the "origin of the world and the origin of man" which are up to date "with the most modern thought; and a like conception of "continuity in the operations of nature" are "unmatched among the ancients or moderns"; yet the fact is similarly ignored in the school of literae humaniores. The inevitable result is a failure to grasp what is fundamental in historical philosophy, man's relation to the animal force of humanity and to the universe.

"There is another side to the picture, the professed scientist. "The extraordinary development of modern medical science may be her undoing. Specialism, now a necessity, has fragmented the specialties themselves. The worker loses all sense of proportion in a mass of minutiae. Appalling themselves early to research, these men get into backwaters far from the main stream. They quickly become hypercritical, and the smallest of the field the greatest of the intellectual magalocephaly. From over-specialization, science, men are in a more serious state than are the humanists from neglect of classical education. The salvation of science lies in a resuscitation of a new philosophy —the scientia scientiarum which Plato describes: 'Now, when all these studies reach the point of intercommunion and connection with one another, and come to be considered in their mutual affinities, then I think, and not till then, will the pursuits of them have value.'" Osler accordingly proposes a modified honor school in which the principles of philosophy are to be dealt with in relation to the sciences, and in which science is to be illumined by the introduction of literary and historical studies. "Science will take a totally different position in this country than the knowledge of its advances is the possession of all educated men."

Many ills are to-day moving toward a similar conception of the truly educational. Among them the fetish of modern classicism pointed out. The Greeks had not the dignified conception that they were ancients. In each passing century those who understand them best think of them most nearly as they thought of themselves when they talked and lived on the Akropolis. To us of to-day they are most modern when we follow their tentative observations in science, their broad grasps as to the moving forces in the world and the child, and also them out with our fuller knowledge of facts, ever enlarging and solidifying theories as to mad and his place in nature.

Moose On Oil.

Oil drilling in the Peace River district is attracting attention, and the prospects seem to run somewhat encouraging. Several prospective wells show encouraging signs, and it is hoped in a township on the high prairie, where drilling commenced in February, has been struck at a depth of 2,000 feet the oil showing makes for good prospects. Several oil companies operate. The general opinion prevails that the oil production prospects are enormous.

Chinese Medicine.

Dried frogs and asbestos are considered highly valuable by the Chinese. the Chinese doctor prescribes for his patient. For this reason they should be may include in the prescription one of the following for which the patient is willing to pay a fancy price: Scorpions, rhinoceros skins, wood shavings, crushed snakes, dried moths, centipedes, toads, lizards, caterpillars, powdered snakes or wasps.—Christian Herald.

Improving Western Stock.

Over two dozen young, pure bred bulls of good type, purchased by the Live Stock Branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, are now at Regina ready for shipment to farmers of the province who are desirous of obtaining good pure bred stock at first cost. More will be purchased as orders come in.

FORETELLING THE WEATHER.

Prophets Can Do Their Forecasting at Home.

Adam Clay or may not have tried his hand at weather prediction, but it is written that as far back as the days of Noah that gentleman had completed a long, wet spell, and, unlike the "Prof." of later years, he had had such faith in his own prognostications that he took measures to meet the situation. Further on in that subsequent events proved that he was right. Was a lucky shot? Many of his successors, however, showing a lower batting average, it became increasingly apparent as time went on that the only step of the consequence with which the prognostications failed, the subject should be placed on a scientific basis in order to obtain accuracy in the results or at least to spread a good deal of learning and philosophy about it, and that minutiae the curse, as it were, of possible errors. So weather bureaus were instituted, which must have been in more or less successful operation now for many years, with attendants on the Government pay roll, and everything. Entirely apart from scientific weather observatories, however, hosts made weather-forecasting had persisted as a pleasing pastime all these years, and on this very day there is a set of rules governing it, more or less recognized by all amateur weather-prophets. For the benefit of those who may be unfamiliar with these rules the New York Sun has published a compilation of them and they are set forth as follows:

When standing on high ground and the horizon is unobstructed from all quarters, if the sky is absolutely cloudless, look for a storm within forty-eight hours.

If it starts to rain after seven o'clock in the morning it will continue to do so all day, and very often it is the indication of a three days' rain.

When it is raining and it strikes up and darkens abruptly you can count on an all-day rain, with a high degree of certainty.

When the rain ceases and the clouds lingering all massed in heavy blankets one sure sign of clear weather is the patch of blue sky that shows through the rift large enough to make a pair of "sailor's breeches."

Another sign of coming rain is when the smoke from the chimney hovers low around the downspout. When it ascends straight into the air the indications clearing weather.

A foggy morning is usually the forerunner of a clear afternoon.

And then, for the special benefit of those who never can remember rules of this kind, we have also had to have a faculty for retaining jingles, the following important formulas are set out in verse:

Red in the morning the sailor's warning;
Red at night the sailor's delight.
When you see a mackerel sky,
Twill not be many minutes dry.
When the seagulls inland fly
Expect then a storm is nigh.
A ring around the moon
Means a storm is coming soon.
When it rains before seven
Twill clear before eleven.

The Red Flag in Hamburg.

How the Bolshevs in Hamburg you may see the red flag flying, which does not help seeing it, for every richer man among the residents will take an opportunity awesomely to point it out to you as a sample of how Germany is going to the dogs, says Harold Cowerbe in the World's Work. At the big gateway of the Hamburg zoo will find half a dozen soldiers and sailors sentinels, but be more exact—leaning guard. They have fixed bayonets and bulging cartridge belts, and to that extent they are military. But also they are slouchy, cradle in that they seldom shave, wear civilian caps or brush their khaki uniforms, and they smoke cigarettes and cigars while on duty. They have the air of being the assistants rather than a sentry as representing the army is supposed to have. Which is one of the descriptions of the Russian soldiers, once the terror of the frontiers under way, and I think they resalid themselves of the name thing.

The Infamous In Labrador.

The ravages of the Spanish influenza in Labrador during the past month have been severe, and that portion of North America have created a new problem to be met by the friends of the people. This is stated in a letter from Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, who secured a first-hand view of the influenza epidemic in the Battle Harbor district of Labrador. Twenty per cent. of the population died as a result of the 'flu,' Dr. Grenfell states, a long list of the dead and adds: "As these Labrador people have had the good fortune to be generally consisting of a few houses, scattered along the coast, it is a catastrophe to that part of the country, with many widowers and orphans, and families, and the difficulties of the doctor and nurse traveling over the ice to visit them are enormous. The point that I should like to emphasize is the connection of the pressing need for care for the orphan children, who are left as a result of this epidemic. A number of these have relatives, but in most cases both parents were taken. Our present orphanage, besides being in bad repair, is usually difficult to run, is full to capacity, and we are in no position to undertake the task of caring for so many helpless children."

NELSON DAY CAMPAIGN
for $500,000 October 21-22-23

WHY Canada MUST have Canadian Seamen

CANADA is face to face to-day with a great need—mercantile ships! More than a quarter of the world's shipping was destroyed in the War. We are handicapped in our foreign trade because there are no ships to buy or rent. Hence the Government's shipbuilding programme.

Aims of the NAVY LEAGUE OF CANADA

To emphasize Canada's opportunities and responsibilities on the sea.

To raise funds for the relief of our merchant seamen, injured in the war, and for dependents of those who were killed.

To maintain sailors' homes in our ports.

To train boys and young men for our merchant ships by the organization of Boys' Naval Brigades.

Patron:
H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.
President:
COMMODORE HERBERT JAMES JARVIS

But there remains the more complex problem of manning our ships when built. Seamen cannot be turned out to order. They must be trained. If we are not to be at the mercy of foreign-born seamen, we must have our own Canadian boys ready for this service. This is absolutely imperative, and lies right at the very root of Canada's After-the-War development.

BEGIN WITH THE BOYS

The problem is purely a personal one—something you and I must assist in solving. Unless we make it possible to train Canadian boys for the sea, we cannot hope to man Canadian ships with Canadian seamen and so supply the missing link between the producing possibilities of the Dominion and the eager world markets.

To conduct the Boys' Naval Brigades and its other work, the Navy League of Canada requires $500,000. Throw yourself wholeheartedly into this campaign to make it a thorough-going success, for the sake of our boys, for the sake of the whole Dominion—yes, and in your own personal interest. Help by giving liberally.

A MAN OF DEEDS.

Col. Ripley Never Looked for the Spot-light.

The khaki that returned men is fast being relegated to the limbo of half-forgotten things, and the thoughts of war experiences are transient now in the pursuit of the more humdrum, but subsequent events proved that this was a false step. Col. Ripley, one of many of his successors, however, showing a lower batting average, it became increasingly apparent as time went on that in this step of the consequence with which the prognostications failed, the subject should be placed on a scientific basis in order to obtain accuracy in the results or at least to spread a good deal of learning and philosophy about it, and that minutiae the curse, as it were, of possible errors. So weather bureaus were instituted, which must have been in more or less successful operation now for many years, with attendants on the Government pay roll, and everything. Entirely apart from scientific weather observatories, however, hosts made weather-forecasting had persisted as a pleasing pastime all these years, and on this very day there is a set of rules governing it, more or less recognized by all amateur weather-prophets. For the benefit of those who may be unfamiliar with these rules the New York Sun has published a compilation of them and they are set forth as follows:

When standing on high ground and the horizon is unobstructed from all quarters, if the sky is absolutely cloudless, look for a storm within forty-eight hours.

If it starts to rain after seven o'clock in the morning it will continue to do so all day, and very often it is the indication of a three days' rain.

When it is raining and it strikes up and darkens abruptly you can count on an all-day rain, with a high degree of certainty.

When the rain ceases and the clouds lingering all massed in heavy blankets one sure sign of clear weather is the patch of blue sky that shows through the rift large enough to make a pair of "sailor's breeches."

Another sign of coming rain is when the smoke from the chimney hovers low around the downspout. When it ascends straight into the air the indications clearing weather.

A foggy morning is usually the forerunner of a clear afternoon.

A thunder-storm in winter (usually in January or February) is always followed by very cold weather. It is not, as many think, the breaking up of the winter.

"Railways are the arteries of modern warfare"—this fact was early recognized by Sir Eric Geddes, and miles of light guage railway trace the front with the rapidity of spreading a stain upon it. But it only partially relieved the congestion. Broad gauge railways were urgently required to bring troops and military supplies to the rail heads. In the autumn of 1916, the 1st Battalion, C.R.T., worked on the Somme, building narrow guage, at Maricourt, Combles, Forel Farm, Rouge, and Bouchevesnes.

Early in the following spring the Germans, yielding to pressure from the British, evacuated Bapaume and Peronne, leaving a vast tract of wilderness in their wake. It did not seem possible to lay broad gauge in the indescribable waste of mud, and innumerable shell torn region. Could it be accomplished? Was it worth the tremendous effort? There was a diversity of opinion and many experts in high places were against the project.

Col. Ripley undertook the job, and in less than two weeks a broad gauge was over broad guage rails into Peronne yard, from Flatseat, via Maricourt, (the jumping off place of the first Somme offensive), Shirring Tronne Wood, through Clery, then a heap of rubbil, the Scots' Guards carried the 24 feet lengths of rail, by number; ties and fastenings were rushed up through the shell on motor lorries, and the 1st C.R.T. won commendable vigor. It was a feat of skill and determination, and another evidence of Canadian energy and enterprise recognized by the British authorities. Commanding the 1st C.R.T. became the nucleus of the Canadian Railway Troop Corps, afterwards so ably administrated by Brigadier-General Stewart. The 2nd Railway Troops came into the field during 1917, and when the armistice was signed thirteen units were in operation, two more in formation, with subsidiary companies of forestry, road operators, tramway companies, boom drivers and a bridge building aggregation in Palestine.

Parliament hill square was a distinctive and a respected badge. The men who wielded the spike maul could also shoulder a rifle. Ops C.R.T. unit distinguished itself at Villers Bretoux wood, holding a part of the line against relief cause.

Col. Ripley must have accepted the axiom that "actions speak louder than words," early in his professional career, and he followed that motto in the army. He was on the Western front to build railways and did it. Oratory and verbosity are foreign to him. He shunned eulogizing press men. Completion reports stated all, and the blue print frame told its story. The numerous letters he received from army commanders pleased him because they reflected credit on his battalion. He had a very warm regard for those men, who ate raw turnips with him in 1916. A silent man, but a reservoir of warmth and kindness to those who sought him in the line of trouble. He had no patience with malingerers, but the genuine soldier found a friend there. An officer and gentleman, one "who never turned his back, but walked straight forward," through the dark grey war days, he is held in high esteem by the old members of his battalion.

Nitrogen From Atmosphere.

There has been erected at the Ontario Agricultural Department of agronomy experiment farm at Arthington, Va., the largest experimental plant in the United States for the production of nitrogen from air. The nitrogen so produced is combined with hydrogen to form ammonia, which can be used in the manufacture of explosives and fertilizers. Experiments with the view of increasing the efficiency of the process are now being conducted by the Bureau of Soils. The Baker process of manufacturing nitrogen is being employed. This process involves the production of ammonia from hydrogen and nitrogen. The two gases are mixed in the proper proportion, put under high pressure and subjected to intense heat. They are then passed over a spongy iron, whereupon a certain part of the mixture combines to form ammonia.

Little Romance of Today.

There is a flavor of sheer romance about that Parisian rug with its Scottish plaids, English rose, and Russian bear embroidered by the English ladies of Kermanshah, which figures in a striking little sketch from a correspondent of the Times of London. Parisianist is a Cossack under the command of Scharaieff, "the man with the face of an iron dreamer" and the heart of rock," of the wars of King Shirin. There was a Colonel Lisle among that Cossack troop who spoke Persian as well as English and only a word or two of French, having been at "eight" as he put it, "for over three blessed years," an ancestor of his having come to Russia in the reign of Ivan. He had read of apes in his family records, but it was at Mendali, on the inhospitable borders of Luristans, that he heard the music of them for the first time, and it was a Punjabi pipe who played the Cossacks in.

Our Language.

"Did you call Edith this morning?"

"Yes, but she wasn't down."

"But why didn't you call her down?"

"Because she wasn't up."

"Then call her up now and call her down for not being down when you called her up."

LOST BOUNDARY RECORDS.

Strange Story of How They Were Recovered.

In 1818, Great Britain and the United States agreed that the 49th parallel of latitude should be the boundary between Canada and the United States "from Lake of the Woods to the Stony Mountains," as the Rockies were then called. West of the Pacific, the country was "free and open" to both parties for a period of ten years.

But in ten years the boundary was not settled. In 1824 Russia surrendered all rights to the territory south of 54 degrees, 40 minutes. Time passed, and the country was still "free and open," but an influx of American settlers began to arouse jealousy. In 1844 the political cry of the Democrats in the United States was "Fifty-four forty or fight!" which meant that the United States would have the Pacific coast up to the Russian territory, or fight Britain for it. But in 1846 a treaty was made, continuing the 49th parallel "to the middle of the channel which separates the continent from Vancouver's Island."

The commission on the boundary made a map survey, but only got 94 miles of lines cut and erected stone pyramids at frequent intervals in that wooded distance.

A few years later, settlers found three lines cut and two sets of pyramids. The boundary was lost. Who could say which was United States and which Canadian soil?

The Canadian settlers applied to the Provincial Government of Victoria, and the query was passed on to the Dominion Government. The simple thing would be to write to London, Eng., and obtain the required information re the surveys of 1857-1861.

In his recent pamphlet on the subject, Mr. Otto Klotz, Chief Astronomer of the Dominion, says:

"Now the extraordinary thing happened. This final report with the necessary data of the survey was not to be found in London. Time and again search was made by different persons for the missing document, but all to no avail. To add to the remarkable situation, the duplicate final report was not to be found in any of the Government archives in Washington.

"Does history record any similar circumstance? Two governments are engaged for years on the same international work, a boundary survey; the respective commissioners sign joint final reports and transmit them to their respective Governments, and the reports are nowhere to be found — apparently vanished from the face of the earth!"

Such was the situation in 1898, when the writer (Mr. Klotz) was sent by the Dominion Government to London and Petrograd on a special mission, in which was included the obtaining of information regarding the records and final report of the above survey. All the offices in London were visited in which there was the faintest likelihood that the records might be stored, but without result, and no one seemed to be able to give any assistance.

It was the writer's first visit to Europe, and naturally a visit was paid to the Royal Observatory at Greenwich, as he was astronomer for the Dominion Government.

"By chance, his eye caught the initials, B.N.A. on some boxes on top of the library shelves. Like a flash those letters interpreted themselves as standing for 'British North America.' At his request, the boxes were taken down, the dust of years removed, and in them lay the long-lost records of the international survey of the 49th parallel."

"Bars" To Be Awarded.

Canadian soldiers will be awarded bars to the general service medal for the following engagements:

1915—Second battle of Ypres, April and May; St. Julien and Langemarck.

1916—Mount St. Eloi, April 2 to 19; Sanctuary Wood, and Hill 7 June 2 and 3; the battle of the Somme, October and November.

1917—Vimy Ridge, April 9 to 12; battle of Arleux and Fresnoy, April 28-29, and May 3; Hill 70, August 15; and Passchendaele, October 25 to November 10.

1918—Battle of Amiens, August 8-11; capture of Monchy-le-Preux, August 25 to 28; Bourg and Cherisy, August 29 to September 2; breaking of Queant-Drocourt line, September 2 and 4; Crossing of Canal Du Nord and Capture of Bouloin Wood, September 27 to 29; capture of Cambrai, October 12; capture of Denain, October 20; capture of Valenciennes, October 25 to November 2; and the capture of Mons, November 7 to 11.

It is possible that bars will be given also for the battles of Festubert, Givenchy and Hooge.

Admiral Sims Not a Canadian.

It is necessary to refroct one generally prevailing misapprehension about Admiral Sims. He is not a Canadian, and he has never been a British subject. The admiral has met the fate that invariably greets an American who has achieved distinguished success in arms, for his original home started the usual talk about his Presidential availability. The truth is that the admiral comes from a well-known Annapyanaka family, which has been established in the U. S. since 1635, nearly two hundred years. His father was Alfred W. Sims, an engineer and engineer, who went as a young man to Port Hope, Canada, to construct certain harbor improvements. He promptly fell in love with a Canadian girl of that town, Miss Mary Beadle, and married her. Here the future admiral was born, on June 15, 1858, and here, as his father's contracting work kept him in there for a considerable period, he spent the next ten years of his life. — Burton J. Hendrick, in the World's Work.

No Blundered.

Blank at the recent blunderer in making excuses we ever knew. The other day a lady he did not particularly care for met him and said:

"We shall be back from the beach pretty soon, and I'd be glad to have you come and lunch with us. Suppose we make it Thursday, a week from to-day. Wishing to get out of the city, you know, Albert, let me see—three weeks from today, you say. I shall be going to a funeral on that day."

The Expenditure of $610,000,000

How the last Victory Loan was spent

BEFORE buying Victory Bonds again you may want to know how Canada used the money you loaned her last year.

Canada borrowed the money to carry on the war and to provide credits for Great Britain and our Allies.

CONSIDERABLY more than one-half of the Victory Loan 1918 was spent on our soldiers. This included $312,900,000, for paying them, feeding them, bringing them home, separation allowances to their dependents, maintenance of medical services and vocational training schools.

For Demobilization

$59,000,000 of the Victory Loan 1918 was paid on account of authorized Soldiers' gratuities.

$9,000,000 was spent at Halifax for relief and reconstruction after the disaster.

\+ \+ \+ \+ \+ \+

Other disbursements were not, strictly speaking, expenditures, but National Re-investments.

For Trade Extension

To Great Britain for example:

$173,500,000 was loaned for the purchase of our wheat and cereals.

$9,000,000 for our fish.

$30,000,000 for other Foodstuffs

$2,900,000 for Canadian built ships.

$5,500,000 to pay other British obligations in Canada.

To our Allies, we loaned $8,200,000 for the purchase of Canadian foodstuffs, raw material and manufactured products.

The Re-investments will be paid back to Canada in due time, with interest.

These credits were absolutely necessary to secure the orders for Canada because cash purchases were impossible.

They have had the effect of tremendously helping agricultural and industrial workers to tide over the depression that would have followed the Armistice, had we not made these credit loans.

As far as money is concerned, 1919 has been, and is still—just as much a war year as 1918. Our main expenditures for war cannot be completed until well on into 1920. Thus another Victory Loan is necessary—Get ready to buy.

Maple Products.

Reports from various maple districts in Eastern Canada show that the maple products this year will beat all records. The makers of maple sugar and syrup in Canada produce 45,000. About 550,000 acres of land are being reserved in their natural wooded state, of which two-thirds are situate in the Province of Quebec. The Eastern Townships of Quebec are the centre of the world's supply of maple products. Maple syrup is rapidly becoming known in Great Britain as a table delicacy, while maple sugar is finding favor as a sweetmeat.

Loans to Soldiers.

The latest figures given out by the Soldier Settlement Board show that up till the 26th of July the board had approved 6,820 loans, aggregating $21,311,425.

The figures of the agricultural training branch of the board indicate that 25,722 applications had been received, of which 19,558 had been approved.

The greatest activity, of course, is in the four western provinces. As follows: Reports 6,212 applications; Saskatchewan, 5,642; British Columbia, 4,428; Manitoba, 4,191.

Thought It an Imitation.

A little Hebrew from the Toronto Ward was listening with open mouth to a Scotchman from Glasgow, who was inventing things up a bit in the Salvation Army but just back of the lines. One of the Tommies asked him the reason for the expression of awe on his countenance. "What's the matter, Abey, didn't you get the joke?" he was asked. "I don't know nottin' about no joke," was the answer, "but how that guy can imitate Harry Lauder!"

A Realization.

"How's prohibition workin' in Crimson Gulch?"

"All right," replied Three Finger Sam. "The boys are beginnin' to realize that a man's conversation is just as interestin' when he's sober an' a heap more reliable."

Princess Mary.

Princess Mary, only daughter of King George and Queen Mary of England and sister of the Prince of Wales, is colonel-in-chief of the Royal Scots. Princess Mary has the same sincere character that has won the admiration of the British people for her mother. It is said that she also desires to pay a visit to Canada.

Fight to Finish With Miners.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—There is apparently going to be a fight to a finish in the strike of the 200,000 Yorkshire miners. The Coal Controller has told the men's leaders it was impossible to concede their demands. No further conferences with a view of arriving at a settlement have been arranged. It is believed the strikers' funds will last only another fortnight. Already a quarter of a million pounds sterling have been spent in strike pay.

Afghan Amir Loses Subsidy.

SIMLA, India, Aug. 12.—The Amir of Afghanistan, under the peace treaty signed with General Bridges last week, not only loses his annual subsidy of £700,000 but, more than $5,000,000 in gratuity which it appears he had on deposit with the Government of India. Confiscation of these arrears is a hard blow for Habibullah.

Prime Minister to Meet Prince.

OTTAWA, Aug. 12.—Sir Robert Borden will leave within the next few days for St. John, N.B., to meet the Prince of Wales, who arrives there on August 15.

INNER MAN WELL FORTIFIED

American Soldier, Ordered to the Front, at Least Did Not Set Out on Mission Hungry.

The waitress brought him bacon and eggs, cheese and a pint of beer. When he had finished eating, he paid his bill and called the waitress.

"Now I want some lunch."

This time she brought him a plate of roast beef, vegetables and chicken, which he washed down with half a dozen cups of tea; then he paid his bill and called the wondering waitress back again.

"Now, my dear, I want dinner."

At 7:30, after having taken all three meals at once, the soldier left the restaurant, and a little while later sat out on a mission to the front.—Stars and Stripes.

Fraser River Fished Out.

Fraser River fishermen and canners agree that the sockeye salmon run on the Fraser this season has been a fair failure. The conviction is being forced, too, that British Columbia's richest fishing stream can no longer be expected to make a profitable yield, in other words, that the Fraser is fished out. In good seasons, ten years ago, as high as a million cases of fish were packed. This year's fish crop will be less than a tenth of that amount.

The end of the Fraser's production came in eight six years ago, when Canadian Northern contractors dynamited a mountain of rock into the river at Hell's Gate Canyon, and altogether prevented the salmon from ascending to the spawning grounds. From the time the sockeye heads toward the Fraser, American and Canadian traps, nets and seines lie in wait over an ocean highway of three hundred miles, the salmon has only about one chance in a thousand of getting through.

On the Skeena and other Northern British Columbia rivers, the salmon are running in record numbers. Fishermen there are making as high as five hundred dollars a day.

Indian Calm.

"You can't fease an Indian," said Indian Commissioner Malcolm McDorvel. "You can't ruffle an Indian's calm dignity.

"I once had the satisfaction to point out to an Indian chief an airplane sailing across the sky. It was the first airplane he'd ever seen, and I had fond hopes that he'd show some excitement.

"'There!' I said. 'There! What do you think of it? Isn't it extraordinary?'

"The chief looked up at the airplane calmly; and then he looked calmly at me.

"'But it was built to do that, wasn't it?' he said."

First Safety Bicycle.

The first of the safety bicycles was put on the market in 1886. In this the high front wheel was reduced and the rear wheel was about two-thirds the height of the front one. The machines with wheels of the same size appeared in 1884. Bicycles began to be popular about 1878, and the "craze" reached its height about 1895, when wheels had become low enough in price to be within the means of the multitude.

Official Terms Of Settlement Of English Railway Strike

NO ADULT RAILWAYMAN IN BRITAIN TO RECEIVE LESS THAN 51 SHILLINGS A WEEK—ARREARS OF WAGES PAID TO STRIKERS.

London, Oct. 6.—The official terms of settlement of the railwaymen's strike are as follows:

1. Work shall be resumed immediately.

2. Negotiations will be resumed on the understanding that they shall be completed before the end of the year.

3. Wages will be stabilized at the present level until Sept. 30, 1920, and at any time after Aug. 1 they may be reviewed in the light of circumstances then existing.

4. No adult railwayman in Great Britain shall receive less than 51 shillings per week while the cost of living is 110 per cent. above the pre-war level.

5. The Railway Union agrees that the men will work harmoniously with the men who returned to work or who remained at work during the strike. Nor shall there be any victimization of strikers.

6. Arrears of wages will be paid on resumption of work.

THE PRINCE TALKING WITH SHUSWAP INDIANS AT KAMLOOPS, B.C

RECEIVED BY HIM IN OVERPAYMENTS IN CONNECTION WITH MANITOBA PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, WITH INTEREST AT 5 PER CENT FROM JULY 1, 1914.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 6.—Judgment given Friday by Mr. Justice Curran orders Thomas H. Kelly, the contractor to pay back to the Government of Manitoba $1,207,351.65, the amount decided by the Board of Appraisal as having been received by him in overpayments in connection with the contract for the Manitoba Parliament Buildings with interest at 5 per cent. from July 1, 1914.

The decision was made upon application to appeal by Thomas H. Kelly against the ruling of the Board of Appraisers, composed of Robert Macdonald, Umpire, Montreal; S. C. Oxton, Deputy Minister of Public Works representing the Provincial Government and H. J. Burt, representing Mr. Kelly.

The contractor had charged misconduct on the part of Mr. Macdonald in that documents were produced before the Appraisal Board by Mr. Oxton which had not been shown to the representative of the defending firm. It was also alleged that Mr. Oxton had acted improperly in presenting the evidence.

Mr. Justice Curran in his judgment, states that he is unable to find any evidence of legal or moral conduct on the part of the representatives.

The amounts in the appraisers' report which were questioned in the appeal were $100,000 for repairs already made on caisson foundations, $615,000 for prospective repairs on the foundations and $34,000 for one-half the expenses of the Mathers Royal Commission.

Bring Domestics From Old Country

EDMONTON, Oct. 6—The real values of the Women's Institute movement is evidenced in its steady growth which resulted, a few months ago, in the federation of the Provincial organizations all over Canada. This Federation, which has as its President Mrs. Arthur Murphy of Edmonton, will hold its first meeting in Toronto in November. Toronto people who have realized the significance of the Provincial W. I. Convention, which has yearly met in this city, will look forward with keen anticipation to a nation-wide congress of women of this calibre.

The Corresponding Secretary of the Federation, Mrs. J. F. Price of Calgary, has come down in advance, bringing with her a little son, who is with her at the Queen's. Among other women who will play a prominent part in the convention are the Vice-Presidents, Mrs. Wm. Todd of Orillia and Mrs. J. E. Camache of Pont Rouge, P.Q.; the Treasurer, Miss Elsie Campbell of Fredericton, N.B., Mrs. Blackwood Wileman of Dufferin, B. C., Mrs. Charles Robson of Winnipeg and Mrs. Alfred Watt, who will represent the Women's Institutes of Great Britain.

The Institutes in Alberta, under the superintendency of Miss Mary MacIsaac, Mrs. Price says, have increased in membership by about 2,000 this year. There are now 247 branches and 12,000 members.

One of the interesting experiments they are making is by way of solving the servant problem. They expect to bring out from England fifty girls in the initial undertaking, 25 of whom will be allotted to the city and 25 to the country at wages of $25 a month for an eight-hour day. None will be placed in homes where there are no children. The girls will in all cases be provided with a room by themselves and they will have two or three afternoons off each week.

Stranded Barge Hilda Arrives

None of the Cargo Lost—Two Thirds of Wheat Saved Dry.

KINGSTON, Oct. 6.—On Friday afternoon the barge Hilda, in tow of the steamer Cornwall, of the Donnelly Wrecking Co., arrived in port. Mr. Donnelly stated that none of the cargo of the Hilda was lost, as two-thirds of the cargo of dry wheat was transferred into the Cobourg at Stoney Point while 12,000 bushels of wet was transferred to the lighter Harry D.

The Hilda was taken off at Stony Point about midnight, after working on her for 36 hours. The wrecking crew completed their work just two hours before a heavy sea came up. Thus they were very fortunate.

The cargo of wheat from the Harry D. is being transferred to the Cobourg so that she will proceed to Montreal with the Hilda in tow, carrying the remainder of her cargo.

Embargo To Britian Partially Lifted

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Oct.—The embargo against the sailing of vessels to Great Britain was partially lifted today by the Shipping Board as a result of the ending of the railroad strike there.

President's Condition Shows Improvement

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—President Wilson's condition continues to improve, and he passed a very good night, said a bulletin issued at 11 a.m. today, signed by the President's physicians.

King Albert and Queen Visit Niagara

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 6.—King Albert of Belgium, with Queen Elizabeth and their oldest son, Prince Leopold, arrived from Boston at nine o'clock this morning; and after viewing the American falls crossed over at about noon to the Canadian side, where they were met by Hon. N. W. Rowell, Sir Joseph Pope and others representing the Government of Canada. The royal party were later crossing to the Canadian side than was expected because King Albert insisted upon showing his queen points of interest viewed by him on his visit years ago, but which guides had omitted from the programme. The Canadian authorities were notified only Sunday of the intention of the royal party to cross to Canada. The visit was purely informal and no formal speeches were made. On meeting the reception party at the middle of the bridge, King Albert exchanged greetings with Mr. Rowell and expressed his pleasure on visiting the country of so many brave fellow who had fought for Belgium and the liberty of the world. The royal party remained about an hour and were driven about the park, greatly admiring the wonders of the Horseshoe Falls.

Two Balloons Missing In Race From St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 6.—Three days after landing in an isolated section of Canada, Capt. Paul J. McCullough, piloting the St. Louis Eighty-four in the national championship balloon race, reported the position of his balloon as approximately 850 miles north of St. Louis.

The Eighty-four's distance record does not change the result, so far as Wilson, of the championship, the Goodyear II, piloted by Ralph Upson, having made a flight of 1,050 miles.

Capt. McCullough's report gives added assurance to the race officials that the crews of two missing balloons, the Wichita, Kansas, entry and the St. Louis, probably have undergone a similar experience and have landed in some remote northern section.

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Cornwall, Oct. 6.—A young man named James E. Rolland of Iroquois, who was arrested at Springfield, Mass., last week and brought back to Cornwall by Special Agent Tisdale, of the G. T. R., Montreal, after escaping from a county constable, who effected his arrest on a charge of writing threatening letters to officials of the Grand Trunk Railway, appeared before Judge O'Reilly on Saturday and elected to be tried by a jury at the general sessions, which will be held here in December. After spending a few days in confinement, he appears to have changed his mind about waiting until December, for yesterday when the turnkey went into the jail he found Rolland hanging by the neck to the bars of his cell door. He had improvised a rope out of the cotton sheet of his bed, and had all but succeeded in ending his life. Rolland remained in an unconscious condition nearly all morning. He had written a note on the leaf of a memorandum book in an evidently steady hand, before he made the attempt to end his life. The note was in lead pencil and was as follows: "My life has been a failure, so I have decided to settle it all, good bye, J. E. Rolland." A few more minutes would have ended Rolland's career. He has since been placed under a special guard.

Called By Death

JOHN MILTON PLATT.

John Milton Platt was a native of the County of Prince Edward, having been born in the township of Athol four score years ago. His early life was spent at home on the farm. His education was acquired under the limitations of those early days, and it is a tribute to his abilities and energies that he emerged from such conditions with the qualifications of a school teacher. After teaching for a time his good work found recognition in his appointment as a Public School Inspector. Later he turned to journalism and published a paper in Picton known as the New Nation. The physician's calling had attracted him, and finally he gave up everything to pursue the studies necessary to qualify for the profession. Petitioner, in due time he was established in Picton, a physician and surgeon of good repute.

Dr. Platt had too much public sentiment, was too much concerned with public questions to confine himself to the routine of professional life. In the early eighties he was a member of the House of Commons, having been elected by the vote of his fellow citizens in the county. He was in philosophic frame of mind, a man of good judgment, calm deliberation, unbiased conviction, and was not slow to impress his ideas upon the people. These qualities made him not only popular upon the public platform, but a valuable addition to the debating power and the committee work of Parliament. In 1899 he was appointed Warden of the Provincial Penitentiary at Kingston, which position he continued to fill until failing health compelled his retirement in 1911, since then he has lived in Picton, his activities being more and more restricted by growing infirmities. For many years were spent in domestic happiness, fellowship with friends, and quiet waiting for the Messenger whose call came unheralded on the morning of September 27th.

It is as a physician that Dr. Platt will be best remembered. He had such a knowledge and skill in which he was well abreast of the times, the kindness of a tender and sympathetic heart. He went far beyond the bounds of mere professionalism in attention to his patients. There are hundreds still living to remember with gratitude his services in their homes.

A profound respect for citizenship such as was represented in the life and work of the deceased brought together a large and reverent company for the funeral which was conducted by Rev. Alfred Brown, interment taking place in Glenwood cemetery.—Picton Gazette.

MRS. J. STEVENSON.

In the passing this morning of Mrs. Mary Stevenson, relict of the late Mr. John Stevenson, probably the oldest born inhabitant of the city has gone to her reward. Deceased was in her 84th year and was born in Belleville when it was but as Myers' Creek. She was a daughter of the late Mr. James Wilson, who with the late Mr. A. T. Dafoe, was on the first of what was known as a messenger for the municipality. Mrs. Stevenson, while being in failing health for some time, was only a few days seriously ill. Deceased had been for years a devoted member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and she was a lady highly esteemed by all who knew her for the many womanly qualities she possessed. Some years ago Mr. Stevenson preceded her to the tomb. A family of four sons and one daughter survive. The sons are: Hugh, John, Robert and Thomas, all of Toronto. The latter is employed the printing trade at The Intelligencer office and Hugh at The Ontario office

Refuse To Pay Exorbitant Rents

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 6.—"Refuse to pay exorbitant increases in rents and decline to move if ordered to do so by landlords. Jam the courts with ejectment proceedings and owners of property who are seeking unfair profits on their rentals will soon come to terms. If the number of tenants refusing to pay toll to gougers is large enough the courts will be so flooded with eviction suits that this crisis will be passed by the time the majority of the cases are settled."

This is the advice of Corporation Counsel Wilcox to citizens of Detroit. Such proceedings on the part of renters, Mr. Wilcox claims, will do more to stop the present wave of profiteering than any legislation that can be enacted.

"The landlord who raises rents out of all reason expects to reap immediate benefits, but if he has to wait a long time for court action on his case, his hoped-for profits will dwindle considerably," Mr. Wilcox says.

Members of the Detroit Bar Association are also asked to refuse to accept cases from landlords against tenants who decline to pay exorbitant rentals.

Whole Family Dead From Gas

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—Gas escaping from a broken pipe some time during the early hours of Saturday morning caused the death from asphyxiation of an entire family, Peter Cardinal, his wife and five children, of 402 Rideau Street.

Mr. Cardinal and four of the children were dead when the tragedy was discovered between 12.15 and 12.30 p.m. Saturday.

Mrs. Alexina Cardinal died on the way to Water Street Hospital, and 16-year-old Wilfrid Cardinal lingered unconscious until two o'clock Sunday, when pleuro-pneumonia, which had developed, added the seventh and last name to the list of victims of the tragedy, and wrote the final word in the destruction of an entire family.

Peter Cardinal, aged 56, well known in Ottawa as a driver for many years; Mrs. Alexina Cardinal, aged 36; Miss Alexina Cardinal, aged 18; Miss Wilfrid Cardinal, aged 16; Denis Cardinal, aged 5; Lucile Cardinal, aged 3; Neolla Cardinal, a baby of 16 months.

OFFER OF SETTLEMENT IN MARY BASIL CASE.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 4.—It is learned that defendants in the abduction case of Sister Basil against Archbishop Spratt would like to settle the proceedings for a sum of money much less than the award of $24,000 made by the jury.

The case, which has gone through the Court of Appeal, has been dragging for months, the plaintiff's counsel having issued writs of attachment upon the personal property of the defendants, the Archbishop and Dr. Daniel Phelan. At the time of the trial the case could have been settled for $10,000 but the defendants refused it. It is thought some settlement may be made in order that the case may be closed.

In this city. The daughter is Mrs. James Hall, of Belleville. The sympathy of many friends will be extended to the bereaved.

Missing Bushmen Reported Safe

SUDBURY, Oct. 6.—The three bush men reported lost for the past ten days in the Rockpond district have reported at Biscotasing safe and sound. They have been out for ten days without shelter of any kind and subsisted on berries and boughs. They are hale and hearty, and their only regret is that the fourteen men who have been searching so industriously for them, since their disappearance had to suffer the hardships of a hard and fruitless search.

Archambault, an experienced bushman, found that his party had travelled farther than expected the first day out and as they were in virgin bush he lost his bearings. He landed at Biscotasing Lake, the following day, and by following the chain of lakes came out on C.P.R. Instead of attempting to retrace his steps he came through the bush to the lumber office at Stockpool.

They travelled more than seventy-five miles, and incidentally cruised a large timber area. They have rejoined their families among whom there was great concern as to their safety, all three men being married.

New Cabinet Formed In Turkey

PARIS, Oct. 6.—A new Cabinet has been formed in Turkey in succession to the ministry of Damid Ferid Pasha, which resigned recently, the new Grand Vizier being General Ali Riza Pasha.

FORMER POLICEMAN DEAD.

Kingston, Oct. 6.—The death occurred Sunday morning of Nicholas Timmerman, who served on the Kingston police force for more than thirty years. For some years he was Sanitary Inspector of the city. He was 70 years of age and was born in Holland.

No Sympathy Strikes For R'lway Employes

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—Probability of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes participating in any sympathetic strike, was minimized at the sessions in St. Patrick's Hall, when the convention vote that they would only be permitted to take part in such strikes on a two-thirds vote of all members and then only with the approval of the Grand President.

The convention voted to drop the color line and to admit, colored, railroad employees to membership on the same basis as white employes, but separate local divisions at different points will be organized for the colored employees. The order of sleeping car porters will now nominally cease to exist, the members being admitted to full membership in the C. B. of R. E.

A resolution of sympathy with, and endorsement of, the stand of the British railroad strikers will be moved at the closing session of the convention.

The convention also voted to continue opposition to the Dominion Express Brotherhood which is regarded as a company formed organization, not truly representative of the employes' interests.

A PLATFORM OF PROGRESS

The policies upon which Sir William Hearst will ask the people of Ontario to pass judgment are set out under the following headings:

(1) The greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every shape and form;
(2) The faithful enforcement of the people's verdict on the liquor question;
(3) Vigorous support of Hydro-Electric development and cheap light and power for our farmers;
(4) Conversion of certain railway lines into Hydro-Electric lines;
(5) Good roads reaching every part of Ontario;
(6) A pension fund for mothers;
(7) Direct representation of Labor in the Cabinet;
(8) Establishment of a minimum wage;
(9) Unification of the labor laws of Canada on a just and equitable basis;
(10) Such further laborlegislation within Provincial jurisdiction as may arise out of the findings of the National Industrial Conference and the International Labor Conference;
(11) Housing accommodation for industrial workers;
(12) Special consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation;
(13) A new era for education, providing technical and agricultural instruction throughout the province;
(14) Improvement of transportation facilities in Northern Ontario;
(15) Conservation of our timber resources and encouragement to mining;
(16) Measures to reduce the high cost of living;
(17) Protection of the public health, generous assistance to hospitals and charities, and special care of mental defectives.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE. CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

Major Hamilton Refused

A statement was issued at Sault Ste. Marie by Major Harry Hamilton that he has no intention of opposing Sir William Hearst for the riding of Sault Ste. Marie. Efforts have been made for the past two weeks to persuade Major Hamilton to be the Liberal candidate in this riding, as he is very popular with the returned soldiers of the district. Unless a candidate is put in the field by the Independent Labor party Sir William will have no opposition.

CONSERVATIVE WHIP LOST CONVENTION

C. R. McKeown, for the past twelve years Dafferin's representative in the Legislature, went down to defeat in the party convention held at Shelburne and it was significant of the aroused consciousness of power in the agricultural community that the man who displaced the late member was a farmer, John Reburn of Melmer, ex-warden of the County of Dufferin. Reburn won the nomination after a number of ballots from a field of seven, fighting it out at the last with Mr. McKeown, and coming out ahead with a narrow margin of six votes.

MAGLADERY FOR TEMISKAMING

In accepting the nomination of the Conservatives of Temiskaming, Ontario, Capt. Tom Magladery went after the Liberal wing for entering his riding to fight him while he was overseas fighting the Germans. Capt. Magladery complimented the Conservatives for having fought any of politics during the war, but he was sorry he could not say the same for the Liberals. He thought that the least the Liberal wing could have done was to have gone into a riding where the member was home instead of trying to put a knife in the back of a man who was overseas. Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Mines, was the principal speaker, and he made two pronouncements of importance to the North. One was that before long there would be a trunk road from North Bay to Cochrane to connect the North with Old Ontario. This is a big problem of the North and has been receiving the unabridged attention of the North Ontario Associated Boards of Trade. His second pronouncement was in regard to the extension of the T. and N. O. Railway from Cochrane to Moose Factory. The convention was one of the largest in the history of the riding and Mr. Ferguson's answers to the recent charges made by Mr. Dewart while here were loudly applauded. Especially was the high tribute he pointed out that he had Mr. Dewart's pledge idea in regard to sending men to the front been carried out Canada would have had to withdraw from the war a discredited nation. The Hearst Government in contrast to this had placed the whole resources of the Government at the Empire's disposal.

Hon. Mr. Henry, Minister of Agriculture, will address a meeting in Foxboro, Friday evening, October 10, in Gowsell Hall, in the interests of the Conservative candidate, Mr. Sandy Gowsell. Many Belleville citizens, friends of Sandy Grant will be in attendance.

AS SEEN IN TWEED

Tweed News—A political contest in East Hastings is now practically assured. Our present representative, Mr. Grant, is in the field and Mr. Denyes is out as a U.F.O. representative. It now remains to be seen whether a third candidate will enter the lists. It has been said that Major Jas. H. Clare's name is being mentioned quite freely as a possible Liberal candidate. Should he might in as Mr. Grant and Mr. Denyes are both Conservatives.

As between the two men now before the electorate both are highly respected and thoroughly reliable men and a credit to the riding.

We contend, however, that Mr. Denyes has any qualification that should give him priority of claim to the position over Mr. Grant. Mr. Grant has given himself unreservedly to work of representing this riding at Toronto and we are sure his record as a public servant, stamps him as efficient, capable and thoroughly honest.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

Many Users Overcome Craving for Tobacco Through Use of Tasteless Remedy Without Effort or Will Power.

Tobacco is a habit that is easily overcome, according to many who have used the new tasteless remedy, Tobacco Redeemer. This remedy is said to remove all craving for tobacco in any form in a few days. It is entirely vegetable; and there is no secret about the ingredients, as they are printed on the label. EXCITING STUNTS IN NEW FAIRBANKS FILM

Artistic photography is quite in vogue, but "Dodge" Fairbanks believes in bright, cheerful backgrounds for his particular type of pictures rather than the dim, indefinite settings, character-istic of some film productions. It is his theory that to try to spread the gospel of good cheer in a dark room is even more ridiculous than expecting people to laugh during a funeral procession. Therefore his new photoplay "The Reincarnation of Kinkaroo," which is being shown at Griffin's tonight to Wednesday, with a special matinee Wednesday is idid in bright, cheerful interiors. He had an individual stunt town built in preference to the typical setting that usually exploits negligence and filth on the part of the natives and is bound to be distasteful to screen patrons. This town was erected on the side of California hill, and vivid with colorful textiles that are pleasing and automatically have effect on the action of the play. The new picture is said to have as its central constructive philosophy, not of a preachy nature, but treated in a comedy-dramatic spirit. Fairbanks believed that people of Canada like to laugh. He likes to laugh. It brace him up and makes his feel fine and keeps him in prime mental condition. To him, laughter is a necessity. His nervous system requires it, and it is the object of his new picture to make everybody laugh, with the hope that it will bring a happy moment to those who know for the most part only sorrow and discontent. The program will be augmented by the exhibition of a new Sennett comedy, and three other selected plays and three special vaudeville features.

For robbing M. G. McPhee, a Vancouver hotelkeeper, of $1,100 in a Montreal hotel, Judge Rasin sentenced Joseph R. Howard to serve years in the Penitentiary.

Wedding Bells

PARLIAMEN—SPENCER

On Wednesday, October 1st, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Spencer of Bath. Prince Edward County, when their only daughter was united in marriage to Mr. Percy Parliament of the same place. At 11 a.m. to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. Arthur Hall, Belleville, the bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father and looked charming in a gown of ivory silk crepe de chine trimmed with satin ribbon and seed pearls. After the congratulations the guests repaired to the dining room, which was beautifully decorated in pink and white. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, set with pearls. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for an extended trip to Kentucky, the bride travelling in a suit of brown velour with hat to match. On their return, I ask the indulgence of County.

KELLY—O'DONOHUE

A quiet wedding was solemnized in St. Mary's Church, Campbellford, on Wednesday, Oct. 1st, when Jeannette M. O'Donohue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. O'Donohue was united in marriage to Mr. P. J. Kelly of Marlbank, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Whibbs, pastor of the church in the presence of immediate friends and relatives. The bride was attired in her travelling suit of navy blue serge, with navy and sand hat and ermine furs. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick of Belleville, as matron of honor, while the groom was supported by Mr. F. Fitzpatrick. The young couple left by motor for western points, before taking up their residence in Markdale.

Birth of the Elephant.

First use of the elephant as a symbol of the Republican party was in 1874, when Thomas Nast, the dean of the celebrated political cartoonists of America, made the "pondorous pachyderm" the G. O. P. emblem. Nast was born in Bavaria September 27, 1840, and came to America at the age of six. In the early sixties he went to Italy and was with Garibaldi as a writer for British and American newspapers. As political cartoonist for a popular weekly, he achieved an international reputation, and his cartoons were said to have been largely responsible for the downfall of the Tweed ring in New York. In 1874 Nast drew a cartoon representing an elephant labeled "Republican Party," about to fall into a chasm. Nast also depicted the democratic party as a tiger, but later the donkey was substituted by the cartoonist of opposite political faith, and this has been the democratic emblem ever since. Nast died in Ecuador in 1902.

Will Mark Battlefields.

The commemoration of Canadian battlefields is now occupying the attention of the Dominion Government. Hon. A. K. MacLean has made a tour of what was in short a line now known as our western front, and his visit was mainly in connection with this object. It has been proposed to erect eight memorials commemorating probably the Canadian battlefields at St. Julien, Courcelle, Hill 60, Vimy Ridge, St. Eloi, Passchendaele, Amiens, and Cambrai. It is understood the Government has already selected a site for the Ypres memorial.

Championship Baseball Played At Hamilton

G. T. R. TEAM OF BELLEVILLE WINS FIRST GAME OF FINALS FROM HARVESTERS—A RECORD CROWD IN ATTENDANCE — NOTES OF THE GAME.

Hail to the conquering heroes. There appears to be no doubt but that the fast G. T. R. baseball team of this city will this year be acclaimed the champions of the Amateur Baseball Association of Ontario. Up to the present time they have met and vanquished all their opponents, and the prospects are that the final game will be played here on Saturday between the Harvesters team of Hamilton, champions of that city and western part of the Province.

On Saturday afternoon on the Harvester's diamond, at Hamilton, the G. T. R. team of this city, met their final opponents and disposed of them to the King taste. The playing of a brass band, deafening noises, created by all manner of devices, when the Belleville players came to bat, does for the purpose, if possible, of worrying Goyer, the pitcher, proved unavailing. Freddie is not so easily disturbed and pitched one of his best games. While the number of strike outs to his credit was not as numerous as some other games he has pitched, he was as steady as clock work and at critical times was prepared to deliver, the members of the team. A couple of errors it was apparent that the Belleviers by wide throwing was responsible for two of the Hamilton players reaching 1st base, but it did not have the effect of altering the final score. It was anticipated that it would be a fast game owing to the reputation of both teams, and such it was. The Harvesters of the Ambitious City not only were champions of the city league, but by a whirlwind finish disposed of the Guelph team, which was the winner of the western league. Hamiltonians naturally expected that their boys would win, but they were treated to a bad jolt. There were rumors in the air before and while the game was in progress that something would be tried to to be pulled off if it was oparent that the Belleville team was likely to win the game, and it occurred in the ninth innings. When our boys came to bat at the ninth innings a rush was made by men, women and children for the diamond and despite the frantic efforts of a policeman and officials, the crowd left the bleachers and crowded so close to the base line that at one period the game had to stop to get the people back. The noise was also deafening, but its effect again proved futile. The Belleville team was retired without a run and the Harvesters made a determined effort to either reduce the score or tie it but their efforts were in vain and only one hit was made off Goyer, and it was by no means a serious one. The game ended by a score of 5 to 2 in favor of the G. T. R. team of Belleville. It was a great game to win and was witnessed by about 4,000 spectators. The crowd about the outer part of the diamond, was such that a ground rule had to be made and only two bases were allowed to be made for any hit made. In the fifth innings Mills made a hit over the centre fielder's head, which naturally would have been a home run but the ball went into the crowd and he could only take two bases. Under the circumstances it was enough, but rather discouraging for the batter.

Mr. Alex Kay of Peterboro was umpire on strikes and balls, and Mr. D. Craig of Hamilton on bases. Both fulfilled their duties in a most acceptable manner.

Liners

A number of former Bellevillians who are residents of Hamilton, were spectators of the game and their sympathy was with the winners.

Mr. and Mrs Charles E Jeffrey, and Mr. and Mrs W. H. Gilbert motored to Hamilton to see the game, and the two ladies were certainly enthusiastic rooters for the G. T. R. players.

The G. T. R. team made 5 runs, had 6 hits and 4 errors. The Harvesters made 2 runs, had 3 hits and 6 errors

An effort was made to have the return game played here on Friday afternoon next when a half holiday would have been proclaimed, but it could not be arranged The game will be played on Saturday afternoon.

Before the game here on Saturday the diamond at the Agricultural Park will be put in first class condition.

The press was well represented at the game in addition to the representatives from the Hamilton papers, the Mail & Empire, World and Star of Toronto had representatives, also The Intelligencer of this city.

The management of the Harvester team were courteous in their treatment to visitors. A portion of the bleachers were reserved for Bellevillans, who were heard from during the progress of the game.

An Absolute Untruth

By the Referendum Committee Confusing and Misleading the Public

THE Citizens' Liberty League has discovered what appears to be a deliberate attempt to confuse and mislead the people of Ontario on the forthcoming Referendum.

Flamingly colored and sensational circulars have been sent broadcast over the Province in which it is claimed that—in the words of the advertising as shown in the copy here reproduced—"To vote 'Yes' in one column and 'No' in the others makes your ballot worthless."

That statement by the Referendum Committee is an absolute untruth. And either the Referendum Committee knew it to be untrue when they wrote it, and used it to mislead the public—or they must confess a childlike ignorance of the whole issue that would be laughable if it were not serious to all the people—who rightly accept the printed word as true and form their opinion accordingly.

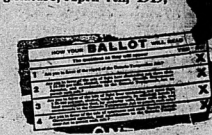
"To submit the one question set forth in the present Act (The Ontario Temperance Act) would settle nothing—would not, in my opinion, be to the best interests of temperance—because after a vote on that question we would know little more about what the real sentiment of the people is on the subject than we do to-day.

We would simply have to take another vote.

"If favourable settlement will note every question is separate.

" . . . . . each question stands by itself.

"On each question the voter must make a deliberate decision and vote accordingly. The full force of public opinion will therefore be recorded for and against each question."



The Citizens' Liberty League conscientiously believes that the only true solution of Ontario's vexed temperance problem is the repeal of The Ontario Temperance Act and the enactment of new legislation that will permit the general sale of light non-intoxicating beer and light wine, and the sale of pure spirituous liquors through Government stores under restrictions which the Government may deem it wise to adopt.

But the Citizens' Liberty League will not stoop to misrepresentation—and it is not going to allow the Referendum Committee to do so unchallenged.

The temperance problem is one of the most vital issues ever faced by the people of this Province. It will never be solved by distortion, misrepresentation and villification, but only through a fair, just and honest presentation and the weighing of the facts.

The Citizens' Liberty League calls upon the Referendum Committee to deal squarely and honestly with the Electorate.

Vote "Yes" to all Four Questions

Mark your ballot with an X. Any other marking will spoil it. Remember also—Every voter must vote on every question or his ballot will be spoiled.

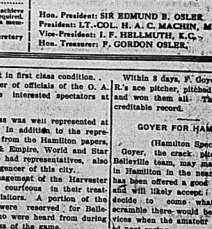
GOYER FOR HAMILTON.

(Hamilton Spectator)

Goyer, the crack pitcher of the Belleville team, may make his home in Hamilton in the near future. He has been offered a good position and will probably accept. If he does decide to come what an aggregation there would be for his services when the amateur season opened next spring.



Within 8 days, F. Goyer, the C. R.'s ace pitcher, pitched three games and won them all. This is a most creditable record.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

Mrs. Walford did not evince any signs of perturbation, however, when they rejoined her, nor did she ask for particulars of what they had seen. She seemed to think it likely they might not feel talkative. She said she had enjoyed it all immensely, sitting there in the shade, and that the gardiea, who had come back to her, had imparted the most romantic facts about the chateau. Upon some of them she was convinced that Mr. Kent could easily write an historical novel, which she was sure would be deeply interesting, though she never read historical novels herself. Had Mr. Kent and Cynthia any idea if the quantity of pippins grown in the immediate neighborhood every summer? The gardien had told her that too. No; it had nothing to do with the chateau; but it was simply extraordinary, and the bulk of the fruit was converted into cider, and the peasantry obtained it quite for nothing, which was a perfect godsend for them when they could not afford the wine and she had no doubt much more wholesome besides, though personally, she had only tasted cider once, and then it had made her ill.

They drove back down the dusty hill listening to her. The girl spoke scarcely at all, and the onus of appearing entertained devolved upon Kent opposite. When the fly deposited them at the hotel door at last, he drew a sigh in which relief and apprehension were blended. Cynthia followed her mother upstairs and he caught a glance from her and smiled his gratitude; but he questioned inwardly what would be the upshot of the announcement she was about to make. He perceived with some amusement that he was on the verge of an experience of whose terrors he had often read without realizing them. He was a candidate for a young lady's hand. Yes; it made one nervous. He asked himself for the twentieth time in the past few days if he had been mistaken in supposing Mrs. Walford overestimated his eligibility; perhaps he was no worse off than she thought him. But even then he quaked, for he had seen too little society since he was a boy to be versed in such matters, and he was by no means ready to make an affidavit that she had extended him encouragement.

A signal at the entrance to the dining-room was exciting but obscure and there was no opportunity for inquiries before the ladies took their seats. He anathematized an epergne which tonight seemed more than usually obstructive, Cynthia was in white. He did not recollect having seen her in the gown before, and the glimpse of her queenliness shook him. No mother would accord him so peerless a treasure. He had been mad.

It was interminable, this procession of courses, relieved by glances at a prôtle down the table. His mouth was dry, and he ordered champagne to raise his pluck. It tasted, him, without steadying his nerves. The room was like a Turkish bath; yet the curve of cheek he descried was as pale as the corsage. How could she manage it? He himself was bedewed with perspiration.

He could wait no longer. He went on to the veranda and lit a cigar. He saw Mrs. Walford come out, and, dropping it, rose to meet her. She was alone. Where was Cynthia. Seeking him? Was her absence designed?

"I hope our excursion hasn't tired you, Mrs. Walford?"

"Oh dear no," she assured him. She hesitated, but her manner was blithesome. His courage mounted. "Shall we take a turn?" she suggested.

"Mrs. Walford, your daughter has told you that I.....of our.....of our overseas. tion this afternoon, perhaps? I hasn't many pretensions, but I am devoted to her. She is good enough to care a little for me. Will you give her to me, and let me spend my life in making her happy?"

She made a gesture of sudden artlessness.

"I was perfectly astonished!" she exclaimed. "To tell you the truth, Mr. Kent,, I was quite dumfounded when Cynthia spoke to me. I hadn't any idea of it. I—er—I don't whether in particularly obtuse in these fairs—hee! hee! hee!—but I hadn't a suspicion."

"But you do not refuse your consent?" he begged. "You do not disapprove?"

"I never was more astounded in my life. Of course, I—er—from what we've seen I you..... most desirable—most desirable in many ways. At the same time—er—Cynthia's a delicate girl; always been used to every luxury. So few yong men are really in a position to justify their marrying."

"My position is this," he said; "it's my profession and a little money—not much; a thousand pounds, left me by a relative last year. Assisted by that money, I reck n that my profession would certainly enable us to live a comfortable fashion until I could support a wife by my pen alone." Her jaw dropped. He felt it before he turned, and shivered. "I'm afraid you do not think it very excellent?" he murmured.

She was breathing agitatedly.

"It..... I must say—er—I fear her father would never sanctn n—Oh no; I am sure. It is out of the question."

Letters to the Editor

U. F. O. CANDIDATE RETIRES

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir:—Permit me through the columns of your paper to explain to the Electors of Prince Edward County my reason, for resigning the nomination of the U. F. O. for a seat in the Provincial Legislature. As you know I was appointed an enumerator to prepare the voters lists in Polling Sub-Division No. 2, Hallowell under the Referendum Act.

Previous to the Mass Meeting, at which I was selected, I communicated with the Legal Adviser of the Mail and Empire, but receiving no reply to my questions regarding the matter in the Legal columns of the paper up to the day of the Mass meeting, I accepted the nomination. A few days after this I heard that the question was being raised whether I was eligible or not, and I took the matter up with my own solicitor, laying the entire matter before him and received the following reply:

Picton, Sept. 10th, 1919

Clarence Mallory Esq.,

Dear Sir:—In my opinion if the fees for your services as enumerator are paid before your official nomination a candidate there can be no objection to your being a candidate at the next Provincial election.

I therefore supposed the matter was closed but the Mail and Empire of Sept. 27th contained no answer to my question which I submitted to them on Sept. 8th, and held I was not eligible. Not feeling satisfied with the matter yet I sent on Monday, Sept. 29 the following telegram to the Legal Advisor of the U. F. O. at Toronto.

Picton, Sept. 29th, 1919

Legal Adviser U. F. O.,

130 King St., East,

Toronto, Ontario.

I acted as enumerator preparing lists for Referendum. Does this disqualify me from accepting nomination for seat in Legislature. Legal Adiser, Mail and Empire says it does. See Saturday's issue. Wire reply.

Clarence Mallory

Toronto, Sept. 29th, 1919.

Clarence Mallory,

Picton, Ontario.

Fear you are not eligible. Advise you to decline nomination.

Legal Adviser, U. F. O.

As this seemed to settle the matter on Tuesday, Sept. 30th, I handed my resignation to Mr. R. W. Ireland, County President U. F. O.

Yours truly,

Clarence Mallory

"THE GIFT"

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Sir:—I read with very much interest the letter "Church Attendance" in your issue of September 25th.

I have waited until now thinking some more able person would have answered it, but, failing to see any comemnt, I ask the indulgence of space in your valuable paper.

Mr. Bogle voices the opinion of many and I feel sure that now a few are satisfied as to the truth of all he (Mr. Bogle) in his choice and able manner says—if too hurriedly prepared sermons.

—But why he should suggest that choirs should be hidden I cannot understand. Is it right to think that men and women who have been toiling hard during the week and who have been blessed with voices to sing, giving their services gratis, should hide that talent, perhaps the only one they have, under a bushel.

No, they rather come out more boldly and tell out by that wonderful gift, "The Old Old Story."

The great Master said, "I see no best in kind, but in degree; I gave a various gift to each, to charm, to strengthen, and to teach."

Why Every Canadian Will Buy Victory Bonds

TRIUMPHANT, Canada emerged from the war, a nation great in arms and great in trade, a nation respected and admired by the world.

And Canada will continue to hold high her head.

Our obligations to the heroic dead, to the crippled and disabled soldiers, and to the men who were so fortunate as to return, will all be met.

That is Canada's duty.

To fulfill it, every Canadian will do his part.

Canadians will keep the machinery of prosperity humming, the factory chimneys smoking, the sea and lake ports bustling with activity, and the surplus products of farm and factory going forth to Great Britain and other lands.

But to accomplish all this more National Working Capital is needed.

The money is here, but it is in the hands of individuals rather than in the hands of the nation. It is in the savings banks, loan companies and generally scattered throughout Canada. For instance, our deposits in banks and post offices have increased in five years from one billion ($1,086,013,704) to a billion and three-quarters ($1,740,462,509), an increase of nearly two-thirds of a billion ($654,448,805).

The people will loan their individual savings to the nation to be used as National Working Capital in maintaining our commercial prosperity.

Every man and woman from every walk of life is interested in maintaining this prosperity. Therefore, every man and woman from every walk of life is personally interested in making the Victory Loan 1919 an overwhelming success.

It will serve to keep Canada in its present place, far up in the vanguard of World Progress.

Victory Loan 1919

"Every Dollar Spent in Canada."

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

BIRD NOTES.

All Sounds Do Not Come From Their Throats.

Has it ever occurred to you that many of the sounds which birds make do not come from their throat at all, but are produced as mechanically as the noise made by a boy rattling a stick along palings.

Some kind of woodpecker produces a sound exactly like the distant roll of a drum, which can be heard half a mile away on a still day.

The "beats" are made at the rate of at least sixteen per second, and how the bird can do it is one of the many mysteries of nature which has still to be solved.

The "beating" of a snipe is another puzzling performance. The snipe has a way of rising high in the air, then dipping sharply, with wings and tail outspread.

The wings quiver from force of air pressure driven through them, and the sound is believed to come from the rapid fluttering of the individual feathers, in any case the sound is produced not vocally but instrumentally.

You have perhaps heard a corncrake "rasping." It is a most harsh and unpleasant noise, rather like that of a mowing machine. It is more than suspected that this sound, too, is produced otherwise than from the throat of the bird.

In Canada is a sort of a nightjar called by the country folk a "bull-bat." Like all nightjars, it is a nightflying bird, but sometimes comes out in the twilight. The sound this bird makes is a curious booming drone which certainly does not come from the throat, but is probably made by its wings as it swoops after an insect.

Woman Guilty Of Big Thefts

Wholesale Thievings From Residence of Former Belleville Physician.

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—Judge Coatsworth, in the Criminal Sessions convicted Mrs. Enis Paradis of stealing $3,000 worth of house furnishings, jewelry and clothing from the home of Dr. Perry Goldsmith, 84 Carlton St., and receiving $13,000 worth of stock certificates, and $1,000 which had been stolen from 40 Prince Arthur Avenue, the home of J. J. Main. Sentence was deferred until Monday, and at the request of counsel, the woman will be medically examined in the interval. The woman's husband, George Paradis, who was similarly charged, was found not guilty and discharged.

When Mrs. Paradis was arrested at the Claremont Hotel, in her possession was found a document which showed that she had rented a vault in a downtown bank. This when opened was found to contain the missing bonds and a box containing the stolen jewelry. Another receipt showed that a box of valuable china, stolen from the Goldsmith home, had been placed in storage in the name of Sutton. At the hotel the police recovered a suitcase filled with dresses, and also linen, pillows, etc., which had come from the Carlton Street, which house had been rented furnished to Mrs. Paradis during the absence of the doctor overseas. The most of the articles stolen had been removed from an attic, which had been left locked. Mrs. Paradis, who admitted that she from ten to twelve grains of a drug per day, stated that a man named Jack McEwen gave her the bonds and jewelry to keep for him. She denied that she knew the stuff had been stolen, or that she intentionally took anything from the Carlton Street house which did not belong to her. A few things, such as table linen, might have been mixed up with her own things by mistake. The receipt for the china, she said, came addressed to Sutton at her house. She did not know him, but McEwen was one of her roomers. She had given the police a photograph of the man, as said they could have got him if they had wanted him. She knew absolutely nothing, she said, of the robbery of the Main house.

In the bank vault were found two Victory Loan bonds, which the mother of Mrs. Paradis had given on her death to the accused, and a bank book in possession of the woman showed that in May, 1917, she had a bank balance at El Paso amounting to more than $10,000. Mrs. Paradis is also a holder of Liberty Loan bonds of the value of several thousands of dollars.

W. Horkins, counsel, declared that Mrs. Paradis had been preyed upon by clever people, who had made her their victim.

Carnation Milk
"from Contented Cows" "MADE IN CANADA"

Delicious as cream for tea, coffee, fruit or cereals. For the children's drink dilute it with water—it is evaporated, double the richness of ordinary milk. For cooking you can add even more than the same quantity of water. For baby, Carnation is the ideal, safe milk—use as your doctor prescribes.

Let Carnation Milk solve your milk problem. To-day. Buy it when you buy your groceries—your grocer is the Carnation Milkman. Directions on every can.

"The Story of Carnation Milk" is an interesting booklet we have prepared. It contains 100 tested recipes. Write us at Aylmer, Ont., and we'll gladly mail you a copy—FREE.

Remember your grocer can supply you.

INNER MAN WELL FORTIFIED

American Soldier, Ordered to the Front, at Least Did Not Set Out on Empty Stomach.

The American soldier entered a restaurant in the Rue Rabelais and, after carefully studying the menu, decided on dinner.

The waitress brought him bacon and eggs, cheese and a pint of beer. When she had finished eating he told her to bring another dinner.

"Another dinner?" she asked.

"Yes, another dinner," he replied. "I'm not sure when I'll get another square meal, and I'm going to make the most of it."

"Why don't you have dinner?" asked the waitress of a neighboring customer, but she didn't answer her.

At 1.55, after having finished another dinner, the soldier paid his check, thanked the waitress and left. Little was heard of him after that, except that he was killed at Soissons.

New Textile Material.

Textilli, said to be used in 20 of the largest German factories, is a substitute material that is predicted to outlast the war as a permanent addition to the textile industry. It consists of a paper thread and a fiber thread twisted together and, though not possessing the quality they in themselves, it is claimed to have yielded products of the unlimited cannot distinguished from the former linen and silk fabrics. The fiber gives a firmness that paper fabrics do not possess. The material is made into weaving and sewing yarns and webs of all kinds.

Big Appetite for Bugs.

A city swallow will eat a thousand flies, mosquitoes, wheat-midgets or beetles that injure fruit trees, in a day and therefore are to be encouraged, says the conservation commission of Washington, which is establishing bird-houses in parks among school children for bird-house building. This bird is also known as the cave swallow because it plasters its nest on the outside of a barn or other building, and under the eaves of a row of several thousand will build their nests in a single day, it is stated. These nests shaped like a flask, with a long water-bottle neck, are made of bits of clay rolled into pellets and lined with grass and feathers. This bird winters in the tropics.

FROM CAPTAIN LOSS WITH THE 155TH

Writes Interesting Letter to Friends in Belleville

Capt. Loss, who is with the 155th Battalion, has written a letter to friends in Belleville, which is very interesting. He says in part:

"I suppose you have heard that I am in hospital. I was wounded on the 15th of August, but I am getting along fine now. I was hit in the left leg by a machine gun bullet, which broke the bone. I was in a shell hole at the time, and was hit when I was trying to get out. I was in hospital in France for a month, and then they sent me to England, where I have been for the last month. I am getting around on crutches now, and will be able to get about without them in a few weeks. I am in a hospital for officers, and am getting the best of treatment. I am very comfortable, and have a fine room to myself. I have been in the trenches since last March, and have had a pretty hard time of it. I have been in the thick of it, and have had many narrow escapes. I have been in the trenches for days at a time without a wink of sleep, and have had to stand in water for days at a time. I have been in the trenches when the rats were so thick that they would run over me. I have been in the trenches when the mud was so deep that I had to be pulled out with ropes. I have been in the trenches when the shells were falling around me like hail, and I have been in the trenches when the gas was coming over. I have been in the trenches when the machine guns were sweeping the parapet, and I have been in the trenches when the snipers were picking off the men. I have been in the trenches when the trench mortars were doing their work, and I have been in the trenches when the aeroplanes were overhead. I have been in the trenches when the artillery duels were on, and I have been in the trenches when the infantry were attacking. I have been in the trenches when the wounded were being carried out, and I have been in the trenches when the dead were being buried. I have been in the trenches when the prisoners were being brought in, and I have been in the trenches when the enemy were surrendering. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were retreating, and I have been in the trenches when the enemy were advancing. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were counter-attacking, and I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling our own trenches. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the trenches behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the roads behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the villages behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the towns behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the cities behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the countryside behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the whole world behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the universe behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the infinite behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the eternal behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the past behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the present behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the future behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the beyond behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the nothingness behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the void behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the abyss behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the chaos behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the darkness behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the light behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the hope behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the despair behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the joy behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the sorrow behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the laughter behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the tears behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the smiles behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the frowns behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the kisses behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the hugs behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the love behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the hate behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the peace behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the war behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the everything behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the nothing behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the something behind us. I have been in the trenches when the enemy were shelling the anything

Major Peter Anderson, of Edmonton, has recently been awarded the Distinguished Service Order. He went overseas with the 9th Battalion in 1914, and had some lively adventures as well as some good fighting. In and around his home town, at any rate, "Peter" Anderson is known as the man who got away from the Huns.

The King heard about this escape of Anderson's, and in the latter part of 1915, some three months after it happened, he summoned him to Buckingham Palace, a private interview. In his ordinary capacity in the Allies' capital, Anderson was a brickmaker, and calling upon royalty is quite out of his line.

In April of 1915, Anderson and his company were fighting at Ypres in advance of the British firing line, and were taken prisoners. The major himself was interned in a concentration camp one hundred miles south of Berlin. After five months there he got tired of it, and began to think of breaking loose.

The more he thought about it the more he liked the idea, and for several days he saved out portions of his food allowances and secreted them in the sand close to an old well. He had well had already been sized up as a dissipate pote. Another was a name by empty barn just inside the prison-camp enclosure. To complete his arrangements Anderson made a rope ladder, very much on the quiet, of course, and perhaps without any clear idea of how he should use it.

Then one September evening, as the prisoners were about to be shut up for the night, the liberty-loving major crept out to this well, lifted its loose wooden cover, crept under it, and drew it after him over the mouth of the well.

A prison guard on his night beat came uncomfortably close to the hiding-place, but after an hour or so Anderson began to push the well-cover back, very gradually, till there was room for him to get out; and then, when the guards was at the farthest point of his beat, he made a sudden spring, lifted the knapsack of food from the sand, and jumped like a cat into the barn.

There were more guards and a wire fence on the other side of the barn, and there was no exit but a high window. He watched his chance, lowered the rope ladder, climbed down on it, and, when the guards were again farthest from him, dashed off, across the open—having previously muffled his feet—and was quickly over the fence.

Under cover of the night he made off fast toward Switzerland, which was not far away. But for some reason—perhaps because Chevy was Danish blood in him that drew him to Scandinavian territory—he changed his mind and headed for the Baltic coast by way of Stockholm and forests.

On the second day, having meanwhile disguised himself as well as possible, he ventured into a small town and bought a newspaper. A chart of the country, and a newspaper. In the latter he soon found startling news, including the discovery of his escape, from which he learned further that he was supposed to have gone to the direction of the Swiss border, and that the war dogs had set out after him.

Emboldened by this pleasant news, and wishing to see the Kaiser's big city before leaving Germany, he went into Berlin. There he mixed with the crowds, which proved to be a very good way of covering his tracks. He even treated himself to a taxi ride. But it was all still, as he quite well knew, on dangerous ground, and to be on the safe side he assumed the role of a bricklayer, with a workman's cap, a soft felt cap, a stubby beard, and a familiar knapsack on his back. And that guise he bought a railway ticket in the direction of Denmark.

What happened on the way through Schleswig-Holstein, was unfortunately too comparicon. For the major's adventures on reaching the border, where stricter watch and travelers was much more strict than in the interior. Anderson found it as difficult to get past as it had been to get away from the prison camp. One precaution he took was to be persistent that he found it necessary to hand him into a railway coach just before the train crossed. Eventually, however, he did get his knapsack aboard, which meant just then the best kind of baggage street he had ever been on. His chase across Germany had taken a week and a half.

Fraser River Flahed Out.

Fraser river fishermen and canners agree that the sockeye salmon run on the Fraser this season has been a flat failure. The conviction is being forced, too, that British Columbia's noblest fishing stream can no longer be expected to make a profitable yield, in other words, that the Fraser is fished out. In recent seasons, ten years ago, as high as a million cases of salmon were packed. This year's pack crop will be less than a tenth of that amount.

The end of the Fraser's production is in sight. Six years ago, when Canadian Northern contractors in the river at Hell's Gate Canyon, altogether a mistake, prevented the salmon from ascending to the spawning grounds. From the time the sockeye heads down the river to the sea, the Canadian traps, nets and seines lie in wait every stream bank. By way of three hundred miles, the salmon has only about one chance in a thousand of getting through. On the Skeena and other Northern British Columbia rivers, the salting has been running record numbers. Fishermen there are making as high as five hundred dollars a week.

World's Greatest Cataract.

Niagara Falls is not the greatest cataract in the world. The greatest cataract is said to be on the Iguazu river, which partly separates Brazil and Argentina. The precipice over which the river plunges is 210 feet high, that of Niagara being 167 feet. The Iguazu is 2,1125 feet wide, or about two and a half times as wide as Niagara. It is estimated that 100,000,000 tons of water pass over Niagara in one hour. Alike estimate gives the falls of Iguazu 140,000,000 tons.

Doctor Says Wives Are Shop Windows For Men

WOMAN SPEAKER AT Y. W. C. A. CONFERENCE SEES HER SEX AS MERE DISPLAY TO SHOW OFF HUSBAND'S SUCCESS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Women physicians at the international conference at National Board Y. W. C. A. headquarters yesterday gave themselves to consideration of the clothes problem.

Dr. Edith Hall Swift of Boston, said sex lure is the determining factor in the modern fashions. "I do not believe that dress is based on a sex appeal," said Mrs. Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale. "I think it is the reflection, rather of a class appeal. It is only since the growth of democracy that men have ceased to wear lace cuffs, frills, wigs and all such nonsense. The skirt is not sex in its origin. Kings, priests, mayors and other personages still wear draperies. The cutaway army coat is about the last remnant of the skirt age. With the growth of democracy it became tad form for a man to show his class by his clothes, so he began to dress up his wife. The modern American wife is nothing short of a shop window for her husband. She shows off his success. I speak of the average human critter, of course, not of the intellectual man.

"We do not wear flimsy materials because we are trying to make a sex appeal but it is to the interest of the merchant to sell us something perishable. The most important law for clothing is that it shall conform to the laws of health. If a woman is doing to do things radical, as well as take advantage of the opportunity which the era has furnished her to do the things of the world, she must be strong. The climate of America is bad for staying powers. There are more cases of nervousness due to the climate here than in any part of Europe. Women should have more proper physical development than men. They need it more. Girls should be trained for maternity as a runner is trained for a race."

Two Extreme Styles Set

Mrs. Hales was dressed in a simple blue gown, which hung from her shoulders, belted only loosely. She referred to it as a costume, "not of yesteryear, but of several yesteryears ago."

Dr. Swift, in a speech preceding Mrs. Hale's, said: "We find the two extreme opposites of style set: on the one hand by the professional woman who desires in her clothing only usefulness and health, and on the other hand by the woman who makes an exaggerated set appeal for trade purposes. The business of the latter demands frequent and startling change of costume, which are gladly welcomed by the manufacturer. The working girl who is seeking beauty and fun, who craves leisure and the freedom from economic pressure is not attracted by the type of costume set by the business woman. She might detect the futility and vulgarity of the exaggerated sex appeal if it were not approved so loudly and universally by women of wealth who could have anything they wished.

"Two great aims, legitimate and desirable in themselves, but resulting disastrously, have actuated the working girl. First, she has instinctively, and for the most part unconsciously, sought a mate. Acquaintanceships came more easily, it seemed, when she wore the very latest in fashion, inappropriate though it might be for her life in general. In reality she held on married the lesser man. The power of natural selection was crushed by artificiality and exaggeration.

Slaves of Fashion

"The long, slow processes of educating the girl to a proper estimate of values may be helped by showing the part she has involved in being slaves to fashion. Until we can convince the mass of women workers that they have been following right ideals in the wrong way, and until they add their weight to public opinion, no appreciable advance can be made toward forcing the manufacturers to meet their needs for beauty, service and health in their apparel."

Miss Harriet Wilde, of the Y. W. C. A. health department demonstrated footwear. The shoe for adults upon which the physicians put the stamp of approval was one with a low, broad heel and a broad toe. The next article was the corset. It as the consensus of opinion that the normal woman should train her muscles not to need artificial support. Women who are definitely pathological should wear only a corset, but a narrow girdle properly designed.

Negroes Planned White Slaughter

Startling Confessions Are Made to Arkansas Investigating Committee.

MELENA, Ark., Oct. 7.—Bands of negroes in Southern Phillips county, of which this city is the seat of government, had planned a general slaughter of white people in this locality, according to members of the committee of seven appointed by civil authorities with the sanction of Governor Charles Brough, who announced that confessions made by some of the captured negroes and other information indicated a widespread plot.

Members of the committee said the plans of the negroes included an uprising in the event certain demands were not met. With October 6th set as the day for the uprising, negro prisoners are said to have confessed, each member of the organization at specified places was to take a bale of cotton by that date to certain prominent landowners, plantation managers and merchants and "demand a settlement."

The confessions, as announced, made it appear to the investigators that, following this demand, the negroes were to shoot down all whites in sight. A list of 21 names, admitted to represent the men to whom the demand would be presented, is in the hands of the investigating committee.

Killing of these 21, the prisoners said, was to be the signal for all members of the organization to attack the white population.

Stewards Are Finnicky

One Complains He had to Help Himself at Table.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—seventeen stewards who were transferred to the steamship Lapland from the Cretic gave the officials on the pier more trouble than the 1,900 passengers, because they were so particular about their comforts on the voyage. One steward, on his arrival, appears to see said that his people were afraid that he might sleep in damp sheets, and after testing the bed with a mirror Yesterday, he thought the linen was not quite sufficiently aired. Another expressed his opinion that four were too many to place in one cabin. The third said that he had been obliged to rise from the table at breakfast to help himself to some butter. These stewards averaged $70 to $75 a month in wages apart from their tips. Before the war, in 1914, they were paid from $5 to $20 per month and had to eat their food standing in dark corners of the boat.

Combined Profit Made on Sugar

CALGARY, Oct. 7.—The sugar probe here yesterday developed the fact that the Hudson's Bay Company here was making a combined profit wholesale and retail of 22 per cent. on the sugar it handled. It argued was not abnormal, being a combined profit for two handlings and could not justly be compared with retailers' profits on sugar.

Burnham Fears For Protection

Calls for Definite Statement as to Policy of Government.

OTTAWA, Oct. 7.—Mr. J. H. Burnham (Peterboro) has handed in for the order paper a resolutin which deals with Sir Robert Borden's recently reported pronouncement of policy. Mr. Burnham cites in full the report from the Ottawa Morning Journal in his resolution, which proceeds as follows:

"Whereas, the above report of the recent Government caucus appeared in the Ottawa Morning Journal on October 2, and whereas in the above pronouncement of policy, and in the official announcement by the Prime Minister, not one word concerning protection or protective tariff appears, and no mention of the same is made, therefore, in the opinion of this House, it is desirable that the leader of the Government should know what a proper degree of protection is necessary to the progesive and well-balanced development of Canada and that no policy ignoring the protection principle in a Canadian tariff will be acceptable or for the general benefit of Canada."

Car of Whiskey In Transit Taken

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 7.—One of the largest seizures of liquor since the Ont. S. C. T. A. was passed occurred yesterday at Smith's Falls, when Inspectors A. G. Sykes and F. B. Taber of Brockville seized a freight car which was in transit from Montreal to Yorkton, Sask. The car contained 130 large boxes, each containing three, four or five cases of whiskey, and ample barrels, each containing a 30-gallon barrel of alcohol. The total value of the shipment is estimated at between $15,000 and $20,000.

The liquor was billed as being shipped by Bolvon, Wilson and Company, Montreal, to the Canada Sugar Refining Company ,Yorkton, Sask. The freight charges on the shipment, which were prepaid, amounted to $400. The seals on the car were broken by the inspectors, who examined each of the cases. Later the car was sealed up by a member of the Board of License Commissioners per A.G.S. and F.B.T." and allowed to proceed to North Bay, where it will be taken in charge tonight by two Government officials from Toronto, who were notified of the seizure.

SELLS MINNOWS FOR A FRIEND AND ARRESTED

Alexandria Bay, N.Y.—An unpleasant incident occurred here on Saturday when George Cheyne, a well known river man was brought before Justice John Keeler and fined $20 and costs for selling minnows without a license.

Morris M. Brackett, of Cape Vincent, chief game inspector for that district, came down to the bay on Thursday, ostensibly to go fishing. He stopped at the Crosstown dock where John Gladd has a number of minnow buckets and a proper license for selling these small fish used for bait. Gladd was out on the river fishing so there is not much business at the dock; Brackett not finding him went into the hotel to inquire for the bait man.

Clerk Haley, willing to oblige, hurried out bare headed and running across Charpe told him what was wanted. Chayne then offered to count out the minnows, something the men often do for each other, and took the change for them, giving it to Gladd on his return.

Nothing was thought of it until Edward Farrell, game constable, came around on Saturday and arrested Chayne by Brackett's direction. There was nothing for Chayne to do but pay the fine, although he was entirely innocent of any intent of law breaking.

Unknown Man Struck by Train Death Resulting

At Tickell & Son's morgue lies the body of an unknown man who died at the hospital here yesterday after noon about five o'clock as the result of injuries sustained when he was struck by a train.

It appears that between the hours of two and three o'clock in the afternoon two C. P. R. trains, one going east and one west, meet near Shannonville. The victim of the unfortunate affair, as far as can be learned was walking along the track when he was struck by the westbound express and thrown for some distance clear of the rails. The train was stopped and the injured man was placed upon it and brought to the city hospital. He passed away about an hour later without having regained consciousness. The body was taking to Tickell & Son's undertaking establishment. A fractured neck was the ultimate cause of death. Upon the forehead and side of the face there are bruises which were evidently caused when the victim was hit by the train. The body is that of a man between the ages of 45 and 50 years and is well nourished. From the appearance of the hands and body the victim had not been engaged at laborious duties as the hands are soft and finger nails well manicured. Two double teeth of the upper jaw are crowned with gold. He was dressed in a dark suit of clothes and had on a brown shirt, but no collar or necktie. His feet were encased in a pair of white running shoes. There was nothing whatever upon his effects to indicate who he is or where he came from. A conductor's receipt was the only paper found and it belonged to a ticket from Toronto to Belleville. A few days ago a local barber shaved a man resembling the victim, who was a mute. During today a number have viewed the body but none were able to identify him. An inquest will be held.

Estimate Loss At $250,000,000

Strike Bills to Be Paid By Britain Million Pounds a Day.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Business men are inclined to estimate the total loss to the nation through the strike as approximately $250,000,000 pounds, according to the Daily Mail, but it will be a long time before the cost is fully determined. The bills to be paid by the Government probably will amount to 1,000,000 pounds for each day of the strike, covering a variety of services necessitated, in addition to unemployment pay of those made idle by the stoppage, numbering more than 350,000.

The loss to industry is far greater Perishable goods in many cases were destroyed; many works stopped operations almost at once, export trade ceased and orders were lost through the uncertain conditions.

The railwaymen, who were out eight days, spent 300,000 pounds strike pay the emergency funds of the National Union of Railwaymen being depleted to that extent, and incurred besides many other expenses.

Great Britian Democratic Country

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Proof that Great Britain is a really democratic country was furnished by the recent railway strike episode, Premier Lloyd George declared in an address today. Speaking at the Mansion House at a reception to General Allenby, the conqueror of Palestine, who was given the freedom of the city, the Premier said: "Now that episode on the home front is over all ranks and classes must work together for the good of all. We all belong to the working classes in this country, and I claim to be a democratic country, where every man's hour day. The strike proved that this is a really democratic country, where public opinion must prevail."

"The President's condition continues to improve. His appetite is decidedly better and he is sleeping well.

Cape Is Built By Volcano Lava

Flow Travels to the Ocean at 20 to 30 Miles Per Hour.

HILO, Hawaii, Oct. 4.—The source of the lava flow from the volcano Mauna Loa which began to erupt last Saturday, located 8,500 feet above Puckeeokeo, an offshot on the mountain Mauna Kea, which has an elevation of 13,950 feet. The lava stream, 300 feet high and the same breadth, flows slightly checked, and it makes a sobbing-like noise that can be heard for miles. The lava so far has built a cape a quarter of a mile southward. Observers estimated the flow travelled to the ocean at the rate of 20 to 30 miles an hour The lava, which pours like water from the crater, drops 6,000 feet on its 20 miles flow to the sea.

Gary Site Under Military Control

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

GARY, Ind., Oct. 7.—Gary Site, on which the United States Steel Corporation's greatest plants, affected for more than two weeks by the strike in the steel industry, today was under military control of approximately 1,000 federal soldiers commanded by Major General Leonard Wood, in command of the central department of the army. Five hundred more fresh troops from riot duty at Omaha, Nebraska, were on their way here today. The call for federal troops was made by Governor Goodrich of Indiana after thousands of strikers paraded and held mass meetings, after being forbidden by the Mayor.

HEART-BEATS AND PULSE

Ballots May Be Split "Yes" and "No."

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—Following many inquiries as to whether the Ontario referendum ballot must be marked entirely "yes" or "no," Premier Hearst's definite ruling has been submitted. It is given as follows:

"While it is necessary for a voter to vote on every question, he may legally vote in the affirmative to one or more questions and in the negative to others. Whenever he votes in the affirmative, his vote will be counted among the 'yes' on that question and wherever he votes in the negative his vote will be counted among the 'noes' on that question. The voter marks his ballot by placing a cross under the word 'yes' or 'no.'"

MIXUP IN KINGSTON

Kingston, Oct. 6.—Ex-Mayor John M. Hughes has served notice on the Local Union party that he will be a candidate at the coming by-election to fill the Kingston vacancy in the Commons. He is opposed to bringing Sir Henry Drayton into the constituency, although the latter owns Kingston as his birthplace. Mr. Hughes has the support of the ex-member, for Kingston. It is not thought that the Government would permit Sir Henry entering a three-cornered contest here as the Labor candidate, Ald. Wm. Patterson, might squeeze out a victory.

Petitions are being signed by leading citizens of all parties asking Sir Henry Drayton to contest the by-election. Both Kingston newspapers contain first page editorials telling why they support Sir Henry and call upon the people to elect him as Kingston's member in the Commons.

HAMILTON, Oct. 6.—The Belleville Ball Club have one spike in the Ontario championship flag. Freddie Goyer, Belleville's southpaw ace, got it there on Saturday when he and his team-mates downed Hamilton Harrington 6-3 in the first game for the championship title. And the end part of it, so far as the Harvesters are concerned, is that Goyer did the trick in Tigerville, with 4,000 rabid Hamilton supporters viewing the disaster. It was a hard job for the cocky Harvester crew, who fell down badly, while the betting element lost about $3,000, it is reported.

Great is Goyer.

Belleville's win was due to the brilliant and game pitching of Goyer, ably aided by his catcher, Billy Mills. Goyer pitched his third hard game in seven days and although he was away below form he managed to outpitch Jack Tufford, Harvester's right-hander, holding Harvesters to three hits.

"FRIDAY AFTERNOON'S GAME

The second and probably the final game between the G. T. R. team of this city and the Harvester's team of Hamilton, will be played here on Friday afternoon of this week. If the G. T. R. wins they will be tackled for championship of the O. B. A. A. Acting Mayor Woodley will be resolution of the Council to-night to-morrow afternoon a holiday. In the meantime the grounds at the Agricultural Park will be put in excellent shape for the game and a record crowd is assured.

Girl's Death Not Due To Kick But Tuberculosis

Coroner's Jury Find That Death Was Due to Natural Causes.

MONTREAL, Oct. 7—The inquest into the death of Adrienne Charles, the eleven year old girl who died in the Notre Dame Hospital and who before death told the judge that she had been kicked by her father, was opened Monday.

Dr. Derome, who performed the autopsy, testified that he found both appendicitis and tuberculosis present. He said that death had been due to peritonitis that one or two kicks would not have caused the condition which caused the death.

Dr. Derome also testified that there was not even the sign of a kick or blow.

Dr. DeCotret of Notre Dame Hospital, testified that there was no sign of a kick and that death was due to peritonitis, which had been caused from tuberculosis.

The jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes and that there was no crime.

Zam-Buk

SAVES DOCTORS' BILLS

ECZEMA ENDED

Madame A. Lariviere of Fall River, Mass., suffered with eczema for three years and had treatment from several doctors, all of whom gave up the case. "Finally," she says, "I went to a specialist, which cost me another $25, but I was no better.

"A friend advised me to try Zam-Buk, which I did, and for which I have ever since been thankful. I very soon felt some relief, and perseverance with Zam-Buk completely rid me of the disease."

SEVERE CUT HEALED

Mr. C. Okley of Saskatoon, who sustained a terrible cut on his leg, says: "Had I known of Zam-Buk when the accident occurred, I could have saved myself a $60 doctor's bill! A doctor sewed up the cut and attended me for five weeks, but the wound did not heal, and he advised me to go into a hospital.

"I objected, however, and tried Zam-Buk instead, and in two weeks' time was back at work."

SAVED OPERATION

"Further developed case of sore on the leg," writes Miss Rita Lewis of Silver Lake, Ontario. "Numerous remedies and treatment from several doctors failed to heal it, and the doctor advised an operation. Someone advised him to find by Zam-Buk. Two applications brought relief, and continued use of Zam-Buk entirely healed the sore. Other duties from an operation."

Zam-Buk's best for all skin diseases, boils, pimples, eczema, ulcers, abscesses, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, chilblains, sore feet and sore legs. Always try curative Zam-Buk first. 50c box, all druggists and stores, Toronto, or from Zam-Buk Co.

Bylaw Passed Naming Mr Cook Maker of Gas

HALF HOLIDAY ON FRIDAY AFTERNOON OWING TO CHAMPIONSHIP BASEBALL MATCH HERE—OTHER MATTERS DISPOSED OF AT CITY COUNCIL MEETING.

Whilst the City Council was last night in session for nearly three hours the business transacted was not of that nature to require that length of time for its disposal. A Bylaw was passed making Mr. Wm. Cook, gas maker at the gas works. A motion was passed authorizing the Mayor to proclaim Friday afternoon next a half holiday in order that all citizens may have an opportunity of witnessing the championship baseball game between the G. T. R. team of this city and the Harvester team of Hamilton.

Acting-Mayor Woodley presided and other members present were Aldermen Hunter, Hanna, Bone, White, Thirom, Riggs, Treverton and Simmons.

After the reading of the minutes of the special and last regular meeting of the Council, the reports of committees, communications, etc., were laid upon the table.

A GRIEVANCE

A deputation of ladies and gentlemen residing on Frank street, were received that the City Council of late that the G. T. R. had completely blocked the railway crossing on Frank street Formerly a passage was allowed for foot passengers, but now this was blocked. This was a great inconvenience to the residents on that street north of the track. Something should be done to remedy this. Acting Mayor Woodley, said he would take the matter up with the Solicitor and see what could be done.

Ald. White said he had been informed that the foot passage was completely closed up as stray cattle from the country came in and were liable to get upon the track.

On motion, the Council went into committee of the whole on reports, etc. Ald. Hanna in the chair.

Accounts recommended to be paid by the various committees were passed and the following recommendations were adopted:

That the City Solicitor be instructed to defend the action brought by T. Manley against the corporation in connection with the construction of a sanitary sewer on Bleecker Avenue.

That the City Solicitor be instructed to take such action as he deems necessary in order to recover money owing to the city by Miss Cohen.

A communication was read designating October 9th as a cleaning-up day and asking the Council to assist in the matter.—Received and filed.

VICTORY LOAN

The Council was requested to pass a resolution relative to citizens subscribing to the approaching victory loan.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved that the City Council endorse the Canada Victory Loan 1919, and urge upon the citizens the necessity of this loan for the good and welfare of our country. It is also felt by this Council that it is the patriotic duty of all citizens to give their unqualified support to the campaign workers by subscribing to the loan and assisting in every way towards the success of this great loan.

Petitions were presented for granolithic walks on a portion of east side of Moira street, also on cemetery streets.

—Referred to the proper official to ascertain if properly signed.

BREAD INSPECTION

Mr. B. R. Quincey, Inspector presented a report as to his inspection of bread supplied by the bakers of the city. The last had been well kept and the bread was up in weight.

Ald. Hunter—There has been some complaints as to the sanitary conditions of some of the bakeries of the city.

Ald. White—This was the duty of our sanitary inspector, who should deal with any complaint made.

The bread inspector was asked to make a report on the sanitary condition of the bakeshops. The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

INQUIRIES

Ald. Hanna asked if the police commissioner had done anything in reference to the request that the City Council re police matters.

Acting Mayor Woodley—There has been no meeting of the commissioners yet.

Ald. Hanna—Was more excavation done on the road allowance on Moira street, than was necessary.

Ald. Woodley—No.

Ald. Hanna—Why has not the drain followed the old course?

Ald. Woodley—We could not get the right of way.

Ald. Bone—Has the Housing Committee anything to report?

Ald. Woodley—We are doing what we can in the matter.

Ald. Bone—Who owns the bay bridge roadway from the railway tracks to the bridge structure?

Ald. White—The Bay Bridge Company and the city is responsible towards the upkeep of same.

Ald. Bone—The road should be fixed Some of our streets are in a most deplorable state.

Ald. Woodley—Two repair waggons are going on to fix up same.

Ald. Bone—What kind of a road is going to be constructed between the city and Trenton?

Ald. Woodley—A meeting may be held here in reference to the matter.

Ald. Bone—Has anything been done in reference to the G. T. R. track on Pinnacle street?

Ald. Woodley—Not yet.

Ald. Bone—When is the street pavement to commence?

Ald. Hunter—I understand that it will be on Wednesday.

Ald. Bone—What is going to be done about Murney Hill?

Ald. Woodley—It will be fixed up.

Ald. Bone asked if some water extinguishers were going to be made.

Ald. White—Yes. The matter will be attended to.

Ald. White—Is there a building inspector. If not there should be one.

Ald. Woodley—We have no inspector.

Ald. Woodley—Will I have consent of the Council to put two teams at work, and use the grader or roller to put the baseball diamond at the park in good shape. The management of the baseball team will supervise some.

Several Aldermen—Yes.

INTRODUCTION OF BYLAWS

Ald. Bone introduced bylaws to construct some sanitary sewers under the local Improvement Act, also the construction of granolithic walks.

Ald. Simmons introduced a bylaw to appoint a gas maker at the city gas works.

The bylaws were read by title and referred to the committee of the whole on Bylaws.

Council went into the committee of the whole on Bylaws, Ald. Bone in the chair.

The Bylaws were given their second reading and the committee rose and reported.—Report received and adopted.

The four construction Bylaws were passed through their various stages and numbered 2221, 2222, 2225, 2224.

The yeas and nays were asked on the third reading of the bylaw appointing a gas maker resulting as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Hanna, Thirom, Treerton, White and Woodley—5.

The Bylaw was then given its third reading appointing Mr. Cook as gas maker.

MOTIONS

Moved by Ald. Hanna, seconded by Ald. Bone that owing to the Provincial election being held on October 20th that the next regular meeting of the Council be held on Tuesday, October 21st.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Hanna, seconded by Ald. Bone that the Mayor be authorized to proclaim Friday afternoon, October 10th a half holiday.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Bone, seconded by Ald. Hanna that the City Engineer be asked to prepare a map showing properties owned by the city, same to be completed quickly as possible and handed to Industrial Commissioner White.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Hunter, seconded by Ald. Hanna, that the Council heartily commend the G. T. R. baseball Club of Belleville for the good work performed by them on their recent tour.—Carried

Ald. Hunter moved, seconded by Ald. Hanna that the Food Commissioner of Canada be asked to hold a session in Belleville at an early date with a view of investigating the high cost of living in this district.—Carried.

Ald. Simmons moved, seconded by Ald. Riggs that a committee consisting of Aldermen Hunter, Riggs and Simmons consult City Solicitor re Bylaw engaging a gas maker.—Lost

Moved by Ald. White, seconded by Ald. Hanna that tenders be called for the construction of sanitary sewers on Henry, North Front, Moira, Queen, Cedar, Grove, and Everett streets.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. White, seconded by Ald. Bone that the several addresses mentioned in Bylaw passed be consolidated by the Public Works.—Carried Council adjourned.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

"A man may keep a wife on less," Mrs. Walford, without her suffering. My God! if I thought that Cynthia would ever know privation or distress do you suppose I would——"

"A wife!" she said, "a wife! My dear Mr. Kent, a man must be prepared to provide for a family as well. Have you—any expectations?"

"I expect to subceed," said Kent; "I've the right to expect it. No others."

"May I ask how much your profession brings you in?"

"I sold my novel for a hundred pounds, he answered. "It was my first," he added, as he heard her gasp; "it was my first.....Mrs. Walford, I love her. At least think it over. Let me speak to her again; let me ask her if she is afraid. Don't refuse to consider."

The pain in his voice was not without an effect on her disgust. She was mercenary, though she did not know it; she was not good-natured, though she had good impulses; she was ludicrously artificial; but she was a woman and he was a young man. She did not think of her own courtship, for she had only been sentimental when her parents approved—she had not "married for money," but her heart had been providentially warmed toward the young gentleman of her acquaintance who was "comfortably off." She thought, however, of Cynthia who had displayed considerable feeling in the bedroom an hour ago.

"I must write to her father," she said, in a worried voice. "I really can't promise you anything; I am very vexed at this sort of thing going on without my knowledge—very vexed. I shall write to her father to-night. I must ask to consider the whole matter entirely indefinite until he comes. Immense responsibility.....immense! I can't say any more, Mr. Kent."

She left him on the verandah and re-entered the house. His sensation was that the world had been shattered about him and a weighty portion of the ruin was lying on his chest.

CHAPTER IV

When Sam Walford ran over to Dieppe, in obedience to his wife's summons, he said:

"Well, what's this dam nonsense, Louisa, eh? There's nothing in this, you know—this won't do."

"Cynthia is very cut up," she averred; "you had better tell her so. I'm sure I wish we had waited and gone to Brighton later.....A lot of bother"

"An author," he said, with amusement; "what do you do with authors? You do "find 'em," my dear."

"I don't know what you mean," she returned tartly, "I can't help a young man taking a fancy to her, can I? If you're so clever, it's a pity you didn't stop here with her yourself. If you don't think it's good enough, you must say so, and finish the matter, that's all. You're her father."

"I'll talk to her," he declared. "Where is she now? Let us go and see. And where's Mr.—what d'ye call him? what's he like."

"Mr. Kent. He is a very nice fellow. If he had been in a different position, it would have been most satisfactory. There's no doubt he's very clever—highly talented—the papers are most complimentary to him. And of course a novella is socially—er—he has a certain——"

"Damn it! he can't keep a family on compliments can he? I suppose he's a bull of himself, eh? Thinks he ought to be snapped at!"

"Nothing of the sort; you always jump to such extraordinary conclusions," she said. "He is a perfect gentleman and proposed to her beautifully. After all, there aren't many young men who've got so much as a thousand pounds in ready money."

"But he isn't making anything, you tell me," objected Mr. Walford; "they'll eat up a thousand pounds before they know where they are. He would'n't expect anything with her, I suppose?"

She shook her head violently.

"Let me go and see Cynthia," he said again. "It's a funny thing a girl like that hasn't ever had a good offer—upon my soul it is!"

"You ask home such twopenny-half-penny men," retorted his wife. "She is in her room; I'll let her know you're here."

Cynthia was "cut up." She liked Humphrey Kent very much—and every thing is relative; she felt herself a Juliet. She considered it very unkind of mamma to oppose their marriage, and said as much to her father, with tears on her lashes and pathetic little sobs. Sam Walford was sorry for her; his affection for his children was his best attribute. He said "Damn it!" several times more, and then patted her on the cheek, and told her not to cry, and went out on the Plage to commune with tobacco.

After that, he explored for a coiffeur's—there is a very excellent one in Dieppe; and he was shaved—an operation which freshened him extremely—and had his thin hair anointed with various liquids of agreeable fragrance and most attractive hues, and submitted his moustache to the curling irons. The French barber will play with you nearly as long as the American, and when Mr. Walford had acquired a carnation for his buttonhole and sipped a vermouth over the pages of Gil Blas, it was time to think of returning to the hotel.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Intolerance or Compromise?

A Challenge to Common Sense!

DON'T let anyone tell you that the issue on October 20th is "The Beer or the Boy"—"Is Alcohol a Poison or Not?"—"Economy or Extravagance"—any such an abstraction.

The plain situation is—three sections of the people of this Province are absolutely dissatisfied with the Ontario Temperance Act and want new legislation that will permit the sale of light beer and wine generally, and the sale of pure, spirituous liquors only through Government agencies.

These three sections of the population are ninety per cent. of organized labor, by actual vote; a large number of returned soldier organizations, by actual vote; thousands of the rank and file of the electorate who have joined the Citizens' Liberty League.

The plain issue then is—Are you going to vote for the safe, sane, fair compromise that these men and women want; or, are you going to insist on the retention of the unsatisfactory Ontario Temperance Act—insist on the retention of legislation that is breeding and will continue to breed dissatisfaction and discontent among our workers, returned men and a large section of the citizens generally?

Which are You for—Compromise and Harmony, or Intolerance and Widespread Resentment?

Study the ballot and analyze the situation conscientiously. This is one of the most vital concerns you have just now—a settlement of Ontario's vexed temperance problem that will be in the best interests of all the people.

Vote "YES" to all Four Questions

Mark your ballot with an X. Any other marking will spoil it. Remember, also—every voter must vote on every question or his ballot will be spoiled.

Notes On Saturday's Game

Congratulations.

The Lindsay Warder joins with all the sporting fraternity of Lindsay in extending congratulations to the fast Grand Trunk team of Belleville on their achievement on Saturday in defeating the Harvesters of Hamilton by the score of 5 to 2. It was a great victory for the Central Ontario Leagues, and should clinch the pennant for Belleville.

Manager Bradley of the Harvesters witnessed the Osler-Belleville game in Peterboro last week, and was of the opinion that the Harvesters could win out, but he had to change his ideas. He still has hopes of turning the tables when the return game is played in Belleville, but there are many who have their doubts as to the ability of the Harvesters to beat the Belleville crew.

The sporting fraternity of Toronto and Hamilton have considerable respect for the brand of baseball played in the Central Ontario League, and it is some consolation to know that the Lindsay Greys gave the Belleville team the worst beating they received this year.

Part Hone Guide.

You can't stop those Belleville chaps. On Saturday afternoon while Cincinnati were beating Chicago for the world's championship the boys from the Bay of Quinte were trouncing the Hamilton team, and right on their own grounds, too. The score was 5 to 2 in Belleville's favor, which makes the Ontario championship pretty safe for the winners of the Central Ontario League. Goyer was in his usual good form, allowing only three scattered hits.

Hamilton Spectator.

"Paddy" Sullivan, Harvesters' crack second-baseman, star of many victories, and one of the classiest little amateur baseball players in the country, now knows what it feels like to be a goat; for on Saturday afternoon while four thousand wild-eyed fans were appealing for a victory over the Grand Trunks, of Belleville, in the first of home-and-home games to decide the O. R. A. championship, Sully blew up with a resounding bang and presented the visitors with the fat end of a 5 to 2 count.

Tufford, who turned in one of the best games of the season against Belleville's crack southpaw, Goyer, got himself into the hole in the third that produced the Grand Trunks' second counter. D. Simmons, who took a shoot in the ribs, was forced at second on Ross' roller. Ross pilfered second, and advanced to third on Mills' tacrifice fly to right, from where he counted on Goyer's single over short.

For three innings Goyer had been turning the Harvesters back in one-two-three order, but with two down in the fourth, ragged support behind the visiting southpaw gave the Implement Makers their chance. Gurry got a life when Gerow dropped a perfect peg from Weir, and scored when McQueen connected for Harvester's first binger, a smashing two-ply drive to right. Then Sully sent a grass-cutter to Weir, who missed it up, and McQueen crossed with the tying run.

Saturday was certainly a bad day for Hamilton sportsmen. The Tigers and Rowing club teams met with decisive defeats on the gridiron and the Harvesters went down before Belleville in the baseball championship.

PRINCE ELECTED CHIEF

It was at Banff that the Prince of Wales was made Chief Morning Star, with the right to wear the shining buckskin robe with a blue belt of beads and a head dress of bright and nodding feathers of a chief of the Stoney Tribe.

When the Prince stepped off the train amid the high peaks and exquisite spruce clad valleys of Banff, he found himself among Indian braves clad in all the vivid colors of the spectrum, feathered and beaded from crest to moccasins and mounted on their small, swift horses.

At each bugle call, a fresh body of Indians, a fresh splash of vermilion and yellow and cherry and blue and green moved out from amid trees and fell in behind the escort, so that as it went the cavalcade became a moving train of alluring color.

The procession went until it reached a big open race course, where Indian tepees, red starred on white, and gay with flags, were set and where the ceremony was to be held. As the Prince came on to the ground, braves whipped their ponies about and raced through vista of dust in a riot of welcome, while the low throbbing of tom-toms joined itself to the high, thin whoop of the Indian welcome.

On a dais set in the centre of a circle of braves, some with skins painted crome yellow so that they looked like masks of death, some dashed with red, some barred with blue, some with yellow paint on their hair, the Prince received the welcome of Young Thunder, the chief. He was a big, roughly carved Indian clad in white, hairy chaps and cowboy shirt, and as he read his address in singsong Cree, his body was curved back as though he still sat on a pulling horse.

He read first in his olden tongue and then in English of the honor the Prince was paying to them, and of their Indian loyalty to him and to his father, and he asked the Prince to accept from us this Indian suit, the best we have, emblematic of the desire we more in happy days."

"We beg you to allow us to elect you as our chief and to give you the name of Chief Morning Star," he said. Then he handed the Prince a magnificent head-dress of feathers and beads and fine buck skin robes. The Prince sitting on the dais, head-dress, spoke to the circle of braves of the honor he felt they had done him.

When he finished tom-toms were beaten again, and the high thin whoop went up from the ring which almost at once began to circle around in a dance.

It was a wonderful scene, this mass of Indians in the deepening [illegible] riery and white crass and not the least picturesque of attracting [illegible] head and leather garbed babies, who grubbed about on the earth.

CONSTANT PAIN AFTER EATING

Mr. Moses A. R. Thevenin, Hull, writes:—"For several years, I suffered from constant pain after eating. I also had an acute attack of indigestion and horrible bitter-sour coffee came up in my mouth.

I tried doctors, but they did not help me. But as soon as I started taking "Fruit-a-tives" I began to improve and then, after using a few of "Fruit-a-tives", entirely lost all these terrible symptoms of Dyspepsia.

INSULTING LANGUAGE CASE

An abusive language case between two men was this morning set down for hearing before Magistrate Mason. The result was that the defendant in the case had to pay a fine of $3 and the cost incurred.

PLEADED GUILTY

Before Magistrate Mason this morning Solomon Marsele pleaded guilty to a charge of theft and was given a suspended sentence and also had to give a bond for good behavior in the future. The accused took some clothing from a foreigner.

A STILL HUNT

County Constable Archie Moore of Peterboro was in town on Saturday night on a "still" hunt. In the vicinity of Blairton he found the mash used in manufacturing home-made liquor, but didn't secure the man he was after.—Havelock Standard.

REFERENDUM MEETING

A meeting was held in the Centenary Church, Sidney, last evening in the interest of the referendum. A large number were present including a number from the city. Among the various speakers was Evangelist G. M. Sharpe.

CASE DISMISSED

Yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Masson the case of Jonas Pope who was charged with a rather serious offence was dismissed. Upon investigation it was ascertained that the accused could not be convicted, hence the acquittal. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Mr. Mikel, K.C., for the accused.

STOCKING STONEY LAKE

The Ontario Government fish car "Beaver" arrived at Lakefield on Friday, Oct. 3rd, direct from the bass ponds, Mount Pleasant, with a cargo of parent bass for Stoney Lake and Clear Lake. The Steamer Empress met the train on Friday and made the distribution. The fish are said to be a very choice lot and tourists may look forward to good fishing this coming season.—Peterboro Review.

ABANDONED CHILD

The police have yesterday afternoon received a telephone message which stated that an apparently young woman had abandoned an infant at Bonar Law station which is on the line of the C. P. R. near Marmora. The little one was wrapped up and left in the ladies' waiting room where it was discovered shortly after east and west bound trains had departed. The party who left the child was seen about the station just prior to the departure of the trains. The child has been handed over to the Children's Shelter in this city. An excellent description of the alleged mother of the child has been obtained and an effort will be made to locate her.

THE SCRIVEN MEMORIAL

The first Scriven Memorial Stone to perpetuate his memory in Sackville district was unveiled at Kidd's Corners on Sunday, October 5th, 1919, at 3 p.m. Prior to the unveiling ceremony a service was arranged at Shrigley Church, conducted by the Rev. C. S. Appleyard, the Rev. D. S. K. Byrne, Christian University, and other distinguished clergymen. The Peterborough and Cobourg Salvation Army Temple Band supplied the music. The Port Hope choirs sent representatives to sing. The Ministerial representatives of the Association of Toronto, Port Hope, Millbrook, Peterborough, Cobourg and of the surrounding districts were cordially invited to attend. A special appeal was made to the gathering for subscriptions to complete a memorial for the tomb of the late Joseph Scriven (the author of "What a friend we have in Jesus) who died August 10th, 1886

MAST CARRIED AWAY

The mast belonging to M. Flint carried by Capt. Neal of the ship, was yesterday proceeding down the bay en route to Oswego to load coal, when the mast was carried away by a sudden gust of wind. No person was hurt and the vessel was not damaged in any way, extent.

Belleville Carpet Bowling Club

The opening match of the season was played last night, Saturday, between the skipped by Mr. H. A. Lessor and Mr. Henry Salisbury, when a very contested game was witnessed by a few enthusiasts who were on the few members present. Owing to various social functions several members could not be present, making it a very poor contest and a most enjoyable time.

During the first half of the match Mr. Lessor's team gradually forged ahead and finished with a score of 15 points to 3, but the score sheet was by no means compared with the form displayed by Mr. Salisbury's team, as it was all the opposing team could do to hold them in the second half, as a score of 18 points to 4 was what would show.

The final scores were 33 to 21 in favor of the team skipped by Mr. H. A. Lennox.

The teams lined up as follows:

Mr. H. A. Lennox (skip), Mr. R. L. Webster, Mr. J. Robinson, Mr. A. H. Brown (vice skip), Mr. W. Parrish.

Mr. Henry Salisbury (skip), Mr. Marsh, Mr. H. B. Manley, Mr. R. Gross (vice skip), Mr. S. W. Penn.

A Noted Canadian Institution

An article that recently appeared in The Daily Telegraph of London, England, attracted wide attention, both in England and Canada (The Montreal Star reprinted it August 30th). The Telegraph deplored the lack of a college in London for imparting commercial knowledge, and said:—"Where in London can a boy, man or woman adopt a commercial career be trained? If he wants to become fitted for a commercial life he has no alternative but to enter an office or a factory and pick up knowledge as best he can. That is not satisfactory."

In Canada and the United States the value of properly conducted business colleges has long been recognized. Ontario Business College, Belleville, Ontario, (established 51 years ago) was among the first of such institutions founded on this continent, and its many thousands of successful graduates, and the business communities they serve, are a splendid advertisement of the O. B. C. training. This institution further spreads the knowledge of commercial subjects by publishing three standard business books, which are used as text-books in other colleges and schools. These books are also widely used by business men and accountants for private study and reference. Orders for the books have been received from eighty different provinces, states, and countries; and students have come to Belleville from forty-eight of these countries to attend the College.

Eller Strikes Out Six Sox Batsmen One After Another

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—"Hod" Eller's sensational pitching for Cincinnati in yesterday's game of the World Series stood out clearly in the pitching analysis. After his two-base hit had paved the way for his team's four runs in the sixth inning, he took charge with the Chicago batsmen, but in the first five sessions he was using his best brand of shoots, hops and benders on every occasion.

Of the forty-six strikes which Eller pitched, thirty-six came in the first five innings, and half of that number were recorded in the second and third when he struck out six successive batsmen.

While Eller's work was unusual, Williams pitched a fine brand of ball and made a creditable record. He had forty-three strikes in eight innings, and only twenty-eight balls, a performance which was far ahead of his exhibition at Cincinnati in the second game of the series.
The score by innings:

Premier Lloyd George Says Nation Must Be Master

DENOUNCES RAILWAY STRIKE AS PRUSSIANISM IN SPEECH AT MANSION HOUSE—PREMIER'S SPEECH CAUSED A SENSATION.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Premier Lloyd George surprised his countrymen, as he frequently does, by denouncing the railwaymen's strike as Prussianism and another effort to hold up the community and strangle it into submission, at the Lord Mayor's Mansion House luncheon in honor of Field Marshal Allenby, yesterday. The occasion was an unusual one for such a topic, but the Premier has a habit of doing unusual things at unusual times. Nobody expected anything more sensational that compliments to the conqueror of Palestine. "The nation must be master in her own house," Mr. Lloyd George declared, "a just master, a fair master, a generous master, but always master in her own house." This was naturally accepted as a proclamation of the Premier's view that the Government won a victory over the strikers.

J. H. Thomas, leader of the recent strike, speaking on Sunday night, dwelt upon the settlement as a compromise and issued a statement appealing for reconciliation and a burial of hard feelings.

When Lloyd George make an important speech the newspapers try to read between the lines to discover his political purpose. The general interpretation of this speech is that the Premier has broken with the labor unions and wants to draw to his support the middle classes, who apparently tended to drop away from him as the result of the recent fierce campaign upon alleged government extravagances.

Severe Defeat For Bolshevik Forces

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The capture of the city of Voronezh, 275 miles southeast of Moscow, by the Anti-Bolshevik forces of General Denikine is admitted in a Russian wireless message from Moscow received to-day. General Denikine's cavalry is advancing on Uhman 35 miles north of Voronezh, the message adds. A message from General Denikine's headquarters received October 7, reported the capture of 15,000 Bolsheviki during the operations around Voronezh but did not definitely announce the capture of that city. Voronezh is on a line about 125 miles east of Orel towards which important centre in old Russia, General Denikin's forces have recently reported rapidly advancing. The late advices from Denikine forces indicate that they are moving ahead against Moscow on a front of at least 200 miles in width and probably considerably greater.

Three To Die For Murder of Alcide Payette

Sentences of Death Passed by Mr. Justice Desy on Trio.

MONTREAL, Oct. 7.—For the murder of Alcide Payette, farmer, St. Sulpice, on August 17, 1917, three men—Patrick Delorme, alias J. B. Lenay, Murdock Allen and Romeo Lacoste—will hang at Bordeaux jail on January 23 next. When they were found guilty by a jury that heard all the evidence before Mr. Justice Desy, the trio was sentenced to die on that date.

It was a dramatic moment when the men were found guilty. It was late at night; the old court corridors were almost deserted save by the weeping mother and sister of one of the condemned men. A brother had carried from the scene his fainting mother. The calmest of the persons concerned in the awful case were the prisoners upon whom the death sentences were passed.

The judge told the jury that they had done their part as fearless men, and agreed with their verdicts. Never since the Court of King's Bench was created have three men been sentenced to die at one time.

Counsel for the prisoners entered objections to the summary of the judge to the jury, holding that it was too severe against the prisoners, but the objection was overruled, the Court telling the lawyers that an opportunity had been given them to repay after the charge had been delivered. The trial lasted a whole week.

10,000 Troops On Guard Now At Gary Riots

GARY, Ind., Oct. 8.—Gary, site of one of the United States Steel Corporation's greatest plants, reflected for more than two weeks by the strike in the steel industry, to-day was under the military control of approximately 10,000 soldiers under command of General Wood, commandant of the central department of the army. Five hundred more troops fresh from riot duty at Omaha, Neb., were on their way here early today.

The call for Federal troops was made by governor Goodrich of Indiana after thousands of strikers paraded and held mass meetings after they were forbidden by the Mayor the police and the approximately 300 state militiamen stationed at Gary.

CITIZENS MAKE REEVE SALUTE THE FLAG

SWIFT CURRENT, Sask., Oct. 8.—Mr. Prisoners, Reeve of the rural municipality of Rush Lake, was taken in hand by the citizens following the departure of the Prince of Wales and compelled to salute the flag and sing "God Save the King." The alleged action of Prisen which caused the trouble was his neglect to have his head when he stood on the reception platform as the band struck up the National Anthem. Chief Inspector Parker of Scotland Yard, who is with the Prince's party, reprimanded him.

PRESENTING MEDALS TO VETERANS AT VICTORIA, B. C.

THE PREMIER AND THE O. T. A.

Mr. Dewart hasn't much to go on in his election campaign, so his arguments are bound to be weak but even making allowances for the handicap he is presenting a pretty poor claim for the votes of the electors of Ontario. Characteristic of it is his endeavor to deny Premier Hearst credit for war time prohibition. He asserts that the Premier only brought in the O. T. A. when forced to do so by the people. Mr. Dewart must think the public memory is short. The people in no way forced the enactment of the O. T. A. Many of the Premier's friends believed the measure would be unpopular, even as war legislation, especially since only a short time before the voters answered under the abolish-the-bar policy of Mr. Rowell. Premier Hearst brought in the Ontario Temperance Act without a mandate from the people, knowing it to be desirable in the interest of the war effort of the province. It was a courageous step, and it was as such that even liberal long prohibition workers viewed it. Would Mr. Dewart have given Ontario the Temperance Act had he been Premier at the time?—Ottawa Journal.

Insane Mother Poisons Children

PONTIAC, Mich., Oct. 8.—Giving as a reason for her act that her two golden-haired little girls, Shirley, aged eight, and Edna, six, "worried" her, because she felt too tired to attend to their wants at bed-time, Mrs. Hazel Leukart, aged 29, who with her husband, lives on a small place between the village of Royal Oak and Pontiac, poisoned them both. In capsules she forced each to follow a slow poison that paralyzes its victims and steals with slow march upon the heart, which it finally stills. Those so doomed to die feel no pain, but a great lassitude. They retain consciousness to the end.

Shirley, the elder, is expected to die within a few hours. Edna has but three or four days to live, declare the doctors.

Slow, Lingering Death.

Mrs. Leukart was arrested and taken to Detroit after she had made a full confession to the assistant prosecuting attorney of Oakland county. She told the attorney she had had the poison in her house for a long time and was aware that it would bring slow, lingering death to those who took it.

AMERICAN BALLOONISTS LANDED IN WOODS

Two days and two nights in the woods was the experience of Lieut. Ernest F. Cole and his companion, who landed with the balloon St. Louis No. 2, one of the starters in the St. Louis race, in the woods not far west of the River Madawaska. The balloon was torn to shreds. The aeronauts, with only a sandwich and a hard-boiled egg each, travelled through the woods by the aid of a compass for 48 hours. Finally they reached Little Ireland and then came on to Mr. Arthur's Mills, from which place they called a car to take them to L'Amable, Hastings County. Although parties have been searching for the balloon no one has seen it since the balloonists left it. That part of the country is densely wooded.

Fiume Development Alarms Italy

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

ROME, Oct. 8.—Much excitement in political circles and extended comment in the press has been caused by the reported receipt of warnings from Great Britain and United States to Italy with regard to the situation at Fiume. It is declared that the British warning stated in effect that if the present illegal situation at Fiume should continue Italy would run the risk of being put out of the alliance and peace conference and that it was received a few days after a similar warning from the United States.

World's Baseball Series Grows More Exciting

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 8.—Fighting with their backs to the wall, but hopeful despite their four defeats, the White Sox will meet the Reds today in the seventh game of the world series. The Reds and 32,000 fans who witnessed yesterday's ten-inning battle, felt confident that the contest would be a decisive one and that before tonight the men of Moran would be proclaimed baseball champions of the world. Before the game started it was believed that Manager Gleason of the White Sox would send Eddie Cicotte to the mound to face the Red Legs. Supporters of the Reds believed that Slim Sallee would be Manager Moran's pitching selection.

The probable line-up for today's game:

Weather, fair and cool.

Yesterday's Game.

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—Both teams went ballooning in today's World Series game, the sixth of the series, and the eighty-fourth of the great inter-league battles since the National Commission assumed control in 1905. First the Chicago White Sox went sky-riding, but before the piece was done with the Cincinnati Reds had captured the altitude prize. Cincinnati lost the game, however, by 5 to 4 in ten very frazzled innings, and the count is now 4 to 3 in favor of the Ohioans. The Sox still have a chance to win the classic, but to gain the honors they must capture three games before the Reds take one. It is rather a hopeless outlook from a Chicago standpoint.

There was more stupidity, aggravated by bad fielding, in today's game than in all other games of the series together. That is saying something, too, for the White Sox have displayed a solidity of skull that has disgusted their admirers. Both teams were guilty of boners of the worst kind this afternoon. They had borne up under the strain of five other games only to give way today, and, when they gave way, they did it in a thorough job of it.

The Sox went on to the field realizing that they simply had to win or go down and out; the Reds with an advantage of four games won and one lost and with the world's championship dangling almost within their grasp. The contrast was almost more to the respective teams than any other battle of the set. Under these conditions, and in view of the strain under which they have been playing for the past week, it is not to be wondered at that they cracked.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE FOR EX-SOLDIERS IS POSSIBLE

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—Several additions to the present provisions for the re-establishment of returned soldiers in civil life may it is said, result from the deliberations of the Commons Committee now considering the subject. A revision of the pay scale may be forthcoming to provide more generously for dependents of soldiers who fell at the front and for men incapacitated by injuries sustained in service. Government assistance to men who are unable by reason of injuries to secure life insurance, and Government aid in the form of unemployment insurance for ex-soldiers are also said to be possibilities.

A PLATFORM OF PROGRESS

The policies upon which Sir William Hearst will ask the people of Ontario to pass judgment are set out under the following headings:

(1) The greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every shape and form;
(2) The faithful enforcement of the people's verdict on the liquor question;
(3) Vigorous support of Hydro-Electric development and cheap light and power for our farmers;
(4) Conversion of certain railway lines into Hydro-Electric lines;
(5) Good roads reaching every part of Ontario;
(6) A pension fund for mothers;
(7) Direct representation of Labor in the Cabinet;
(8) Establishment of a minimum wage;
(9) Unification of the labor laws of Canada on a just and equitable basis;
(10) Such further labor legislation within Provincial jurisdiction as may arise out of the findings of the National Industrial Conference and the International Labor Conference;
(11) Adequate accommodation for industrial workers.
(12) Special consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation;
(13) A new era for education, providing technical and agricultural instruction throughout the province;
(14) Improvements of transportation facilities in Northern Ontario;
(15) Conservation of our timber resources and encouragement to mining;
(16) Measures to reduce the high cost of living;
(17) Protection of the public health, generous assistance to hospitals and charities, and special care of mental defectives.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

LABOR CANDIDATE

At a few minutes before the midnight hour last night, after much talking and persuasion, Mr. J. W. Galloway of Trenton was induced to accept the candidature, of the Labor and Farmers' Organizations for West Hastings. There will thus be three candidates for the electors to choose from. Mr. Galloway decides to remain in the field.

The meeting was held in the City Hall, here, and was fairly well attended, the larger number being laboring men, and not a few from the town of Trenton.

During the evening addresses were made by speakers representing the Farmer and Labor Organizations, but the attendance of farmers from the Township of Sidney, the only rural municipality in the riding was meagre and this fact was referred to by some of the speakers.

Mr. J. W. Jones of Trenton, occupied the chair and associated with him on the platform were a number of members of labor organizations.

Mr. Galloway of Trenton was the first speaker and spoke at some length emphasizing the fact that organized labor and farmers should take an active part in the present Provincial campaign as neither had been properly represented in the Legislature. He ridiculed the idea that the farmers plat form was a narrow one, claiming it was much broader than either of the two political parties. In speaking of the educational policy of the country he claimed that children should be provided with free school books, as the people were taxed high enough for educational purposes for this to be done.

Mr. B. C. Tucker of Sidney spoke as a representative of the united farmers. He claimed the farmers were not independent of the labor organizations but were with them in this campaign. Neither the farmer or labor organizations had been properly represented in Parliament. The labor and farmer organizations could come together on one common platform. He referred to the low price farmers were procuring for hogs, yet the price for pork and bacon was high, which should not be the case. He was not however, sure that a united candidate should be placed in the field at this late hour.

Mr. W. S. Jones of Trenton spoke generally upon the labor question and the strides organized labor had made. He said: If we decide to have a candidate we must have a nominee who has diplomacy. We want an independent man. What does labor want? Only its rights and representatives in Parliament to put forth our rights.

Mr. J. Riley, a farmer, residing in Northumberland County said the farmers and labor organization should unite as never before. The farmers had broke the binder twine combine and if would break other combines. In speaking of the two candidates in the field in West Hastings, Mr. Ireland and Col. O'Flynn, he said, they were both gentlemen but were party men.

Mr. Braithwaite of Toronto, who is an organizer of the labor party spoke at some length on the labor question and claimed there was no barrier between labor and farmer organizations. He urged the selection of a candidate for the riding.

Mr. B. G. Latt, of Sidney, who will be remembered in connection with previous elections of days gone by, made an address expressing his entire sympathy with the movement. He would support a labor or U.F.O. candidate but would not vote for either of the two candidates at present in the field. The question was, would a candidate at this eleventh hour make a good showing.

After some other brief addresses nominations of a candidate were called for and the following were proposed: J. W. Galloway, W. S. Jones, J. Donald, J. Vanalstine, W. Hoover, J. Gunn and J. Jones. All declined the nomination, but Mr. Galloway was prevailed upon to accept it and he rather reluctantly did so.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

RETURNING OFFICERS BUSY

The Returning Officers in this election are having a busy time on account of the double vote, additional polling booths to be provided, etc. One Returning Officer in an adjoining constituency has to drive seven hundred miles in the course of his election duties.

VOTE EARLY

One thing should be borne in mind on polling day, with the heavy woman vote, there is likely to be congestion at the polls unless the voters present themselves early. There will be a poll for every two hundred and fifty voters, on the lists and this means, with the polls open for eight hours, that if a full vote was polled, there would only be two minutes available for each vote to be polled. While it is not possible for all votes to be polled it can readily be seen that it will be necessary for the voters to come out early, and avoid their visit to the polling booth until afternoon, which would mean possibly congestion resulting in the polls being closed before all can vote.

WOMEN ELECTION OFFICERS

Women are taking part in this election as officers in various capacities, in some constituencies acting as Deputy Returning Officers.

WELCOME THE PREMIER

Great interest is being taken in the meeting to be addressed by Sir Wm. H. Hearst in the Armouries Saturday evening. Premier Hearst is probably one of the outstanding figures in public life to-day and that he will be given a warm welcome by the citizens of Belleville and vicinity goes without saying, regardless of shades of political belief. The administrating of Sir William Hearst has been a capable and progressive, is a matter of pride to every loyal citizen of Ontario and the Premier's visit to Belleville will be a notable event.

A POLITICAL TRICK

The placing of a third candidate in the field is an old political trick which, being attempted in West Hastings in this election in the hope of taking votes away from the Government Candidate, Mr. W. H. Ireland. Electors who desire above everything else the continuation of good government will not be diverted from the path of duty by any such ruse and will readily see through the attempt which is being made. West Hastings has a splendid candidate in Mr. W. H. Ireland, capable of representing the riding in the best interests of every elector and the advancement of the district along progressive lines.

LENNOX CAMPAIGN

At Napanee on Monday, a meeting was held which was addressed by Mr. Fowler, the Conservative candidate, Hon. E. B. Lucas and Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C.

CHIROPRACTIC FOR TONSILITIS

If you are suffering from an attack of Tonsilitis, the most logical thing for you to do is to call upon your Chiropractor and have him adjust the cause of your trouble. No Medicine known is the function of the tonsils therefore he should not be allowed to remove them. Is it not much better to keep those much abused little organs healthy than to deprive your body of something that an ALL WISE CREATOR knew was essential to your needs. Chiropractor can and not make Healing Force, but he can ADJUST SUBLUXATED VERTEBRAE and let it in those diseased tonsils.

Wedding Bells

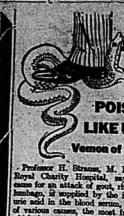
DOUSETTE—SCHILROTH

A quiet wedding took place in St. Michael's church at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, when Mr. Fred Dousette and Miss Elsie Schilroth, better known as Elsie Watkins, both popular young people of this city, were united in marriage by the Rev. Father Killeen in the presence of relatives and friends. They were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Frede Pattnaude. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the home of Mrs. Frank Gerow, sister of the bride, where a wedding breakfast was partaken of. The bride received a large number of beautiful presents which testified to the high esteem in which she was held by a host of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Dousette left on the flyer for the groom's home in Oscoila, Que., and then will go to Boston, Mass., where they will reside in the future.

Music and Drama

"DOUG" FAIRBANKS AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

The dynamo of energy, "Doug" Fairbanks, is appearing at Griffin's tonight in his new peppery picture, now a full-fledged mistress of comedy and drama by reason of her steady development in pictures, finds in Barbara Gray a role that would have taxed her a year ago. Ranging from delicate, enchanting comedy to scenes such as would be seized upon with delight by an dramatic actress, Mae Marsh without effort achieves distinction throughout. A brilliant supporting cast, beautiful settings and photography of a kind to draw murmur of appreciation from the spectator—all of these factors enter into the production of this Mae Marsh photodrama. Undoubtedly it will start anew the discussion her plays invariably cause, but "The Bondage of Barbara," which is to be shown at the Palace tomorrow to Saturday, matinee daily, will leave no doubt in the minds of the careful critics that it is her supreme accomplishment. Besides the above offering a new comedy, and the 15th chapter and third from the ending of the popular circus serial "The Lure of the Circus", will also be shown on the same program.



POISON LIKE UNTO
Vernon of Snakes

Professor H. Strauss, M. D., of the Royal Charity Hospital, says, "The cause for an attack of gout, rheumatism, lumbago, is supplied by the increase of uric acid in the blood serum, the result of various causes, the most frequent of which is renal. Before an attack, one suffers sometimes from headache, neuralgia, twinges of pain here and there."

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, when the back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; when you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach; or you have rheumatic pains or lumbago, gout, sciatica when the weather is bad, do not neglect the warning, but try simple means. Take a six or eight glasses of water during the day, then obtain at your nearest drug store, "An-uric" (anti-uric acid).

"An-uric" is the discovery of Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. "An-uric" is an acidote for this uric acid poisoning and dissolves uric acid in the body much as hot coffee dissolves sugar. "An-uric" will penetrate into the joints and muscles, and dissolve the poisonous accumulations. It will stamp out that fiend in 10 days. Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package.

"A Knickerbocker Buckaroo," "Doug" has been in constant training with Bull Montana, Spike Robinson and Kid McCoy and, to quote the screen athlete, "I was in the pink of condition when I made this film." This picture takes him out west where in an effort to be unselfish and to do things for other people, he gets in various melodramatic mix-ups that create their own comedy incident. While Fairbanks is unusually of an enthusiastic nature, he feels that "Knickerbocker Buckaroo" gives him greater opportunities than ever afforded him before in his screen career. He purchased a new horse having retired "Star" from active service and was in daily practice with it before the start of the regular day at the studio, getting acquainted and trying new stunts. "The Last Bottle" a funny Montgomery Flagg Comedy, British Canadian Pathe News, and topics of the day are also being exhibited on the same program

THEDA BARA AT PALACE

Theda Bara, the famous Fox star, is appearing at the Palace tonight for the last time in a splendid 6 act soul enslaved version of "Under Two Flags" Besides the above offering a funny "Toto" comedy and the 6th chapter of the high speed serial "Perils of Thunder Mountain," are also being presented on the same program.

CARTER ENDORSED

At a largely attended convention of the Liberals of South Wellington, held at the City Hall, Guelph on Saturday afternoon, Sam Carter, who goes the representative of the Liberals in the last Legislature, was pledged the support of the Liberals, and will gain be in the field as an Independent Liberal. Sam Cartier, in giving an account of his stewardship during the last five years, said he believed that the Liberal party honestly wanted to stick to their platform, and that platform looked good to him. He said he would vote "Yes" on all four of the referendum questions and there would be no quibbling about it.

Then came the resolution introduced by Geo. L. Wallace, of Pilkough Township, and seconded by Ald. Frank Howard of Guelph to the effect that the convention place its confidence in the integrity and manifest sincerety of purpose of Mr. Carter and to pledge him the support of the Liberal party in the approaching election. Ald Howard, in seconding the resolution said: "I am glad to see that Mr. Carter is a supporter of Mr. Dewart."

"I didn't say so," said Mr. Carter.

"Then I hope you will before this meeting is over."

"I will tell you," came back Mr. Carter.

The "telling" was an address of acceptance in which Mr. Carter pledged himself to work to see that the planks in the Liberal platform are embodied in law and put on the statute book. He made no reference to Mr. Dewart.

THE BALL TEAM

(By a Fan)

While the interest of our fans is at its highest pitch, I would like to let the readers of your columns know a little about how our city came to have a ball team. To start with, the beginning which was none too smooth was pushed and backed by Mr. Harry Pringle, whose energetic efforts resulted in the G. T. R. employees becoming interested as to form their own athletic association. Mr. Harry Pringle was then elected Secretary Treasurer of the Association without the least hesitation. Although Harry was a busy gent at the station despatching trains and the position required much time, he willingly undertook the task, and since has spent many of his off-duty hours working for the ball team. Let's give to him a lion's share of the credit as he deserves it. The task of the G. T. R. A.A.A. has been accomplished results. Then must be remembered the assistance rendered by Mr. Wm. Thompson and other officers of the Association who succeeded in getting together the good material which was here. They worked hard to get Belleville in the league and sign players. After the above mentioned gentlemen we must turn to the popular 'Tommy' Fegg, the players' manager. Under his careful coaching and baseball knowledge the boys came through the strenuous finish in the C. O. League and the Ontario championship hunt to where they are now. They have worked their hardest in practice and games. They have accepted his advice also his criticisms in a cheerful manner, the best of feeling prevailing among the players and manager. Last but certainly not least, we come to the players. They are our own boys, and we are proud of them. They have acted as gentlemen on the field, as citizens both at home and away. The ball supplied this season has been gilt-edged, lead by the wonderful battery work, put up by Gover and Mills. Why should we not be behind them on Friday when they make their best effort to bring the Championship of Ontario for Amateur Ball to Belleville.

The game has finally been arranged for Friday, which should enable nearly all citizens to watch what we hope and think will be the final game for the championship.

To the Voter

TO establish that the 2.51% beer to be voted on is "Beer of the Ballot" and not intoxicating, The Ontario Brewers' Association deposited $5,000 with the Canada Permanent Trust Company on September 16th.

¶ On September 19th, The Ontario Brewers' Association formally challenged the Referendum Committee through the Press to deposit an equal amount with the same Trust Company to support their contention that this beer is intoxicating.

¶ That challenge has never been accepted—clear admittance by the Referendum Committee that they do not consider that they have a case. It is too late now to make the tests and render a decision before the day of voting—October 20th—but the failure of the Referendum Committee to answer our challenge will not be overlooked by the man or woman who votes on facts and evidence, and not on sentiment or false statements.

¶ We again assert that 2.51% beer—"The Beer of the Ballot"—is not intoxicating. Tests have only recently been made which prove this conclusively—we will mail a copy of the test to anyone sufficiently interested to write for it.

¶ Moreover, while the "Beer of the Ballot" has an alcoholic strength of but 2.51% official tests made by the laboratory of the Inland Revenue Department—published in Bulletin 196—showed that the beers on general sale before The Ontario Temperance Act and Prohibition were enacted, had an alcoholic content ranging as high as 7.32% by weight measure—practically three times as strong as the beer to be voted on October 20th. Even such American beers as were sold in Canada and always spoken of as "very light, non-intoxicating beers" were over fifty per cent. stronger than the "Beer of the Ballot."

¶ The "Beer of the Ballot" is a mildly stimulating, healthful and refreshing beverage, brewed from a high grade of malt and hops—containing only sufficient alcohol to make it digestible and nourishing.

Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco

Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York—Doctor Cusmer, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, says: "Many men who smoke, chew or snoff incessantly, do not realize the extent of their suffering from nervousness, nerve disorders. Thousands of them would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco, and thousands would soon be relieved if they could only stop the use of tobacco. The tobacco habit-forming principle of tobacco is a deadly nerve poison, which when absorbed by the system slowly affects the nerves, membranes, tissues and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco may be slow in appearing, but sooner or later will be afflicted with nervous debility, others with catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of energy, stomach disorders, etc. Others may suffer from heart trouble, bronchial trouble, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness, or even cancer or the common affliction known as tobacco heart. If you tobacco in any form you can easily counteract the harmful effects by making the following test: Send stated one full page from a book. If in the course of reading your eyes become muddled, heavy and tired, and you must frequently clear your throat, you may be sure that your nerves are affected by nicotine, and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble. Next in the morning before taking your usual smoke walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be a victim of functional or organic heart disease. Now, if you wish to quit the use of tobacco and to quit for keeps, as there are slave to the tobacco habit, and are positively poisoning yourself with the deadly drug, nicotine, in either case you will be glad to learn of a simple, safe and self-administered remedy, free from all the dangers, and sold by the druggists generally, that has a record of 30 years' success. You can overcome the craving and the habit in 3 to 5 days, or even time for some, by following the respective formula: Go to any druggist and get a box of Nicotol Tablets, take one tablet after each meal, and in a comparatively short time you will find that the desire for tobacco, the craving, will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system, your nerves, which will quickly improve.

Note.—When asked about Nicotol tablets one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit in any form, and we advise all to give the remedy a fair trial before they buy the manufacturer. We are authorized to say that unsatisfied customers and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit. Nicotol tablets are sold in this city under the guarantee to refund money if not satisfactory after using one box as directed by all up-to-date druggists. (1)

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER IV—Continued

Cynthia went to bed radiantly happy that night, and kissed a bundle of lillies that had cost fifty francs, for the Capulets had relented.

The two men had had a long conversation on the terrace over their coffee and the senior, who was favorably impressed had ended by being jovial, and calling Kent 'my boy' and smacking him on the shoulder.

Nor was Mrs. Walford displeased by the decision since it could never be said that she had advocated it. 'My daughter's fiancé, Mr. Kent, the novelist, you know,' sounded well and she forsaw herself expatiating on his importance and determined what his income would be in her confidences with intimate friends. Really, if the house were nice, he might be making anything she liked—who could dispute her assertions?

The Capulets had relented, and the sun shone—especially in Paris, where Kent went in haste to procure the engagement-ring, and the thirsty trees were shuddering in the glare, and the asphalt steamed. But he could not wait, although the stay in Dieppe was drawing to a close now, and they would all be back in London soon. It seemed to him that it would be as the signing of the agreement when Cynthia put her finger through his ring; and he was resolved that it should be a better one than any of those her mother wore with such complacency. Poor droll of an author though he was her acquaintances should not tell that Cynthia was marrying badly by the very emblem of his devotion!

In the Rue de la Paix he spent upwards of an hour scrutinising all the jewelers' windows, before he permitted himself to enter a shop. He chose finally a pearl and diamonds—one big white pearl, and a diamond flashing on either side of it. It was a pale blue velvet case, lined with white satin. He was satisfied with his purchase and so was the salesman.

Cynthia's flush of delight as he disclosed it to repaid him superabundantly and when the girl proudly displayed it to them, it was gratifying to observe her parents' surprise. The expressions of admiration into which Mrs. Walford broke were fervent, and she felt instantaneously she could increase the income she had decided he should possess by fifty a third, in view of so magnificent a substantiation of her truthfulness.

His days were now delicious to Kent a magic haze enwrapped their stereotyped incidents, so that the terrace of the Casino, the verandah of the hotel, Nature and the polyglot lounging crowd itself, were all beautified. They were as familiar things viewed in a charming dream—the pleasant fields traversed so oft, which were still more pleasant as they appeared to the sleeping soldier. A tenderness overflowing from his own emotions was diffused over the scenes and he found it almost impossible to realize sometimes that the goddess beside him, who had been so unapproachable a month ago was actually going to belong to him directly. It dazzled him, and seemed incredible.

He had once sat down in the salon de lecture with the intention of apprising Turquand of his felicity; but the knowledge that the news he had to give entailed a defence, if he did not wish to write formally, had resulted in his destroying the preparatory lines he had scribbled. Delicacy demanded that he should excuse his action by word of mouth if excuses were required at all. To do such a thing in permanent pen-strokes looked to him profanation of an angel, and an insult to the bounty of God.

Mr. Walford was unable to remain in Dieppe so long as the day fixed for the others' return; nor, he said generally, was there any occasion for him to put himself out now that he had a prospective son-in-law to take his place. Humphrey was well content. He understood that the elder lady was a bad sailor and clung obstinately to the salon, while Cynthia found the passage enjoyable, and he anticipated several golden hours to where the natural presence would have proved alley.

He was not disappointed. Sustained by Heidsieck and the stewardess, Mrs. Walford stayed below, as usual, and he tasted the responsibility of being the girl in his charge. He let the flavor of the deck together, or he made her comfortable in a chair and brought her strawberries, and watched her eat them with amused interest, vaguely conscious that he found it wonderful to spend her month in love, and a delicate forefinger and thumb got pinky.

Your Life is in Hands of Others Every Day

As never before the need of modern traffic is for a clear head and steady hands. The man at the throttle, the steering wheel or the switch board must know what he is doing, must be ready on the instant for emergency, and must make no mistakes. Beer befuddles and unnerves.

In this new world of machinery and power the "boozer" has no place. In the railway business the confirmed "boozer" can't be trusted with the lives of his fellows. The Railway Brotherhoods don't want him. Beer makes him unsteady.

On the streets and highroads the "joy rider with booze on board" is a menace to traffic, to his own life and to the lives of others. Beer makes motoring dangerous.

Flying-men learned the disastrous results of alcohol taken preparatory to encountering the enemy in mid-air. Alcohol was proved by casualties to shake the nerves and destroy control. Beer impairs judgment.

In business and industrial organizations, the drinking man is the "last man hired and first man fired." Beer makes men slow, stupid, and unreliable.

Beer and all other intoxicating beverages have no place in a world run by machinery. The safety of too many others is involved when an unsteady hand and a drink-befuddled brain is left in control of the steering wheel or the engine throttle.

Remember that the Beer of the ballot is intoxicating beer. Mark Your Ballot with an X after each question under the word "No." If you don't mark an X after each question your ballot is spoiled.

"No!"—Four Times—"No!"

"JIM"

JIM was a lineman before the war. It was difficult to find a uniform broad enough across the shoulders for him when he "joined up" in 1914.

Jim found army discipline hard at first, but picked up the "war business" very quickly. He was one of the first of the "trench raiders," a Canadian contribution to the art of warfare. Jim seemed to bear a charmed life. Time after time in the dead of night Jim jumped into a German trench, spreading fear and disaster, and returned safe and sound.

But one fell night his luck gave out. He stepped into a stream of machine gun bullets. When consciousness came to him again, far in the rear of our lines, he was horrified to find his right leg missing.

During the ensuing months Jim's progress was —Clearing Station,— Boulogne,— "Blighty" and Home—Canada!

The shock of the operation left Jim pretty weak for a time. He was content to sit idly in a chair in the sun. But this grew tiresome after a bit. When he began to think about getting back to work he realized that a lineman with an artificial leg was rather impractical. That was his trade. He had spent years at it. And now he was barred from following it.

At this critical juncture, the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment came forward and with knowledge and experience pointed the way out.

After long and earnest discussion, it was mutually decided that the nearest thing to his old trade was that of a telegrapher despatcher. If Jim couldn't any more string wires on the poles he could learn to send the messages over the wires that the other fellow put up. So under the direction of the D.S.C.R. telegraph instructor Jim studied and perfected himself as an operator. This accomplished, the D.S.C.R. quickly found him a position.

Jim is all right now. He's contented as only a man who works can be contented. He is earning more money than before. His enthusiasm is high for the D.S.C.R., which gave him the training whereby he is again an independent and prosperous citizen. After all, it was for Canada that Jim fought and suffered —and Canada is only too eager to repay Jim and every man impaired in body or health through service to his country

* * * * * * *

The records of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment contain endless details in the matter of re-training ex-soldiers—a disabled farm laborer is now a machinist; a carpenter who lost four fingers on his right hand is now a draughtsman at a good salary; a former plasterer is now a printer. So it goes—a long and interesting record of men deprived of limbs or impaired in health—equipped with training and knowledge, now following new and suitable trades.

This great nation-wide organization of the D.S.C.R. requires a considerable expenditure. To meet its expenses a part of the Victory Loan 1919 is to be used. But its maintenance, until every disabled ex-soldier is fitted with a vocation enabling him to earn for himself an adequate and independent living, is one of the most sacred obligations that Canada has to discharge. Support to the limit of your ability—the

Proclamation

Civic Half-Holiday

In order that our citizens may have the opportunity of witnessing one of the final baseball games of the season, and to encourage our boys in their race for championship honors, I hereby proclaim Friday afternoon, the 10th inst., to be a Public half holiday for the Municipality of the City of Belleville.

W. A. WOODLEY,
Mayor, City of Belleville.

City and Country

QUIET IN POLICE CIRCLES

Everything was exceptionally quiet in police circles last night, not even a call being recorded. Police court business was also a blank today.

MADOC FAIR

A number from the city and vicinity were today in attendance at the Madoc Fair. The exhibits in the various classes is large and a fine exhibit of cheese was made. In many classes competition for prizes was keen.

PUTTING DIAMOND INTO SHAPE

Yesterday work was commenced on improving the baseball diamond in the Agricultural Park, and when the G. T. R. and Harvesters game is called on Friday afternoon it will no doubt be in fine shape. The prospects are that a record crowd will be in attendance at the game.

CITY WATER GOOD

Mr. Thos. Wills, sanitary inspector of the city, recently sent to Toronto samples of the city water taken from taps at houses. He has received a report which shows that the samples were good and the water in first class condition.

POLL FOR ABSENTEES

For the convenience of railway employees of this city who are voters and whose absence from the city on election day is unavoidable, arrangement have been made under the election Act to have their votes recorded. On the 15th, 17th and 18th inst at the residence of Mr. W. Arthurs, 137 Sidney street, a poll will be opened from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. for the purpose of receiving the votes of those who will be absent from the city on election day.

HALF HOLIDAY

In accordance with a resolution passed by the City Council, acting Mayor Woodley has issued his proclamation proclaiming Friday afternoon a public holiday. This is for the purpose of giving all an opportunity of attending the championship baseball game between the G. T. R. team of Belleville, and the Harvesters team of Hamilton.

DATE OF TRIAL

In the County Court of Hastings, Non-Jury Sittings, Richardson vs. Cassidy, the date of trial of this action was fixed by Judge Deroche to day for the week commencing October 27th. The suit is on to recover the price of a milking machine from a Madoc farmer to whom it did not give satisfaction. Plaintiffs claim it is the man's fault, defendant claims it is the machine's. W. N. Ponton for plaintiffs; E. J. Butler for defendant.

BALLOON LANDED

In connection with the national balloon championship race which started from St. Louis, several of the balloons are reported as having landed in various parts of Canada. One landed in Hastings County according to the following despatch from St. Louis: "Lieut. Cole telegraphed he descended 32 miles northeast of L'Amable, Hastings County, Ont., about 90 miles from here. The message did not state when the descent was made. The Wichita, piloted by Captain Carl Damman, is the entry unheard from. The Akron Aero Club's entry, having traveled 1,050 miles, lands, it is said."

ARE THE DAYS OF MIRACLES OVER?

IS SUPERSTITION AND FALSE BELIEF TO OVERSHADOW FACTS ANY LONGER?

When a woman who has been sick for years becomes well after taking a certain scientific preparation—you ponder that the remedy must be good?

Read these extracts taken from a letter written to us by Mrs. B. Cross of 382 King Street, West, Toronto:—"I suffered for several years with inflammatory Rheumatism and could hardly get up or down stairs. My husband bought me a box of Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules, and almost immediately I felt relief. The swellings started to go down and the stiffness left my knees. I might say that previously to using T.R.C.'s I had tried almost everything under the sun without success. I am a happier and wiser woman now, and I cannot thank you enough for the aid T.R.C.'s have given me."

It's the same story from hundreds of other Rheumatic sufferers. They tried T.R.C.'s and T.R.C.'s fixed them up. Will you suffer, try them.

Ask your druggist or write us for our new booklet. It is interesting and costs you nothing (Templeton's, 142 King St. West, Toronto). 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50. Sold in Belleville by Dolan's Drug Store, 322 Front St. Phone 138.

PUBLIC MEETING TONIGHT

At the Council Chamber this evening a public meeting will be held for the purpose of discussing the matter of providing an athletic field in the city.

IDENTITY ESTABLISHED

The identity of the young man who died in the hospital here on Monday night from injuries sustained when he was struck by a C. P. R. train near Shannonville, has been established. His name is Edwin C. Roth, son of Mr. Christian Roth of New Hamburg, Ontario. The father of deceased and a brother arrived here this morning and identified the body. An inquest was opened this afternoon before Coroner Dr. O'Gormans. The body will be shipped to New Hamburg for interment. Deceased was a mute and was 21 years and 11 months old.

CAR OUT OF CONTROL

A motor truck belonging to the Hall Hardware Company got out of control on Front Street at noon, something going wrong with the steering gear while it was being turned around. The truck ran up on the sidewalk and came to rest against a brick wall without doing much damage. The truck was driven by Mr. Charles Hall, who fortunately escaped injury.

CELEBRATED 85TH BIRTHDAY.

A very enjoyable event took place on Friday evening, Oct. 3rd at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simpson, Forin St., when the latter's mother, Mrs. M. Bimington, of Madoc, who is now visiting there, had the pleasure of celebrating her 85th birthday. She was the recipient of many very pretty gifts, although taken entirely by surprise she thanked her many friends for the kind tokens shown. Music and singing were carried on and a delightful lunch, prepared by Mrs. Elmer, was served, after which all returned to their homes after having spent a very pleasant evening.

AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY SWOLLEN VEINS RELIEVED

That Absorbine, Jr., would relieve varicose veins was discovered by an old Scotchman who had suffered from swollen veins for nearly fifty years. He had made unsuccessful efforts to get relief and finally tried Absorbine, Jr., knowing its value in reducing swellings, aches, pains and soreness.

Absorbine, Jr., relieved him and after he had applied it regularly for a few weeks he told us that his legs were as smooth as when he was a boy and all the pain and soreness had ceased.

Thousands have since used this antiseptic liniment for this purpose with remarkably good results.

Absorbine, Jr., is made of oils and concentrates of herbs and when rubbed upon the skin is quickly taken up by the pores; the blood circulation in surrounding parts is thereby stimulated and healing follows. $1.25 a bottle at druggist or postpaid.

A liberal Trial Bottle will be mailed postpaid for 10c in stamps. Booklet free. W. F. Young, Inc., 457 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Can.

WATERING PLACE SUIT.

The regular County Court non-jury sittings was opened Tuesday. Fleming vs. Cooper was the only case on the list. It was an action for the possession of a part of the west half of lot No. 4 in the 11th concession of Huntingdon. The plaintiff is a cattle dealer and has a cattle ranch of about 700 acres in the northern part of the Township of Huntingdon. The defendant claimed that he has become entitled to the part in question by occupying for 20 years. This part, though small, was the entrance to the first class watering place for cattle on the Moira River, and the loss of it to plaintiff would materially affect the value of the whole ranch. Plaintiff denied that defendant had sufficient claim to put in his title and said that in 1915 defendent had accepted a lease from plaintiff for the land in dispute. Plaintiff took proceedings under the Overholding Tenants Act last year and on the evidence submitted the Judge held that the plaintiff was not entitled to possession, and defendant claims that plaintiff is now estopped by that judgment from claiming in this action. Judgment reserved. W. C. Mikel, K.C., for plaintiff; E. J. Butler for defendant.

Unable to Work For Five Months

Toronto Man Had Given up Hope of Ever Getting Well—Tanlac Restores Him

"My wonderful improvement since taking Tanlac has astonished many persons who knew how sick I was," said W. R. Hastod, of 6 Chestnut Street, Toronto, Ont.

"I had suffered from stomach trouble for seven or eight years, but was continued, and couldn't get a thing I believe to eat. My appetite failed, nothing agreed with me and I got weak and thin as my stomach and bowels were terribly. My heart would palpitate so I could hardly get my breath, and finally I got so bad off that I had to quit working. I felt considerably as I might and felt that my case was hopeless.

"Since taking Tanlac I feel like a new man. I have gained eight pounds, my appetite is fine and I eat three big meals every day and haven't a sign of indigestion. A few bottles of Tanlac have done me more good than everything else I have ever taken put together, and I never miss a day from work now. I am glad to recommend Tanlac for it certainly fixed me up all right."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Carlton's Drug Store, in Deseronto by W. J. Mallory, in Stirling by J. A. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vines, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

King Victor Emanuel ratified the treaty of Versailles by royal proclamation. His action will be submitted to the new parliament after the coming elections for endorsement.

British Miners Demand Nationalization of Mines

PREMIER LLOYD GEORGE HAS ANOTHER KNOTTY PROBLEM TO SOLVE—DEPUTATION FROM MINERS' FEDERATION AND TRADES UNION CONGRESS PRESSING FOR COMPLETE NATIONALIZATION OF MINES.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—With the country not yet fully recovered from the effects of the railroad strike, British miners will take the stage today when a deputation will call upon Premier Lloyd George to press for the complete nationalization of mines. The deputation, as announced, consists of members of the parliamentary committee of the Trades Union Congress met recently in Glasgow, and members of the executive committee of the Miners' Federation. By a coincidence, J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railway Men and leader of the recent strike, will head the deputation as the new chairman of the parliamentary committee.

Liquor Seized By Wholesale

Barrels Containing Bottles Labeled "Soda" and "Formaldehyde".

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—Two more large liquor seizures were made in No. 4 Police Division. The first was the result of investigations by Patrol Sergeant Francis and P.C. Crowson (354) and resulted in the capture of 12 barrels containing 710 bottles of whiskey. They were in a C. N. R. freight car in the Cherry Street yards. Some of the barrels were labeled "soda," and others "formaldehyde" and were consigned to a local chemical firm. The police took the matter to the Government dispensary on Front Street, east. Several hours later License Inspector Lewis made a seizure of 6?8 bottles of liquor in the same yards. This also reposes in the Government dispensary now. Some idea of the amount of liquor which is being shipped into the province can be had from the fact that, counting the seizures no less than 6,000 quarts of liquor have been confiscated by the Police and License Departments during the past nine days.

Industrial Truce To End Strikes

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WARSON, Oct. 9.—Such an immediate industrial truce to continue three months; the creation of an arbitration board by President Wilson and Congress, and the immediate arbitration of the nation-wide steel strike, were among the proposals made today to the Industrial Conference here. Each of the two were presented by representatives of the public and the last by the labor group.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the public group, made the proposal for the industrial truce, while Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor and chairman of the labor group, proposed the arbitration of the steel strike. Mr. Gompers plan contemplates the immediate return of the steel strikers to work pending the outcome of efforts to arbitrate the dispute.

Shin Bone Grafted To Girl's Spine

Miracle Operation at Sisters' Hospital—Irene Hughes of Alexandria Bay.

KINGSTON, Oct. 9.—With a portion of her shin bone replacing what had previously been a diseased portion of her spine, Irene Hughes aged eighteen years, of Alexandria Bay, underwent an operation at the Sisters' Hospital from one of the most difficult operations known to the medical world. The little girl, who came to the hospital last July, is now healthy and plump, able to walk, and the plaster cast that was worn for the period of a year or two has been discarded. Within two or three weeks the young woman will be discharged from the hospital as fully cured of the tuberculosis that had developed years ago and found lodgment in the girl's spine.

The case has been one that has been watched with great interest by the medical fraternity of this city. In the history of the Sisters' hospital, however, there has been seven such operations and in each case there has been a full recovery without the slightest infection or trouble dev loping.

Miss Hughes has been a resident of Alexandria Bay for about three years, making her home there with a married sister, with whom she came from Rochester. For several years the young woman suffered from spinal trouble that gradually became worse, becoming a heavy plaster case being worn at all times.

The girl's condition became so bad that she was finally confined to bed as a last resort. When Miss Hughes was brought to Watertown, little hope was held out for a recovery. The operation consumed nearly three years, during which time a splinter was removed from the shin bone, the spine was notched, after the diseased part had been removed, and the healthy bone was then grafted into place. Miss Hughes has been up and around for several days and is now able to walk with very little difficulty.

Chicago defeated Cincinnati in the seventh game of the World Series by 4 to 1. Cicotte pitched well for the White Sox, but Sallee, for the Reds, was ineffective.

Sir Wm. Hearst Speaks at Cobourg

COBOURG, Oct. 8—A warm endorsation for the Ontario Government's business record was given by large gathering that listened to Sir William Hearst in the Town Hall here tonight. The Prime Minister had spoken in the afternoon at Bowmanville, but he was in splendid form and his masterful survey of the Government's record, particularly his defence of their action in enacting the Ontario Temperance Act, was enthusiastically received. Sir William strongly condemned the attempt being made to stir up the returned soldiers against the Government on the ground that the Legislature had taken away their liberty while they were at the war.

"That is not what we did," said Sir William, "and anyone who has given the matter any thought knows that that is not what we did. When our soldiers were fighting for freedom we passed that Act in order that we might give them reinforcements, more munitions and more supplies. We worked the people at home to deny themselves of a luxury while the boys were offering their all on the altar of patriotism overseas and we promised that when they came back this whole question would be submitted to the electors. They are home, and we say to them: 'The voice of the people must prevail. Whatever their verdict may be, the Government will abide by it.'

West Northumberland has for many years been represented in the Legislature by Sam Clark, the veteran Liberal campaigner, who is again in the field, but he has a hard fight this time and his re-election is a very doubtful proposition. His Conservative opponent, Lieut.-Col. P. G. Ross, is well known in the riding and will poll a heavy vote in Cobourg, his home town.

Germans Raze Forts on Rhine

MAYENCE, Oct. 9.—The task of dismantling the twelve ancient forts, which surround Mayence and protect the crossing of the Rhine has been taken by the Germans under the supervision of the French army of occupation. The work, which is being carried out in accordance with the provisions of the peace treaty requiring the dismantlement of Germany's Rhine fortifications, will require more than a year, as the job is tedious and necessitates much blasting.

Considerable trouble resulted from the demolition of the fort at Gonsenheim, seven miles from Mayence will be used for commercial purposes. Some gravel already has been used for repairing roads in the region of Mayence.

Plane Fell Into Lake Aviators Rescued

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

ASHTABULA, Ohio, Oct. 9.—Air-No. 45 in the transcontinental aerial derby fell into Lake Erie, three miles east of Ashtabula harbor this morning. The two occupants were rescued by the steamer Fairfax.

Prohibition Bills Discussed In Caucus

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press, Limited.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—Unionist members of the House of Commons went into caucus this morning on the prohibition and railway bills and were still in discussion of these measures at one o'clock. It is understood that the constitutional aspects of the prohibition measures were brought out, and many members questioned the right of the Dominion Government to delegate these powers to the provinces. About two o'clock with the conference still proceeding among Ontario members, many members and Senators from other provinces left the caucus room. An official statement is not yet available.

New Factory For Belleville

Elliott Woodworking Co., Limited, Secure Factory Premises and Will Move Here at Once.

The Burrell Rock Drill factory plant in the eastern part of the city has been secured by the Elliot Woodworking Co., Limited of Toronto, who expect to start operations in Belleville in about two weeks, beginning with twenty or more employees. This industry was secured for Belleville through Industrial Commissioner White and local capitalists, including the Graham Co., and Mr. W. Ackerman.

World's Series In Chicago To-day

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—The weather was inclement to be windy and it was possible this morning that the eighth game of the world's series between Chicago and Cincinnati, scheduled for today, would have to be postponed.

Few wagers were reported this morning on the outcome of the series. The betting odds on the series were apparently about two and one-half to two in favor of Cincinnati, with even money on the game today.

Yesterday's Game.

Cincinnati, Oct. 8.—Since the fact has been revealed to the Chicago White Sox that they can score runs in this series in quite the same way as in the American League race, the Chicagoans have been whipping the meltode which won them the championship. They ripped into the Cincinnati Reds with both afternoon and amass ed a total of four runs as against the lone run credited to the National Leaguers. The score on the series now stands four games to three in favor of the latter, and necessitates a jump back to Chicago for the eighth game of the big set, the world's baseball tournament now resolves itself in to a bitter struggle. The series will be over when the Reds win one more game before the Sox win two.

The realization that the Cincinnatians are not so overwhelmingly superior to the Sox as was believed by the first four games has spurred the Windy City combination to the top of its form. Eddie Cicotte baffled the Reds, and that is the use of Eller in the box in Chicago tomorrow. Eller is the pitcher who shut out the Sox on the latter's part of the bargain in the five best pitched games seen in the interleague clash since 1905.

The Clothier Hurls Ball Bride.

There was fine dash and finish to the play of the Sox today. In the first inning Weaver pulled his old trick of the National League champions. He was knocked out of the box in the first game, and was beaten in his second start because of his own stupid fielding mistakes. Baseball experts clung to the contention that no team in either league could beat the little shine-ball pitcher three times in a row, and his decisive victory today was therefore no surprise.

"Slim" Sallee of the Reds was hammered out of the box in four and one-third innings, four runs and nine good hits being exacted of him. Ray Fisher, who was beaten by the Sox for their first win of the series, was sent in. Fisher did fairly well, but was taken out after a brief tenure of the mound to make way for Ruether, the latter being used as a pinch-hitter. Adolpha Luque, erstwhile pitcher of the Reds, then took up the heaving burden and pitched very high-class ball.

The Cuban and the ball past the Chicago batters with the speed of a Johnson. He struck out five of the eleven batters who faced him and allowed only one hit, a double by Joe Collins, who failed to advance past second base. Two were out when the two-bagger was made and Luque promptly struck out Eddie Collins, who took three swings without connecting even for a foul.

Luque's really brilliant performance surprised even the Cincinnati fans, who have seen him frequently of late in the role of a "finish-up" pitcher.

Attendance Small.

The attendance was the smallest ever seen at a world series game, a fact that is accounted for in various ways, but one which is generally accepted as consideration of the length ening of the series to nine games.

TODAY'S GAME.

Batteries.

Cincinnati—Eller and Rayden.
Chicago—Williams and Schalk.

Previous line-up given will stand, except that Liebold will play centre field and bat first, and Felsch will play right field and bat fifth for Chicago.

Inquest Opened Upon Body of Railway Victim

Before Dr. Yeomans, coroner, an inquest was opened yesterday afternoon at Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment upon the body of Edwin C. Roth, who died as the result of injuries sustained when he was on Monday last, struck by a C. P. R. train near Shannonville.

The jury is composed of Messrs. Geo. C. Tice, foreman; A. Blackburn, H. Deshane, Wm. McIntosh, Wm. Leslie, J. Ham, J. D. Collip, Fred Smith and C. R. Cole.

Mr. L. Soule, County Constable, gave evidence as to the summoning of the jurymen, all of whom were called to act and Mr. C. R. Cole at the body being brought from the hospital to Tickell & Son's morgue.

Christian Roth testified that he was the father of deceased and resided at New Hamburg, Ontario. Had not seen his son for the past four years as he desired to leave the farm and did so. Witness bought him a ticket for Brockville. Deceased was both deaf and dumb. Witness wrote several letters to his son at Brockville, but never secured an answer. Witness also wrote to the O.S.D. at Belleville as to the whereabouts of his son, but could not locate him. He left 14 years in the School for the Deaf here. He was mentally bright. He was born a mute. While at school deceased worked at the carpenter trade.

David Roth, a brother of the deceased, identified the body as that of Edwin C. Roth. He corroborated the evidence of his father regarding deceased never leaving home and not hearing from him.

The inquiry was then adjourned until Tuesday evening next.

To Let the Provinces Decide on "Bone Dry" Prohibition

PEOPLE MAY DECLARE BY VOTES AT PLEBISCITE WHETHER THEY WISH TO STOP ALTOGETHER THE MANUFACTURE OF LIQUOR WITHIN THEIR BORDERS AND PREVENT IMPORTATION.

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—Two bills which set forth the policy of the Dominion Government with respect to the prohibition of the importation, transportation and manufacture of alcoholic beverages were introduced in the House of Commons by Hon. C. J. Doherty. Briefly, the policy adopted is to permit the provinces to decide for themselves by the majority of prohibition they desire and to provide means whereby they may obtain what they want. By one bill a method is provided whereby the people of any province may declare by their votes at a plebiscite whether or not they wish to stop altogether the manufacture of liquor within their borders and to prevent importation of it into their respective territories. For the purpose, an amendment to the Canada Temperance Act, or, as it is commonly called, the Scott Act, may be put into operation by a resolution of a provincial Legislature. Acting upon such a resolution the Dominion Government will take a plebiscite in the province and if the majority of the people call for "bone-dry" prohibition, will issue a proclamation forbidding the importation of liquor into the province or its importation into the province. The other bill extends the provisions of the Act in aid of provincial prohibitory legislation, known as the Doherty Act, to enable a province by legislation to prevent the manufacture within its borders of liquor to be used in violation of its laws. At present the Doherty Act enables the province to deal with importations of liquor into their territory for illegal purposes. The new bills do not provide the order-in-Council passed under the authority of the War Measures Act and prohibiting manufacture, importation and transportation of liquor for beverage purposes. That order, in its terms, is to remain in operation for a year from the proclamation of peace The War Measures Act, however, becomes inoperative immediately the return of peace is proclaimed. It has been contended therefore that the order-in-Council would cease to be valid when the peace proclamation was issued.

PURPOSE OF THE BILL.

Explaining the bill to amend the Canada Temperance Act, Hon. Mr. Doherty said:

"The purpose of this bill is to extend the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act so as to make it possible that if upon a plebiscite a vote of the electors of an entire Province, which plebiscite would be taken upon a petition presented to and a resolution of the Legislative Assembly, a majority of the electors declare that they desire that the importation of liquor into that Province, or both shall be absolutely prohibited then under the provision of this bill, such manufacture or importation shall cease. It would be also prohibited by a proclamation which would be issued in accordance with the petition and proclamation in the Canada Temperance Act. It is in effect extending the principle of the Canada Temperance Act so as to enable the majority of the electors in a Province to create a situation where the manufacture of liquor in that Province, or the importation of liquor into that Province would be absolutely prohibited."

Mr. Burnham: "Does that mean that in Ontario for example, we are going to decide merely on the referendum"

Mr. Doherty: "There will be no referendum except where a petition based upon a resolution of the Legislature of the Province concerned. The machinery would be set in motion at the request of the Legislature of the Province."

WHEELS WITHIN WHEELS

W. F. Maclean: "Would that [illegible] come within the scope of the Ontario Temperance Act, now the law in Ontario?"

Mr. Doherty: "No, as I understand it, the present law in force in Ontario does not deal with the question of the importation or manufacture of liquor."

W. F. Maclean: "Then what is the Ontario Temperance Act over that?"

Mr. Doherty: "It does not cover the question of liquor importation into a Province. The Provinces take the position that they cannot deal with those questions. Without discussing that point I may say that this would be a method whereby in virtue of Dominion legislation becoming operative by the vote of the electors of a Province, the importation into that Province or manufacture in it would be prohibited."

W. F. Maclean: "Then you would have to have a special referendum in regard to this question in order to avail itself of the provisions?"

Mr. Doherty—Upon a petition the Government would hold a referendum at the request of the province, or upon behalf the petition was signed."

Hon. Charles Marcil—Does the Minister provide for the coming into effect on the majority of the local votes cast, or on a majority of the voters on the list?

Mr. Doherty—It is a provision of the Canada Temperance Act, which, I think provides simply for a majority.

EXTENDS TO MANUFACTURE.

The purpose of this bill," said the Minister of Justice, in presenting the second measure, is to amend the Act in aid of provincial prohibitory legislation by making its provisions, which now extend only to the importation of liquor into a province to be used in violation of the laws of the province, extend also to the manufacture within the province of liquor to be used in violation of the laws of the province. That is one provision. The other provision that is made by it reintroduces into the Act a clause which was contained in the bill as it was passed by the House of Commons, but which the Senate protected. This clause is somewhat complicated in its drafting, and we hope may make it acceptable. The clause in question provides that a violation of the provisions of the Act shall be tried for the offence either in the province into which the liquor was sent or in the province in which the prohibition province in which the offence was actually committed. The Senate on two occasions rejected that clause.

Mr. Gauvreau: They did well.

Mr. Doherty—It is proposed now to re-enact it with this provision that it shall be operative only upon the fiat of the Attorney-General of the prohibition province asking that the accused be brought into that province for trial.

A PLATFORM OF PROGRESS

The policies upon which Sir William Hearst will ask the people of Ontario to pass judgment are set out under the following headings:

(1) The greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every shape and form;
(2) The faithful enforcement of the people's verdict on the liquor question;
(3) Vigorous support of Hydro-Electric development and cheap light and power for our farmers;
(4) Conversion of certain railway lines into Hydro-Electric lines;
(5) Good roads reaching every part of Ontario;
(6) A pension fund for mothers;
(7) Direct representation of Labor in the Cabinet;
(8) Establishment of a minimum wage;
(9) Unification of the labor laws of Canada on a just and equitable basis;
(10) Such further labor legislation within Provincial jurisdiction as ma rarise out of the findings of the National Industrial Conference and the International Labor Conference;
(11) Housing accommodation for industrial workers.
(12) Special consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation;
(13) A new era for education, providing technical and agricultural instruction throughout the province;
(14) Improvements of transportation facilities in Northern Ontario;
(15) Conservation of our timber resources and encouragement to mining;
(16) Measures to reduce the high cost of living;
(17) Protection of the public health, generous assistance to hospitals and charities, and special care of mental defectives.

Second Prisoner Convicted of Murder

Three More to Be Tried on Charge of Slaying Yannoff.

PETERBORO, Oct. 9.—At the fall assizes before Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, Miss Mabel, an Austrian was found guilty of murder in connection with the death of Philip Yaeff at Havelock on June 7th. Mabri is the second of the five prisoners held on this charge to be convicted. The trial of the other men will be held this week and sentence in the case of Mabel will be ready convicted until all have been tried.

According to information secured by the police from the prisoners, the plot to go to Havelock to rob the remains of the bunkhouse of the Ontario Rock Company was hatched in a poolroom on Queen street, Toronto and to have been inspired by a man known to the prisoners only as "John."

PUNISHING UNIONIST LIBERALS.

Toronto Star.

The position of the Unionist Liberals in the election campaign has not been made clear. The new leader of Ontario Liberalism, as chosen by convention, was opposed to the measures taken to secure reinforcements for the Canadian army in France. In some quarters official Liberalism seems to be disposed to penalize those members of the party who stood for the Military Service Act. The Kingston Whig says: "The present member of the Ontario House for North Brant (Scott-Davidson) failed to secure the Liberal re-nomination for that constituency, because he supported the Union Government in 1917. If the Liberal party refuses to recognize those who acted in a similar manner in this province, how can they expect the Liberal Unionists to give them any votes"

To The Electors of West Hastings

Having been honored with the Liberal-Conservative nomination for the constituency of West Hastings, and as it will be impossible for me in the brief time before polling day to call upon every elector, I take this means of soliciting your vote and influence. The record of the Government of Sir William Hearst is one of honest integrity, economy and progressiveness, and is too well known and appreciated to need extended comment here. If returned, with the endorsement of the electors at the polls, will do all in my power to assist in carrying out the progressive policy of my leader, Sir Wm. Hearst.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

No candidate will be nominated by the Liberals to oppose Hon. G. Howard Ferguson in Grenville. This was decided at a convention held at Spencerville.

Claude Brethin Nominated.

At a convention of the U. F. O. for the County of Lennox, Claude Brethin, about 26 years of age, son of George Brethin, of Ernestown, was nominated as a candidate.

Ottawa W. C. T. U. refuses to endorse the candidature of Mrs. J. C. Beers, in Ottawa West.

Election Clerks May Vote on O.T.A.

In the opinion of Allen M. Dymond, the Chief returning officer for the Province, the general disqualification clause doesn't apply to the referendum question. Again, no Dominion officer, except judges, will be affected in voting in either the referendum or the elections. The Act was amended in 1907 so that Custom's officers and postmasters could vote in elections. It was also announced by Mr. Dymond that there would be no special polls for commercial travellers. These apply only to railway men, who may vote on the three days of October 16, 17 and 18 at a special poll in each riding. The election returns, too, will precede the returns of the referendum. Both will depend largely on the despatch of the rural returning officers.—Toronto Star.

Time for Holding Nominations and Election.

To clear up the confusion in many people's minds regarding the time when the elections and the nominations are to begin and close, owing to the two times in different localities, Mr. A. M. Dymond, the chief returning officer, made a statement at the Parliament Buildings:

Toronto, East and West York—The polls open at 9 a.m. and close at 6 p.m. (daylight saving), or at 6 a.m.—5 p.m. (standard time).

Elsewhere—Polls open at 10 a.m. and close at 6 p.m. (daylight saving), or from 9 a.m.—5 p.m. (standard time).

The times for the nominations are as follows: Nominations begin at 1 p.m. (daylight saving), or 12 noon (standard time), and close at 2 p.m. (daylight saving), or 2 p.m. (standard time).

A Toronto paper stated yesterday that special polls would be provided for commercial travellers who would be permitted to vote during three days preceding the election the same as railroad men. The chief election officer for the province, Mr. Dymond, of Toronto, says this is not correct and that no special provision has been made for commercial travellers, who on account of the election coming on Monday, will be able to vote without inconvenience.

WON'T TAKE BACK RESOLUTION

An effort to rescind the vote of censure passed against Wm. Proudfoot, K.C., former Liberal Leader, by the Centre Huron Liberals, was stopped at the party convention Monday in Seaforth. President M. Murdie at first refused to let the rescinding resolution go to the meeting, but after an uproar from the delegates he was obliged to place the matter before the convention. With very few exceptions they refused to take back what they had already said, and some very bitter remarks were passed. A letter from Mr. Proudfoot, in which he said he had severed his connection with the Liberal party and that he would run as an Independent, was read. Mr. J. M. Gavenlock was chosen as candidate.

Mr. James Walsh, Reeve of Tyendinaga Township, has been offered the Liberal nomination for East Hastings and will, at a meeting to be held this evening, give his decision. In conversation to-day with a friend Mr. Walsh admitted that in all probability, he would be a candidate. If he should decide to go into the contest it will make a three corner fight as Mr. S. Grant, Conservative and Mr. H. K. Denyes, U.F.O. are already in the field.

A meeting of all word committees in the interest of Mr. W. H. Ireland, Conservative candidate for West Hastings, will be held to-night at the Conservative rooms over Adams' store.

Last night, a large number of Mr. Ireland's supporters in the city met at the club roms and considerable business was transacted, in perfecting the canvas of the city and making arrangements for getting out the vote on election day.

Thousands of Men Gave Their Limbs

What is Lending Your Money to The Nation, at Interest Compared to That?

Up to the end of August this year 2,744 of Canada's maimed war heroes had been fitted with artificial limbs 2,941 had received orthopedic boots. These were supplied free through the department of Soldiers Civil re-establishment.

Think what these crippled soldiers gave to help their country. Some an arm, some a leg and others both. Compare their sacrifice with what you are asked to do for your country now.

You are not asked to give any of your limbs—in fact you are not asked to give anything at all. You are asked to lend your money in order that war obligations which are yours may be met.

The maimed soldiers can never get back the good limbs they gave but you will get back the money you lend and you will draw 7 per cent interest on it while it is doing your country's work.

The cost of maintenance of the Department of Soldiers Civil Re-establishment will be met with proceeds of the Victory Loan, 1919. If only a mark of thanks that you do not have to go through life minus a limb subscribe every dollar you can place your hand upon to the Victory Loan.

An Agent In New York.

Lt.-Col. Alonzo A. Cooper, of Toronto, who recently returned from overseas, has gone to New York to open a publicity office in that city for the Dominion Government. For some time such a move has been contemplated by the authorities at Ottawa. It has been felt that Canada's interests in the United States had reached a stage where they required careful and well-organized attention. Almost every South American country has its publicity representative in New York, and even Great Britain found it advisable to maintain a publicity staff there during the war. Australia is opening such an office, and Canada could not afford to be backward in this service.

Col. Cooper is a past president of the Canadian Press Association, and has been engaged in editorial work for over twenty years. For some time he was editor of the Canadian Magazine and later was one of the founders and editor of the old Canadian Courier. He was the first president of the Canadian Club of Toronto. He is thus well-equipped for this kind of work.

The New York office which Col. Cooper will open will handle Canadian news exclusively and also be a permanent source of information for United States news agencies, editors and special writers on magazines and commercial publications. For the present, the office will be under the control of the Department of External Affairs, but it is expected that it will ultimately pass under the control of Canada's representative at Washington when one is appointed.

Canada is the second best customer for United States exports and for some time to come Canada must draw her fresh supplies of capital from American sources. This makes it necessary that the fullest information about the progress of this country, agricultural, financial, and commercial, shall always be promptly available to the reading public of the United States. Col. Cooper is thus undertaking a work of considerable national importance.

Need for More Consuls.

The chairman of the shipping board has called the attention of Canada and the people to the need of enlarging our consular services abroad, in view of the fact that our present merchant marine will be released for use in foreign trade.

Mr. Hurley tells us, observes the Independent (New York), that the United States will have 25,000,000 tons of merchant shipping by the end of 1920, and that at least these ships can be freed from military work they will be commerce. The present consulates would be utterly inadequate to handle the enlarged business. There are not enough of them, their staffs are too small and they are handicapped by inexperience with duties that will be demanded and by antiquated regulations. Even now the burden of work, especially in the way of inquiries to be answered, is overtaxing the undermanned and underpaid force. Mr. Hurley therefore pleads that immediate steps be taken to remedy the situation.

"We need more consuls and larger consular staffs," he tells us, "and it is not provide them today and prepare for the great growth in our merchant marine and trade after the war. For that we shall suffer a serious breakdown."

The Sarsen.

The word Sarsen was applied in the middle ages to Turks, Arabs, Moors and other Mohammedans in Western Asia and Northern Africa. The same kind of people live now, but the word is seldom used except in romance, poetry and history.

Leukart Children Slowly Dying

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 9.—Two childish voices, one a trifle stronger than the other, but both pathetically weak, joined in a simple prayer in a little white-tiled room in Providence Hospital yesterday.

It was the prayer of the two Leukart children, Shirley and Edna, aged eight and six doomed to die by slow poisoning by the act of their mother.

Shirley, the eldest girl, sank into a semi-coma late yesterday afternoon. Her death may come at any moment, say the doctors; Edna, the younger, for whom the physicians had at first held out a slender thread of hope, also was weaker last evening, and no longer asked for her tin soldiers, and her pretty story-book with the colored pictures.

Dr. H. W. Yates, the attending physician, stated last night that nothing in medical science could stay the progress of the poison, corrosive sublimate of mercury. Neither can it be counteracted, because it already has been used in the system. The symptoms are swelling of eyelids and abdomen, while a general lassitude comes over the patient. The poison goes through a process of degeneration, killing the tissues and edstroying the kidneys and intestines. It is only a question of days before the damage is accomplished. The mind remains clear until the end.

Roy Leukart, the father, sat all last night and all day to-day between the two little cots, keeping his death vigil.

MRS. J. STEVENSON

Yesterday afternoon the body of the late Mrs. J. Stevenson of this city, was consigned to the tomb at Belleville Cemetery. A large number of relatives and friends were in attendance at the obsequies. Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrew's church conducted services at the house and grave. Many beautiful floral tributes were contributed by relatives and friends. The bearers were four sons of deceased.

(What the Press Agent Says)
"HEARTS OF THE WORLD"

"Hearts of the world" the supreme triumph of D. W. Griffith, to be again presented at Griffin's next Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily, inaugurates a new era in the realm of the screen drama. Here, with the great war as a background, Mr. Griffith has filmed a simple little love story, old as the ages yet, ever new. "Hearts of the World," has proven the latest sensation in the screen world. Mr. Griffith realized that the public which became enthusiastic over "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance," would expect something big from him in this latest picture, and therefore instead of trying to out-do himself in staging gigantic battle scenes, he used the Great War only as a background for the filming of a simple and attractive story of tremendous human interest.

ETHEL CLAYTON AT GRIFFIN'S TO-NIGHT

In "A Sporting Chance" a new picture, presenting that beautiful and fascinating star, Ethel Clayton, which comes to Griffin's to-night, the quick wit of a girl bares the machinations of a scheming blackmailer and prevents him from carrying on his nefarious designs. Miss Clayton plays the role of Carey Brent, a girl quick to carry out every impulse which suggests itself to her. Her first impulse is to reform a man whom she believes is a notorious convict who has escaped, when she encounters him on a country road and employs him as her chauffeur. Carey's father has a new and charming bride, who is not much older than Carey herself. During her father's absence, Carey finds that there is something in common between her new step-mother and Seward, a society idler, and to keep Seward from her stepmother she herself turns Vamp and leads him a merry chase. When she learns from a telephone conversation that Seward is blackmailing her step-mother, using some of her old love letters which he holds, as his whip, and, is demanding Carey as his price of silence, she rebolts and goes to Seward's apartments to get the letters. The events that follow will be found to be of engrossing interest. Besides the above offering a funny 2-act Sunshine comedy, "A Fatal Marriage," Gaumont News, and three other selected plays will also be shown. Three vaudeville specialties will also be offered on the same program, Kendall's Auto Doll, the Maid of Mystery; James McNally, comedy juggler, and Mabel Duggan, the personality girl in a repertoire of new catchy numbers.

"THE BONDAGE OF BARBARA"

A smashing climax involving Mae Marsh in a decidedly different role is the features of the star's newest Goldwyn picture, The Bondage of Barbara which is being presented at the Palace to-night to Saturday, matinee daily. Miss Mae in boy's clothes, climbs up to the attic of a roadhouse, where her brother is kept a prisoner. He has been placed there by the men responsible for a theft, which Barbara has paid for with a year of her life in the reformatory. She takes her brother's place and induces him to go to the district attorney and explain everything. When his captors find her they seek to carry out of the plan. It is then, that Miss Marsh puts up a fight such as will amaze the Bellerville admirers of the erstwhile portrayer of altogether feminine roles. She proves a match for the two men, her struggle being brought to an end only by the arrival of those cognizant of her plan to bring the criminals to justice. The charm of "The Bondage of Barbara" is manifested in Miss Marsh's mimic home, her devotion to her brother and the love scenes with her lawyer sweetheart all of which blend into an unusually vital photoplay. Besides the 5-act offering a new comedy, and the 15th and 3rd from the closing chapter of the popular serial of the circus, "Lure" all are also announced for exhibition.

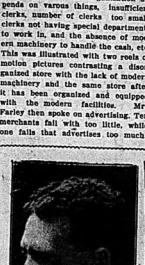
Business Story In Word And Picture

W. H. Farley, of Dayton, Ohio, Talks to Belleville Merchants.

In the Y.M.C.A. building last evening, Mr. W. H. Farley, of Dayton, Ohio, addressed a number of the merchants and clerks of the city, on the "Troubles of a Merchant and How to Correct Them."

Details of Failures

The details of nine merchants' failures out of ten depends on the following, lack of store organization, lack of newspaper advertising and poor window display. Store organization depends on various things, insufficient clerks, number of clerks too small clerks not having special department to work in, and the absence of modern machinery to handle the cash, etc. This was illustrated with two reels of motion pictures contrasting a disorganized store with the lack of modern machinery and the same store after it has been organized and equipped with the modern facilities. Mr. Farley then spoke on advertising. Ten merchants fail with too little, while one fails that advertises too much.



W. H. FARLEY, Dayton, Ohio.

The best and most successful method of advertising is through the local newspapers, as this is a medium of known value and goes into the hands of customers and purchasers of the community that are likely to trade with the merchant. Do not overcrowd your advertisements, as an over-crowded advertisement is not likely to be read. Have the copy into the printers early so as to avoid the rush hours. Do not use too many cuts especially unillustrative ones, and avoid borders, but if necessary they should be plain and neat. As to window display, do not over-crowd windows, as likely purchaser's very seldom have time to stand for hours in front of a window to find some one article they require. Have the lights bright but not so they will dazzle the onlooker.

Talk to Clerks

The clerks should be neat in their appearance, courteous without overdoing it, and loyal to their employer. They should endeavour to make the house's interest their interest and in so doing they not only better the merchant but also themselves in the way of advancement for if leaving the store will always find their present employer willing to give them recommendations. The clerks should push the goods that the merchant requires and above all things talk quality, as this always pays. They should also attract the customer to other items other than he came in to purchase, but never force a sale as this means dissatisfied customers and return of goods, which also means loss to the merchant. Clerks should never be afraid of doing too much work because when the clerk applied for the position he had something to sell, his time, and like purchasing a suit of clothes one wants the complete suit and not part of one, the same as the merchant when he bought your time he expected to get the full benefit of every working hour of the store.

Film Demonstration

Mr. Farley concluded his address with a film. This film is of a merchant who has failed and then became a success, and tells a complete story, pointing out where every business man may profit.

The opening scene shows the store of, Mr. White, the merchant. The windows are high and thus prevent proper display of goods, and the front of the store very untidy, thus customers turn away n disgust. The interior shows neglect, stock poorly exhibited, clerks work in an indifferent way, and Mr. White is overworked and rushed, and is now at the point of bankruptcy.

Mr. White has now become discouraged and is about to give up when he is advised to reorganize his business and adopt modern methods, this he decides to try and as a result his business conditions change. He takes up his store, secures the services of competent clerks, and gives his personal attention to the important parts of the business, secures modern machinery and the result is a profitable business, and a satisfied and contented merchant.

The film was produced by the Essanay Company, for The National Cash Register Company after months of hard work and at a great expense. While it is of special interest to merchants, clerks, and those engaged in retail business it carries a lesson to every other business man.

Stores Differ

Mr. Farley states that many merchants say, "that film is all right, but our store is different," such is not the case as all stores are run on the same system with a little change to suit the different lines of business.

CHIROPRACTOR FOR KIDNEY TROUBLE

Chiropractic Vertebral Adjustments will relieve 9 cases of kidney trouble. The real cause is to be found in the spine where the vertebrae (small bones) are subluxated (displaced). Zwick's Island Proposed For City Recreation Park

REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS DISCUSS NEED OF RECREATION PARK FOR BELLEVILLE — IMPROVEMENT OF ZWICK'S ISLAND PROPOSED—POPULAR SENTIMENT IN FAVOR OF RECREATION PARK AND ATHLETIC FIELD.

A representative gathering of citizens was held in the city building last evening, the object of which was to discuss the proposition of establishing in the city an up to date athletic field. Business men, professional men, and others were in attendance.

Ald. Hanna, who has taken an active interest in the matter, occupied the chair. The result of the meeting was that a committee was appointed to look over certain grounds and report to an adjourned meeting.

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., was the first speaker and he stated he was in hearty sympathy of the idea to procure an athletic field. To his mind, Zwick's Island would be a suitable place. It could be levelled off and suitable buildings could be erected. He suggested that a Bylaw be submitted to the electors to provide sufficient funds to secure such grounds. By this means all would be assisting. If this was not done a company might be formed and shares sold. An athletic field was a necessity. Good sport is a barometer to tell how progressive a city is. You cannot find a town or city in Canada, or the States that is progressive in a business or industrial way that is not also progressive in the line of sports. Oshawa, for instance has just made provision for an athletic field at the cost of $50,000, and it is the busiest and most prosperous town in Ontario. Mr. Mikel said if the citizens wanted an athletic field that was suitable for water-sports as well as land sports that could be reached by small and large boats as well as by autos and by walking, where you could get the cool breeze from all directions and at the same time have the most attractive scenic situation in Ontario, Zwick's Island was the place. The city owns the Island and it could be levelled off, a grand stand built, underneath which bathing houses could be constructed. Other places have their advantages but Zwick's Island combines them all. Sports bring people of a community together in a way that nothing else does. All classes meet together for sport. It develops the community spirit which is needed in Belleville.

Mr. R. E. Colling, thought the Zwick's Island would be a good place but perhaps would not be large enough if a race track was proposed to be built. Coleman flats was not a good place owing to the rock being so close to the surface.

Ald. Hanna—There is a very good site adjoining the G. T. R. on North Front street, owned by Mr. Wedden.

Mr. L. R. Terwilliger, in speaking about the Agricultural Park, said he thought it could be utilized for the next three years, as it will possibly be that long before Albert College would use it.

Mr. W. B. Deacon, was in hearty sympathy of having an athletic field properly equipped. This would help to build up the city. In regard to the Agricultural Park, it could be utilized for three years. The Wedden property on Front street would be a good place.

Mr. E. Galloway, spoke in support of having an athletic park made on Coleman flats. The city might acquire the property.

Mr. W. J. Thompson, stated that it would be rather difficult to make a diamond on Coleman flats, owing to the flat rock being so near the surface.

Col. O'Flynn, said it had been estimated that it would cost some $10,000 to put Coleman flats in proper shape. He was in favor of having an athletic ground.

Mr. McFadyen said that many do not go to the Agricultural Park owing to many disadvantages for seeing the game of baseball played.

Mr. M. Sprague—There is no doubt we are neglectful as to the matter of sports. He thought the surface ground at the Agricultural Park was not altogether suitable. He would rather favor Mikel's plan to secure Zwick's Island. It is at present being mutilated for no particular purpose. If had proper surroundings, we would have fine beautiful sports. It was not necessary to add the Agricultural Society to it.

Mr. M. P. Duff in his remarks said that an athletic grounds was necessary in Belleville.

Mr. Lapcrt of the G. T. R. emphasized the idea of Belleville having an athletic grounds.

Mr. A. McGie, said that in various parts of the city there were grounds which were available for the smaller boys to play games upon, or a practice ground. If Zwick's Island was secured by the leving it, perhaps two more acres could be made by filling up of the marsh.

Mr. Arthur Johnson, suggested that a committee be appointed to examine Zwick's Island and report at a subsequent meeting, as to the feasibility of the place as an athletic ground.

A motion to that effect was carried. Mr. P. Boyle, of the Y. M. C. A. was in favor of an athletic field. We must encourage all healthy sports. The feasible thing to do is to organize a commission of sports.

Col. O'Flynn—Let the committee investigate and report upon other grounds, than Zwick's Island.

A committee composed of Messrs. M. Sprague, J. Pringle, J. Parks of Parkville, R. Lane, R. E. Colling, W. J. Thompson, J. R. Wray, P. Brooks and Ald. Hanna was appointed to look over proposed sites and report at a subsequent meeting to be named later.

A committee was also appointed to ascertain what it would cost to make improvements at the Agricultural Park.

Meeting adjourned to meet at call of chairman.

CANNOT ACCEPT DEWART.

The Toronto Star has always been a strong Liberal paper, but has never accepted Hartley Dewart as Liberal leader of Ontario. Not only does the Star refuse to accept Hartley Dewart as leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, but it comes out strongly in favor of Sir William Hearst and urges its readers to support the Premier and his candidates. The Star says editorially:

The political situation in the Province of Ontario, with a general election in full swing, is a complicated one for the Liberal who is a consistent prohibitionist and who regards this question as the most important of the day.

The prohibitionist who has been a staunch Liberal in politics looks over the field and he sees the Conservative party led in this campaign by a leader who has staked his premiership on prohibition; who abolished the liquor business although his party under another leader had been elected to office as opponents, not only of out-and-out prohibition, but of the milder policy of abolishing the bars, which the Liberal party advocated in the last general election. Sir William Hearst is the prohibitionist leader of a party in which are—or were—the majority of those opposed to prohibition.

In looking over the field the prohibitionist who has always been a staunch Liberal sees his own party led by a man who is not an advocate of prohibition; a man who, when he entered the Legislature, did so through a Tory constituency in Toronto in which the liquor business was then strong; a man whose election was meant to be, and by all was known to be, a sharp reproof to the Conservative Premier who because he had introduced prohibition had won the enmity of a powerful trade. When Mr. Hartley Dewart was elected in South-West Toronto the opponents of prohibition went out to defeat the Government in that riding, and they did it. The man they elected is now, by a turn of the wheel of fortune, leader of the Liberal party, in which most are advocates of prohibition.

The political situation is therefore rather mixed for the Liberal who regards prohibition as the most important question of the day.

The referendum ballot is entirely different from the party ballot on election day, and none the less a prohibitionist will do his duty when he votes four solid "Noes" on the referendum.

But suppose he contents himself with that. Let us suppose that the "Noes" have it by an overwhelming majority and that prohibition carries all along the line, but that Sir William Hearst is involved in defeat. What will have defeated him? The conclusion will be inevitable that his defeat was due to the fact that he champions prohibition, although leader of a party which to a large extent did not approve of his action; that his loyalty to the cause of temperance lost him large numbers of Conservative votes, while his service to the cause of prohibition did not win him the support of enough Liberal prohibitionists.

Do the people who vote for prohibition want it? If so, it seems necessary that they should prove it in a manner that public men and political parties will understand. In the last general election in a Province that is supposedly strong for prohibition Hon. N. W. Rowell went down to complete defeat advocating the abolition of the bars. If in this election Sir William Hearst goes down in defeat because he put the Ontario Temperance Act into effect every politician in the country will draw the inference—no matter how the vote on the referendum goes—that the public must who trusts to prohibition sentiment where political voting is) concerned is a doomed man.

Sir William Hearst has taken the boldest course on behalf of the cause of temperance of any public man in the history of either political party in Canadian public life; he took his course contrary to the inclinations of his party; the support of large sections of his party is falling away from him because of his championship of the cause. Those who believe that he did the right thing ought to support him for having done it, and not leave him to be dealt with by those who enmity he has incurred.

THE WHISPERING CAMPAIGN.

A whispering campaign is in evidence. The Liberal leadership of Hartley Dewart having been so utterly discredited, even his candidates in some instances are seemingly ashamed of their leader and are whispering to those electors who will not accept the leadership of Dewart that after the election a new leader will be provided. The situation must be pretty bad when these whispering tactics have to be resorted to in an effort to secure votes for candidates who thus tacitly admit they have no confidence in their leader. Candidates of Sir William Hearst have the utmost confidence and pride in their leader and no whispering campaign is needed to induce electors to vote for any candidate of the Hearst Government, which has proved its honesty and integrity upon every occasion.

REMEMBER THE TRENCHES.

Returned soldiers can not consistently vote for Hartley Dewart or any Dewart candidate. Where the call comes from Flanders for speedy reinforcements for the Canadian troops, hard pressed by the most desperate Hun onslaught, Hartley Dewart did not think enough apparently, of the boys over there to say "Yes, they must have reinforcements as speedily as possible." Instead we had the spectacle of Hartley Dewart touring the country from coast to coast speaking from many platforms and doing his utmost to defeat the Military Service Act, designed to provide reinforcements in the quickest possible way.

How can any returned soldier candidate consistently serve under such a leader?

How can any returned soldier elector cast his ballot for Hartley Dewart or any of his candidates?

The boys who suffered and sacrificed in the trenches overseas and were fortunate enough to come home again can not vote for a Dewart or any Dewart candidate and be true to themselves and a greater Canada.

MACKENZIE KING'S WAR RECORD.

Mr. Mackenzie King has given the country a fine record, and it is, according to a report, "his work done among the miners of Colorado and for the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company and other big industrial concerns to support his contention that the services he had been able to render industry, and through industry the fighting armies at the front, were greater than any other service he could have performed in a military way at his age."

Is not this rubbish? No one complained of his not fighting in the war, but that he was in the States during it and did nothing whatever here to aid in the prosecution of the war; rather, he did what he could to kill the Military Service Act. It is not to be supposed that his influence went very far with the miners of Colorado and the men in the big industrial concerns. His excuse and explanation only make his conduct the worse as they are camouflage of the worst description, and not such as will make Canadians think that he did not fail in his duty during the war. This being so he is not a fit leader in Canada.—Kingston Standard.

The campaign of W. H. Ireland, Conservative candidate for West Hastings, grows in strength every day and indications multiply that he will be honored with the largest majority ever rolled up for a candidate in this riding. Many leading Liberals feel that they cannot support Hartley Dewart in this election and will cast their votes for the Hearst candidate

Belleville citizens' one and all, are proud of their baseball boys and will turn out to cheer them on to victory at the final game for the championship of Ontario. The success of the Belleville baseball team is largely due to the team spirit and the fact that every member of the team is contributing to the victory. Every member of the team plays his position as if the result of the game depended upon his effects alone in co-operation with his team mates, and equal credit for the team's magnificent record is due to all.

Sandy Grant, M.P.P., has well and worthily represented the electors of East Hastings, Conservative and Liberal, No member of the Legislature has worked harder in the interests of his constituents than Sandy Grant. There is no rhyme or reason in Sandy Grant being opposed at the polls at all. No one has any fault to find with him and there is nothing but praise for his faithful services. A change in representatives would be in the best interests of East Hastings and the electors of that constituency are not going to take any chances on being represented by anyone except a member of the government led by Sir William Hearst.

The order of the Board of Commerce reducing packers' prices of pork to the retail trade will be effective on October 15. The two weeks of grace will give retailers and other handlers of fresh and cured meats time in which to move present stocks. The basis for the reduction is the price level of March of this year. Live hog prices, the basic cost to the packer, were in March last about the same as they are now, but decreases in dressed and in live stock values have been severe, packers' selling prices and retail prices have not shown proportionate change. Not until the Board actually came into being was there a real attempt to make selling prices conform to lowered cost prices. Meat is cheaper in retail stores now than it was in the early summer, but evidently a slackened demand in August had much to do with this change. The effectiveness of the Board's effort depends largely, however, on whether the public co-operates in enforcing it. Anyone who is overcharged under the new price schedules come into effect, can lay a complaint with the officials of the Board, and prosecutions can be started quickly. The commissioners intend that their orders shall be fully obeyed, but if the public does not co-operate by refusing to pay higher prices, detection of evasions is correspondingly hard. The order issued applies to packers' selling prices, but as the retail price has a fairly definite relation to this, the reduction should be passed on in full to the consumers of meat.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Thought it an Imitation.

A little Hebrew from the Toronto Ward was loitering with open mouth to a Scottsman from Glasgow, who was livening things up a bit in the Salvation Army hut just back of the lines. One of the Tommies asked him the reason for the expression of awe on his countenance. "What's the matter, Abey, didn't you get the joke?" he was asked. "I don't know nottin' about no joke," was the answer, "but how that guy can imitate Harry Lauder!"

Redskins Love Chaplin Films.

The big store of the Hudson Bay Co. was crowded with red men, squaws, papooses and paleface tourists. The air was tense with suppressed excitement when the projector whirred under the direction of William Dawson, director of the Ontario Provincial Motion Picture Bureau. When Charlie appeared on the screen a chuckle of approval ran round the circle of spectators, quickly followed by the query: "What fakes them walk?" That seemed to be the puzzle. Some of the Indians had seen motion pictures at Haileybury and other towns, but Charlie's walk still solved the riddle of the walking pictures. "Guy" the Ojibway Indian girl was afraid of the strange sight, but the others asked: "Why don't they show more of them?"

The picture, "The making of Maple Sugar," was watched with keen interest, and when a flash of red squirrel came running along a rail fence appeared a shout of genuine glee burst from the children as they recognized the familiar animal. "The New York Zoological Park" reel excited much wonder.

Among those present was the oldest Indian in the Reserve, Dan Misabi, familiarly known as Shuna Cold man," as he is said to be 125 years old, and it is well established he is over 105. This aged Indian showed the most interested ones in the audience.

"Standard Time."

There has been a great deal of disputing in Canada as to which time is standard time. The champions of the old time called it "standard time" until the claim was at last contested by the people who favored daylight saving. After considerable controversy regarding the term, the people of Iowa decided upon a final verdict by making a direct enquiry to the Greenwich (England) observatory to learn the time in use the world. It was learned that "daylight saving" is the standard time Greenwich Observatory is operating on daylight-saving time in connection with the British law, which advanced the clocks an hour during the summer months. As a result daylight-saving advocates contend that they are in a position to fight the matter out in the courts. The law prescribes that "standard time" is 24 hours in advance of the time of Provence of Ontario was automatically forced to follow suit.

NO DISGRACE TO FEEL FEAR

One Result of War Has Been Sane Idea of What Constitutes Real Bravery.

An English observer calls attention to the fact that the great war has destroyed the fear of being afraid. Therefore, even to most distant analogy, the same quality does not lie in the soldier was that he should be fearless and the more sensitive he was better. The faintest tremor of timidity was a black mark against the most promising recruit, and to be the lowest bowman or hallbardier, and the schooling for war was an utter defiance of that sensation.

This theory held, as many will remember, until the period of the Boer war, when the British suffered so severely in officers because it was held cowardly for a commander to seek cover. Men, then as now, felt fear, for that is one of flesh's attributes and, indeed, is one of the most valuable of human possessions, since it is the prompter from danger and harms innumerable. We fear wild beasts to avoid them, snakes and fire for the same reason, and tempests, storms and tempests that we may prepare means of escape from them.

So it was quite natural that chivalry insisted that man should be without fear, and so he was.

With the coming of new warfare, however, all lands at once came to a new appreciation of fear, and the new physical bravery has given place to moral resolution. The man who now stands erect in the face of hurled flames and deadly gases, no longer stands because he has no fear, but because he is not afraid. He knows full well and only a stupid nature could avoid the knowledge that the human is at the mercy of forces a million times beyond his ability to control, and that he is not more really believe he was able to unhorse the mailed knight with a single lance and therefore might conceivably be without fear, but how can a soldier feel that way when facing modern weapons of destruction?

Therefore, it is no longer a disgrace to fear, and the only disgrace is to allow fear to prevent one doing his duty. Finer manliner fiber is needed for this new defiance!

The Scouts.

The Boy Scouts organizations was founded in England in 1910 and introduced in Canada the same year. The object is to develop patriotism, discipline, courage and self-control in boys, as well as to put the Golden Rule into daily practice. The unit of the organization is the "patrol" of from six to eight boys, a "troop" comprises two or more "patrols" and the scoutmaster is the officer in charge of a troop.

The Salmon Pack.

The Pacific Coast salmon pack of 1917 was 8,647,425 cases, of which 4,795,000 cases came from Alaska, 1,567,425 from British Columbia, 1,285,000 from Puget Sound and 670,000 from Columbia river.

CANADA'S TRADE.

Figures Must Be Altered to Restore Value of Dollar.

Canadian trade statistics for the first half of the calendar year appear to indicate that while the adverse balance in trade with the United States is still unfortunately large conditions in this respect are as many not better than they were in the corresponding period of 1918. That is, Canada has been selling a greater value of goods to the United States, and importing a less value. There has been a marked falling off in exports as well as imports since March, however, the decline in imports being perhaps due to the high rate of exchange, which has led to the cancellation of many orders. The figures from Ottawa follow:—

January	$47,624,700	$59,431,482
February	41,185,814	52,256,909
March	70,570,784	56,357,492
April	66,934,076	45,071,213
May	78,264,622	58,082,824
June	70,597,935	61,256,510
	$375,179,041	$320,635,646

	EXPORTS. 1918.	1919.
January	$26,681,092	$28,859,256
February	23,786,703	23,257,038
March	37,111,492	27,086,020
April	36,458,118	23,625,004
May	36,784,057	35,179,067
June	39,834,229	29,383,659
	$189,665,691	$196,467,028

From these figures it will be seen that the adverse balance of trade against Canada the first half of 1918 was $185,513,350, while for the corresponding period of the year it was $124,168,618. The balance must be still further reduced if the value of the Canadian dollar is to be restored. The discouraging feature of this year's trade is the falling off in exports since March. Canada must produce more—not only enough to supply her own people, but to afford a larger surplus for sale abroad.

The Grizzly.

Bears, like pigeons and cats, have an instinct for "homing," it seems. In his book on "The Grizzly" E. A. Mills quotes this story about a pet bear: "He has been captured by a visiting ranchman. When the ranchman had been reassembled and reinforced it was decided that the bear was a bear of loss." He was led two hundred miles from the ranch and bidden to go his way. His return to the ranch preceded that of his keeper by eight hours. Mr. Mills gives the grizzly a good character, saying that he rarely attacks man. When brought to bay, however, he is a courageous fighter. This incident is cited in proof. A grizzly was chased by dogs and hunters to a bare canyon. The bear fought the dogs with coolness and resource while the hunters waited for a chance to shoot. When the dogs attacked him from behind or at the side, he brushed them off without turning his eyes from the front. At a favorable moment he charged, scattering the dogs and killing two of them, disabling three horses, breaking a man's arm, and making good his escape before the demoralized party could fire a shot!

Useless Information.

We always devour all the statistics we can find, says an exchange. They are wonderful. Listen:

If all the paragraph records made in one year were thrown from the top of Bunker Mountain they would break.

It would take four men six hours to lick all the postage stamps sold in Ottawa in one year, but we don't know just how long.

If all the telephone conversations from former drug stores in one year could be recorded on a phonograph, nobody could listen to them.

A mule can climb to the top of Mt. Popocatepetl in five days. He can descend in five seconds.

If all the doughnuts made by the Salvation Army could be linked together in one chain, they would reach from Paris to Somewhere in France.

Found Cache of Honey.

As Mervin and John Beck, of Meaford, Ont., who suffered the loss of their home and all their household effects by fire early in September, were walking along the bank of the river a few days later their attention was arrested by the buzzing of bees in the air over head. They at once went to the owner of the property and got his permission to cut down the tree, and, to their great surprise, they found that the hollow of the tree about 15 feet above the ground was thickly coated with combs containing mixed honey, which had been deposited there by a swarm of bees. By cutting out eight feet of the tree and smoking the bees, the young men were fortunate in securing 86 pounds of delicious comb honey. It is thought that the bees must have come from a distance, and that they had been in the tree for a long time, as the quantity of honey would seem to indicate.

Prosperous Fisheries.

An increase of over $800,000 in the total value of sea fish taken during the month of May this year, as compared with the same month a year ago, is shown by the monthly statement of sea fishing results, issued from the Naval Department. The total value of sea fish at the point of landing of both the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts during May this year was $3,950,000, while in May, 1919, it was $2,229,827.

Women's Iron ore.

It is now definitely announced that Dr. Allen, of the University of Alberta, one of the foremost scientists men of that institution, will make the investigation of the iron occurrences of the province of Alberta for the industrial branch of the Provincial Government, in place of Dr. Gwillim of Queen's University. Dr. Gwillim is leaving on an appointment for work with the British Columbia Government before receiving word of the assignment for the Alberta Government.

The Road to Health is Smooth and Clear If You Use Nujol

THE real Road to Health is an intestinal highway 26 feet long. When Constipation clogs this road, it's the same as when a landslide blocks a mountain pass. There is a difference, however, in Constipation not only blocks the way, but breeds poisons which menace health.

The obstruction in the mountain pass can be blown out with dynamite, and the obstruction in the intestines CAN be blown out with powerful drugs—but any drug powerful enough to do this is bound to harm the body.

There is only one way to relieve Constipation without in the least menacing or endangering the delicate mechanism of the human system.

That is the NUJOL way.

NUJOL is absolutely harmless. It is NOT a drug. Not a particle of it is assimilated by the body. All it does is to soften the mass impacted in the colon and lubricate the way to normal expulsion. NUJOL does this without causing any pain or discomfort. It does not in any way interfere with the digestive processes. It has no more effect on the delicate membranes and tissues than to smooth and soothe them.

It is a healing force which gently but effectively removes the intestinal obstruction, and performs this great service to health without in any way lessening Nature's provisions for protection.

Its sole province is to help Nature help herself.

Nearly everyone is subject to Constipation at some time or other. Nearly everyone has proved the worthlessness of ordinary "remedies" as to lasting results. Now try Nujol—and learn that there is a lasting relief for this curse.

For valuable health booklet—"Thirty Feet of Danger"—free, write Nujol Laboratories, Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) 50 B'way, N. Y.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER IV—Continued

"You are sure you have the address right?" she asked once. "Humphrey, fancy if you lost it, and could never find us again after we said "Goodbye" to-day! Wouldn't it be awful "

"Awful" he assented, smiling.

"Such a thing might happen, she declared. "You try and try your hardest to remember where we said you we lived, but you can't. It is terrible! You go mad——"

"Or to a post office," he said.

She laughed gaily.

"How could you write to me when you'd forgotten the address? You foolish fellow! There, I was brighter than you that time."

He felt it wouid be prolix to explain that he was thinking of a directory and not of stamps.

"Come after this, I must really hear if you've learnt your lesson. What's it? Quick!"

"You live in one of the seven—seven thousand three hundred and forty-nine houses in the suburbs that are called The Hawthorns," he said. "You would have called it The Cedars, only that name was appropriated by the house next door. I take the train to Streath am Hill—I must be very particular to say "Hill" or cat_trophes will happen To begin with, I shall lose an hour of your society——"

"And dinner—dinner will certainly be over."

"Dinner will certainly be over. When I come out, I turn to the right pass the estate agent's take the first to the left and recollect that I'm looking for a bow window and a white balcony, and a fence which makes it impossible to see them. Do I grasp it?"

"Not impossible. But—yes, I'll trust you."

He parted from the ladies at Victoria, and getting into a hansom, gave himself up to reflection. The rooms he shared with Turquand were in the convenient, if unfashionable, neighborhood of Soho, and an all-pervading odor of jam reminded him presently that he was nearing his destination. He was not sure of finding Turquand in at this hour. He opened the door with his latchkey, and, dragging his portmanteau into the passage, ran upstairs. The journalist, in his shirt sleeves, was reading an evening paper with his slippered feet crossed upon the window-sill.

"Hallo!" he said. "You've got back"

"Yes," said Humphrey. "How the jam smells!"

"It's raspberry to-day. I've decided the raspberry is the most penetrating. How are you?"

"Dry and hungry too. Is there anything to drink in the place?"

"There's a very fine brand of water on the landing and there's the remainder of a roll, extra see, in the cupboard I believe. I finished the whiskey last night. We can go and have some dinner at the Suisse. Madame is dorolee; she's asked after you most tenderly."

"Good old Madame! And her moustache?"

"More luxuriant."

There was a pause, in which Humphrey considered how best to impart his tidings. The other shifted his feet and contemplated the smoke-dried wall —the only view from the window attainable. Kent stared at him. It was displayed to him clearly for the first time that his marriage would mean severance from Turquand, and the Restaurant Suisse, and all that had been his life hitherto, and that Turquand might feel it more sorely than he expressed. He was sorry for Turquand He lounged over to the mantelpiece and dipped his hand in the familiar tobacco-jar, and filled a pipe before he spoke.

"Well," he said, with an elaborate effort to sound careless, "I suppose you'll hardly be astonished, old chap, —I am engaged."

CHAPTER V

Turquand did not answer immediately.

"No he rejoined at last; "I'm not astonished. Nothing could astonish me but good news. When is the event to take place?"

"That's not settled. Soon..... We shall always be pals, Tark?"

"I'll come and see you sometimes—oh yes. Father consented?"

"Things are quite smooth all round"

"H'mph!"

He looked at the wall hard and pulled his beard.

"Yot said it would happen, didn't you? I didn't see a glimmer of a possibility myself."

"Love's blind, you know."

"You said, too, it—er—it wouldn't be altogether a wise step. You'll change your mind about that one day, Turk."

"Hope so," said Turquand. "Can't to-night."

"You still believe I shall regret it?"

"What need is there to discuss it now?"

"Why shouldn't we?"

"Why should we? Why argue with a chap whether the ice will bear after he has made a hole in it?"

"We shan't be extravagant, and I shall work like blazes. I've a plot simmering already."

ELECTORS OF EAST HASTINGS:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having accepted the nomination of the United Farmers to contest East Hastings in their interest in the coming Provincial elections, I appeal for your support.

Agriculture as you are all aware is the great basic industry of Ontario. When the farmer fails to get the best out of the soil all other interests suffer. Our aim is not to destroy but to promote good government. Our motto is "A Square Deal for Agriculture." We desire to advise and assist the government of this province to work more intelligently and consistently to build up this greatest of Canadian industries.

Rural depopulation presents an alarming condition. We seek by the building up of the home and the farming community and a more adaptable system of education to check this movement and keep our young people on the farm.

Profiteering must be eliminated or both producer and consumer will suffer. The poor man pays more than he ought to do for his goods and the producer often has too small a margin of profit because of intervening toll-gatherers and parasites who render no essential service to the public.

Who knows better than the farmer what the agriculture interest requires? What better than the farmer can have correct conditions that directly pertain to his calling—conditions that all person minded men admit to be the cause of the present wide-spread discontent, conditions that we believe to be remediable.

Women and men electors, think this out for yourselves—East Hastings is a great agricultural constituency. The constituency has a long parliamentary history. But in that long history no actual farmer has represented you in the Ontario Legislature, if we except one short term.

Electors of East Hastings your support will be appreciated and if you favor me with a majority, as I feel confident you will do, I shall do my utmost to serve my constituents and my country.

Faithfully yours,
H. K. Denyes.

Letters to the Editor

"THE CHOIR INVISIBLE"

To the Editor of The Intelligencer,
Sir,—What I said in my letter of September 25th, regarding choirs doubtless was ambiguous. If the sub is worthy of your valuable space I shall now offer an explanation.

"Choirs should not be seen—hear only." This is the statement which Mr. Elsmore, in his courteous and excellent letter in your issue of the 6th could not understand. In looking at this statement in isolated condition, I take upon myself all blame for the false impression it created.

Just about the time this statement was made my spirit had taken its flight, and was again in that Catholic Cathedral in Ireland, rapturously listening to that ineffable choir that had awakened within me so great admiration and joyfulness that I became unconscious of being in a stone building, and exclaimed: "Hark the Herald Angels Sing."

I had seen and heard hundreds of choirs, but had never been carried away by any of them into celestial regions; here I became associated with spirits deemed divine, and in my haste (not anger) I wrote, "Choirs should not be seen, heard only." "Sweetest the strain when in the song, the singer has been lost." Sincerely and humbly I offer an apology to all choirs that are not invisible. Far, far be it from me the thought and word that might wound the feelings of any one. In the good old days a preacher attended to the praying and preaching and a precentor or leader of the musical part of the church service, attended to the singing, especially in the Presbyterian church. It was the privilege of the precentor to gather together the best singers and organize a singing class or choir. These trained singers occupied the front pews nearest the pulpit. For many years it has been considered the proper caper by officials of nearly all churches to have choirs staged and elevated to the spot-light in the rear of the pulpit and facing the other members of the congregation. Methinks the clashing or bombarding of soundwaves against aerial soundwaves creates discord. Sensitive, refined young ladies of gentle nature occupying the present perched and conspicuous position provided for them in some churches must be impressed with the thought that they are on exhibition and classed with common show-house performers, and consequently embarrassed and incapable or hindered in the giving of their best to the eager listeners.

"God sent His singers upon earth,
With songs of sadness and of mirth,
That they might teach the hearts of men,
And bring them back to Heaven again."

ROBERT BOGLE.

Dandruff Surely Destroys The Hair

Girls—If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will complete dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

CONSERVATION

is of more importance to the country today than ever.

Do Manufacturers Realize

the necessity of better Fire Protection? Do they realize

WHAT FIRE PREVENTION MEANS?

Fires during 1918 in Industrial Plants numbered only 4% or 5% of the total number for the year; but these 4% fires caused a loss of $7,365,223 or 49% of the total Fire Waste of the Province.

Cleanliness, Order and Forethought are important factors towards reducing this preventible waste. Manufacturers should provide better and more systematic Inspection and Watchman Service.

More efficient fire fighting equipment—Chemical Fire Extinguishers and Automatic Sprinklers. In 15,000 fires, tabulated by the N. F. P. A., Boston, where Automatic Sprinklers were installed 85% were put out by one Sprinkler Head.

THEFT OF A COAT

Mr. James Malins of 42 Great St., James Street, reported to the police that last night a party named Evans left his (Malins') house and at the same time a fur-lined coat was missing. The police recovered the coat at a second hand store and it is alleged that $2 was paid for it. It formed only $2 was paid for it. It was also ascertained that Evans, who it is alleged took the coat, left here at 12.30 last night for the east.

DIED IN TORONTO

Mr. George Twining of Toronto, a former well known resident of Belleville, passed away in Toronto on Friday last. Deceased was 73 years of age and was born at Cheltenham, England. For many years he resided in Belleville, but for the past 30 years had lived in Toronto. He was a grainer by trade, and a most capable workman. In this city he had many friends who will regret to learn of his demise. Mr. Twining was a member of the Anglican church and a staunch Conservative in politics. Two sons, Ernest and Allan of Toronto survive.

COUNTY DID ITS BIT

W. G. Wilson, secretary of the Lennox and Addington branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund states that from 1st March, 1919, to 30th June 1919, the branch remitted to head office of the fund $14,400 and received back for relief purposes $1,844.65, and in that period paid out latter amount to mothers, wives, and other dependant relatives of soldiers—in all 208 families. In addition there was paid out in said time on insurances of soldiers lives, $14,536.36. The old U. E. L. County has certainly done its "bit" in the war in money as well as in men.

A MASONIC EVENT

Mount Hiele chapter degree team of Napanee chapter of Royal Arch Masons on Tuesday night visited Moira Chapter in this city and exemplified the work of the H. M. M. degree in a manner that was interesting. At the meeting R. ex-Comp. J. J. Farley was welcomed as the newly appointed representative of the State of Mississippi. Col. Ponton, Grand First Principal, and R. H. Spencer of Trenton, 3rd Grand Principal, were received with grand honors. Re. Ex. Comp. Henry Smith of Toronto, Grand Scribe of the Grand Chapter of Canada, was present and gave an imp tive address on the symbolism and ritual of capitulary Masonry. At the conclusion of the lodge work a banquet was held at which a number of addresses were given by prominent members of the craft.

SOME POTATO

Dr. O. A. Marshall, who has just returned from a visit to his Saskatchewan farm, brought back with him a genuine curiosity in a potato of gigantic dimensions, measuring 24x12½ inches and weighing two and one half pounds. Thirty-six of these potatoes would crowd a regulation size bag. Dr. Marshall says there are more of these potatoes where this one came from. If the rest of his farm is in proportion to the potatoes raised there he would want an aeroplane to inspect it all in one trip.

Sporting News

TOMORROW'S GAME.

Everything is in readiness for the great baseball game to be played here tomorrow between the C. P. R. team of this city and the Harvesters of Hamilton. The diamond has been put in excellent shape and a good game is anticipated. There is every prospect that a record crowd will be in attendance. If our boys are successful they will meet the winning team of the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association, which is indeed an honor. As tomorrow afternoon is a public half holiday an opportunity will be given to many to witness the game. We are informed that the line-up of the two teams will be virtually the same as at Hamilton on Saturday last. The Hamilton Spectator, in referring to the game, says:

Big Day for Belleville.

Belleville is planning on a big day when the Harvesters play the final game for the Ontario amateur baseball championship there on Friday. The mayor has declared a half-holiday and even Corby's distillery will close down for the day. The band will turn out and everybody will be on hand to witness the city's initial world's series. Belleville is taking baseball seriously now, and if Goyer and company land the honors, the city will be feted in and presented to them.

THE BOXING CONTEST

Belleville has the sporting fever, and with a winning baseball team, boxing contests, prospects of a recreation park and athletic field, etc., the city has awakened from its lethargy and all branches of athletics are bound to be benefited. Mr. A. Drummond, the returned soldier who promoted the very interesting tournament in Belleville recently, has invited the Belleville champion baseball team to be his guests at the boxing tournament to be staged at the City Hall Friday evening and the invitation has been accepted, so the boys will be at the ringside with the rest of the fans after their strenuous contest with Hamilton on the afternoon of the afternoon. The first bout will begin in the City Hall, and Mr. Drummond has arranged a very interesting program of events. Principal interest will centre, of course, in the main contest between Jack Jarvis of Buffalo and Eddie Crompton of Toronto. Jarvis has been in strict training for the contest and will be in the pink of condition, while Crompton can always be depended upon to give a good account of himself. The program will also include a contest between 'Irish' Jordan of Peterboro, a returned soldier, who won the 125-lb. championship in France and Jimmy Barry of Belleville. This promises to be a fast bout with plenty of pep. The preliminaries will include a return match between Carson and Carnshaw, two local boys who showed considerable skill and cleverness at the last contest. Everything points to a large attendance and a very interesting evening.

No Conservative Opposes Proudfoot

SEAFORTH, Ont., Oct. 9.—At a large and representative meeting of Centre Huron Conservatives here it was decided not to place a candidate in the field against William Proudfoot, the late member and leader of the opposition. Delegates recognized the fact that there never was such a split in the Liberal ranks here, and if a Conservative were in the field his chances of success would be good, but they felt that some recognition was due Mr. Proudfoot in view of the way he joined hands with Sir William Hearst in the extension of the life of the legislature till after the war, and because he united greatly in the formation of Union government," as the wording of the resolution said.

Mr. Proudfoot declares that he will be in the field as an Independent, but has yet to be nominated. The Liberals have a man in the field, J. M. Govenlock. The U.F.O. man, James Livingston, is campaigning vigorously. There was not a dissenting voice at the convention in the matter of approving Mr. Proudfoot's stand.

Statistics on the six games is as follows:

Total attendance, 183,075; total receipts, $583,827.40; Player's share, $260,349.02. Clubs' and leagues' share $265,157.60; Commission's share, $58,-

CANADA'S WAR FINANCE.

Population Is Not Large But It Is Prosperous.

During the first year of the war, 1914-1915, Canada's total revenue was $123,072,481; for the fiscal year ended it was 205 million dollars, and from March 31, 1919, Canada had spent on war 1,543 million dollars, and at the time demobilization is ended she will have spent 1,500 million dollars on this account. During the war period she raised, through the usual channels of revenue, 1,103 million dollars, and in addition, the subscriptions to her War Loans totalled $1,630,671,550.

Possibly the greatest surprise to Canada's financial effort was the success of her War Loans. This applies particularly to the Victory Loans of 1917 and 1918, floated by popular campaign methods. Before the war Canada was a heavy borrower, getting in some years as much as 350 million dollars from abroad. Up to 1915 she had never placed among her people a Dominion loan for a greater amount than five million dollars. In 1917 and 1918 campaigns, however, the total subscriptions amounted to 1,100 million dollars. To the 1918 loan the subscriptions received about 985 per capita, which speaks well for the confidence whose people, before 1915, hardly thought of buying Dominion bonds.

In addition to raising these large revenues, and subscribing so liberally to national loans, the Dominion Government during the last three or four years has granted over 200 million dollars in credits to the various allied governments. Those to Great Britain alone total 900 million dollars, and in these credits are included advances to France, Italy and Russia. In this connection it should be noted that all loans or advances aggregating 200 million dollars made by Canadian banks to Great Britain. This liability will, to some extent, be continued by the Dominion Government which has need of it still. Already an advance of 25 million dollars has been made to Roumania, and others have been offered to Greece, Belgium and Great Britain.

An Unfortunate Name.

It is customary in China, when the number of children—daughters preferred—begins to exceed the family income, to name the latest comer "Enough." Acting on this supposition, the Lees, a native Christian family, named their seventh child for baptism, relates Wesley Stout in "What is her name?" inquired the missionary baptizing. "Enough!" announced both parents in fervent unison. "Will you have that?" the pastor frowned. "Think of a more fitting name?" But Mr. and Mrs. Lee were smitten with stage-fright and could think of nothing. The Bible woman sitting near whispered: "Call her Dorcas." So Dorcas she was hastily named. But fancy the dismay of Mr. and Mrs. Lee when they discovered that Dorcas, translated into the native dialect, is identical in sound with the Chinese words, "Many More."

CAVALRY MAN WINS V.C.

Lieut. Harvey Was First Canadian To Do So.

For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty. During an attack on his regiment on a village a party of the enemy ran forward to a wired trench just in front of the village, and opened rapid rifle and machine gun fire, first at a very close range, causing heavy casualties in the leading troop.

At the critical moment when the enemy showed no intention whatever of retiring, and fire was still intense, Lieut. Harvey, who was in command of the leading troop, ran forward well ahead of his men, and dashed at the trench, still fully manned, jumped the wire, shot the machine gunner, and captured his gun.

In the general retreat of the German in the spring of 1917 the Canadian cavalry brigade was used to harass them in their departure from the Somme area. The Germans were fighting a rear defence action. The new famous Hindenburg line was their objective and in order to give themselves time to establish positions and consolidate themselves therein they maintained a strong outpost action in the rear. Villages were fortified and many of the best troops were left for their defence. The enemy seemed sometimes to lose his usual strategical talents and to change his mind peevishly. Several times after abandoning positions he would re-attack, the fortunes of war going usually to the British who were following on the heels of the unwelcome visitor who was making haste to leave the territory which he had held for the last two years.

In March the brigade was ordered near Peronne, north of the Somme river. So rapid was the retreat that the infantry were put to it to keep up with the Germans as they left their trenches and strong points, destroying everything as they went. Peronne was laid waste. Civilians were turned out of their houses in villages and the houses blown up. And yet the retreat continued. Only the cavalry could overtake the enemy with speed enough to hurry him as he left. In this the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery did splendid work. When the cavalry had driven the Hun out of a position it handed it over to the infantry and continued the chase over hills and through woods, where frequently strong machine gun posts had to be dislodged.

March 27 saw the cavalry still in pursuit of the enemy. In the early part of the day several village and fortified woods were reclaimed from the Hun and a counter-attack driven off. Then a snowstorm stopped proceedings for several hours. It was 5.15 o'clock in the afternoon before the air was clear enough for the horsemen to start out again.

The daylight was failing when the Lord Strathcona Horse reached the top of the hill overlooking Gugencourt. They found themselves faced by strongly held machine gun posts, and wheeling they galloped around to the south-west corner of the town.

Lieut. Harvey was in command of the leading troop. Riding ahead of his men he was first to reach the outskirts of the town and found again that the Germans had established a machine gun in front of the place and protected it with wire entanglements. Springing from his saddle, he ran at the post, firing his revolver at the same time. He leapt over the wire, shot the gunner and jumped on the gun. When his men came up he was in possession of the post. The troop entered the town. For clearing the way for his men the troop leader was awarded the Victoria Cross.

Lieut. Harvey was the first Canadian cavalry man to win the Victoria Cross in this war. Besides this, the highest award a soldier can win, Lieut. Harvey wears two other decorations, the Military Cross and the French Croix de Guerre. The French decoration was conferred on him for being the first to enter the village of Pontain, March 28, 1918, where he effected a connection with the French cavalry. It was at this time that the French, mistaking Harvey and his men for German spies dressed in British uniforms, had them arrested and held for several hours, releasing them with many apologies on identification by other British officers.

The Military Cross was won a few days later when by sheer gallantry the Canadian cavalry stemmed the advance of the Germans on Amiens.

Lieut. Harvey was farming and ranching near Macleod, Alta., when war broke out. In the spring of 1918 he joined the 13th Canadian Mounted Rifles as a private, receiving his commission before going overseas. He was with his unit at the time of signing the armistice and just before going into Germany with the army of occupation went to England one day in a fog in an airplane to get the colors for his regiment, under which to march into the conquered country. The colors were presented by Lady Strathcona.

Frederic Maurice Watson Harvey was born in County Meath, Ireland,—Carolyn Cornell in the Toronto Star Weekly.

Bluejay Helps Sunday School.

The superintendent of the Sunday school at Plainfield, Kan., took charge of a sickly bluejay and nursed it to health, says the New York World. He named it and trained it to do tricks and it follows him around the home like a dog. The last two Sundays the bird has gone with him to Sunday school, where it has done all the stunts it has learned before the class. Whenever there are others near the bird keeps close to its master. There is so much interest in the bird among the Plainfield boys that Sunday school attendance is increasing.

"MOUNTAIN OF GOLD" A MYTH.

It Would Lessen the Value of Gold Standard.

The nearest approach, literally, to a "mountain of gold" is Mount Morgan, in Australia. And they are talking to-day there as they have for thirty years. The mountain proceeds have been $32,000,000. This so-called "mountain of gold" has yielded, on an average, half an ounce or less of gold to the ton.

This has led many persons to ask seriously, "What would happen if a mountain of pure gold were found?" For ages men have dreamed and writers have written yarns about "mountains of gold," but just what would happen if one were found is still a question with as many answers as a quartz nugget of the precious yellow stuff.

That it would lessen the value of the gold standard goes without saying, and yet some other new metal or substance would undoubtedly be found readily enough to take its place in coinage if this should happen. Concerning this interesting question, mining experts have talked most interestingly. Those of us, then, who are fanatic in the gold mining, and more especially, the big bonanzas of the world, need not strain our imaginations to conceive of an ore body or even a mass of gold big enough to upset international monetary standards. Many a prospector trying his bacon at a camp fire and stimulated by a reconstituted cup of coffee must have seen visions of a golden mountain or a stream of pure gold that ran around creation as if it would never stop. Every now and then we hear of fabulous mineral discoveries like that of Bitter Creek, in June, 1910, when the irresponsible article in the Daily Scream has exhausted his adjectives describing each day's finding about a "mountain of gold."

When the stampede to the Australian diggings was at its height in 1852, the ignorant emigrants, having visions of finding the mountain, and not knowing that pervasive mineral, supposed it was "gold," and hence expected to gather the gold in nuts and pails. This fact is vouched for by F. J. Dunn, the Australian zeologist, who as a boy went to the diggings at that time.

And why not? We may laugh at simplicity from the farm, and we may sneer (and we do) at the persistent dreamer in the street-corner, give adequate reasons for the improbability of such a golden discovery.

For instance, what is the biggest mass of native copper ever found? Of course, it was in the Lake Superior region. It was in 1857, on Isle Ontonagon district. At a shallow depth there was discovered a mass of copper 46 feet long, with a maximum thickness of 4½ feet. The mean width was 12½ feet, and the mean thickness four feet. The total weight actually recovered was 420 tons.

No such masses of gold as this, of course, have ever come to light. Yet gold in great quantities has been won in a brief period. California river beds yielded $81,294,200 in 1851 alone, and the shallow diggings of Victoria gave $63,000,000 in 1853. The Klondyke record of one miner cleaned up $46,000 in eight hours and took out $750,000 from a claim about 80 x 50 feet.

Most of this gold was in coarse pellets and nodules, and yet the largest nugget ever found was picked up near Dunolly, Victoria, Australia, in 1869, and weighed 190 pounds. Another weighing 184 pounds and including some quartz brought in nearly $47,000. There have been others nearly as big, yet this is very far from masses such as the huge copper masses above described, and farther still from a "quarry" or "mountain" of gold. The nearest approach to this as yet imaginary possibility is to be found in Mount Morgan, in Queensland, Australia, a hill about 300 feet high, the crest of which was a "ccean" containing several ounces of gold per ton.

This has been excavated in successful benches, so that it approximates to the "quarries" of gold mentioned by certain writers. But the working of such ore below the crest of the hill. However, they have yielded a quantity of gold so great as to render Mount Morgan famous in the history of mining. Since its discovery, in 1886, according to the latest figures available, this ore deposit has yielded in excess of 1,650,000 ounces of gold worth $73,000,000, besides 52,000 tons of copper. The company owning the mine has distributed more than $37,500,000.

On Ice Floe Five Months.

Scientific data of considerable value were obtained by a party of fifteen men who returned to civilization recently after spending five months on a drifting ice floe in the Arctic Ocean, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. The scientists was given to the study of currents in Behring Sea. That part of the ocean which stretches north of Alaska and Canada as far as Banks Land, and numerous soundings were made in the cold waters. The floe on which the strange voyage was made was seven miles wide and fifteen miles long. Many seals, polar bears, ducks and land birds made their homes on the floating block of ice.

St. Catharines' Population.

The population of St. Catharines, Ont., is nineteen thousand, one hundred and ninety-four, an increase of six over last year. The large number of foreigners who went back to their native land after the war, is given as the reason, for the small increase, the smallest on record. The assessment of the city is sixteen million and forty-three thousand, an increase of a little over half a million. Income tax assessments increased two hundred and ninety thousand, [illegible]

PRINCE ELECTED CHIEF

It was at Banff that the Prince of Wales was made Chief Morning Star, with the right to wear the shining buckskin robe with a blue belt of beads and a head dress of bright and nodding feathers of a chief of the Stoney Tribe.

When the Prince stepped off the train amid the high peaks and exquisite spruce clad valleys of Banff, he found himself among Indian braves clad in all the vivid colors of the spectrum, feathered and beaded from crest to moccasins and mounted on their small, swift horses.

At each branch road, a fresh body of Indians, a fresh splash of vermilion and yellow and cherry and blue and green moved out from amid trees and fell in behind the escort, so that as it went the cavalcade became a moving train of shifting color.

The procession went until it reached a big open race course where Indian tepees, red starred on white, and gay with flags, were set and where the ceremony was to be held. As the Prince came on to the grounds, braves whirled their ponies about and raced through veils of dust in a ride of welcome, while the low throbbing of tom-toms joined itself to the high, thin whoop of the Indian welcome.

On a dais and in the centre of a circle of braves, some with skins painted crome yellow so that they looked like masks of death; some daubed with red, some barred with blue, some with yellow paint on their hair, the Prince received the welcome of Young Thunder, the chief. He was a big roughly carved Indian clad in white, hairy chaps and cowboy shirt, and as he read his address in singsong Cree, his body was carved back as though he still sat on a pulling horse.

He read first in his olden tongue and then in English of the honor the Prince was paying to them, and of their enduring loyalty to him and to his father, and he asked the Prince "to accept from us this Indian suit, the best we have, emblematic of the clothes we wore in happy days."

"We beg you to allow us to elect you as our chief and to give you the name of Chief Morning Star," he said. Then he handed the Prince a magnificent headdress of feathers and beads and fine buck skin robes. The Prince, putting on the head-dress, spoke to the circle of braves of the honor he felt they had done him.

When he finished tom-toms were loosed again, and the high, thin [illegible] up from the rear which almost at once began to circle around in a [illegible]

THE CANADIAN BANKS

RAPID GROWTH OF SO-CALLED "MONEY TRUST."

Since the End of the War 731 New Branches Have Been Opened. In Defence of the Banks of the Dominion and Returns Show a Great Increase in the Savings of the People of this Country.

SINCE Sir Thomas White, then Minister of Finance, lifted the ban on the opening of new branches shortly after the signing of the armistice, there has been an unprecedented scramble on the part of all Canadian banks to open up new offices all over Canada. From the signing of the armistice to the end of July, 731 new branches were opened in Canada, and as only 20 were closed, there is a net gain of 711, more than the total number of branches of all Canadian banks eighteen years ago, and an average of two a day.

Now there are over five thousand branches of Canadian banks in Canada, or one for every 2,500 people. In the United States with its national banking system, there is one bank for every 3,400 people, and in England, there is only one branch for every 4,800 people.

What is the meaning of this great expansion in the number of Canadian banks? Some experts deplore it; they say that it is a "mushroom" growth; that Canada has not enough business to keep 5,000 bank branches busy. Yet an analysis of the clearing house reports and monthly bank statements does not tend to this view. Clearings have increased an average of 25 per cent. all over Canada in comparison with last year's figures. In some cities, Windsor, for instance, they have gone up as much as 100 per cent. Bank deposits have shown the most remarkable increase. The lessons of thrift, inculcated in the people of Canada by the war and the Victory Loan campaigns, are not the kind that will easily be forgotten.

There are others who say that the vast numbers of new branches being opened in the smaller centres of Canada will not add much to the prosperity of the towns and villages they are located in.

They claim that the banks open these branches merely to increase their deposits, and instead of loaning back that money to the local industries, they collect large interest in the important cities, such as Toronto and Montreal, and loan the money to large corporations. These people who make this complaint allege that there is a "money trust" in Canada and they see no good in the amalgamation of Canadian banks. It is a question that is agitating England to some extent now, but it is probable that competition between Canadian banks has prevented the formation of "money trusts."

Another answer to the argument is seen in instructions issued by the head offices of two of the largest banks to their local managers, in which it is pointed out that branch managers must "know" their communities, that they must be "community builders" and do everything to boost local industry.

This summer several of the banks have held conventions of their various managers. Bankers from all parts of the country met and discussed better banking, local and national problems, etc. This bring together of men who have an intimate knowledge of the commercial and financial problems of every one of the great geographical divisions of Canada is bound to have a good effect in helping the East to know the West, Quebec to understand Ontario, and in lessening misunderstandings. In fact, one New York writer sees in this feature of Canada's banking system—each bank controlling branches in every province—the greatest asset for the future welfare of the country.

Canada's banks have good connections with the outer world. The Union Bank is in connection with the National Park Bank of New York, has recently established the Park-Union Foreign Banking Corporation with branches in Yokohama and Shanghai, to aid in the development of a larger Canadian trade with the Orient. The Bank of Montreal is also opening branches at Tokio and Kobe, which is hoping Japan's greatest industrial and shipping city. Other large branches of Canadian banks outside Canada are as follows: Newfoundland, 6; West Indies and Central America, 45; United States, 14; Cuba, 31; Great Britain, 5; France, 2; Japan, 1; Mexico and Spain, 1.

Ontario	1,388
Quebec	1,011
Saskatchewan	561
Manitoba	278
British Columbia	193
Nova Scotia	143
New Brunswick	103
Yukon	3
Total	4,056

Adding to this total the 143 branches located outside the Dominion of Canada, the banks have a total of 4,199 branches. How does this compare with the total of about 100 we had at the time of Confederation, or the total of about 500 branches we had twenty years ago?

Honors.

Cardinal Mercier is now an honorary citizen of New York and the same day that he was so honored the Prince of Wales became the big little chief of a tribe of Canadian Indians. North American hospitality is nothing if not varied.

B. C. Pulp Wood.

A Vancouver pulp and paper company, assisted at Port Alice on the west coast of Vancouver Island, is nearing completion, and will shortly be ready to manufacture 70 tons of pulp daily. It is expected that over 500 men will be required for the various operations, including logging and saw-milling.

A RECORD OF SERVICE.

Splendid Work Done by Col. Ross in the War.

Brig.-Gen. Arthur B. Ross, of Kingston, is a soldier and a citizen of national reputation. By his military services and self-sacrificing devotion to his fellows he has earned and received the enthusiastic admiration of practically every Canadian soldier who went overseas. Dr. Ross is a native of Ontario, now in his 45th year. During the South African war, while still a young man, he enlisted and fought as a private, and later on gave notable service as an officer. Dr. Ross was the representative of Kingston in the Ontario Legislature when the great war broke out. Recognized as a man clear and strong in his convictions by all his associates, and yet a moderate thinker, he was peculiarly keener for action than for debate. His contributions to the deliberations of the House were characterized by sound, practical common sense, by independence of judgment and of accurate knowledge of the subject in hand. From the day the war was declared Dr. Ross realized, as few seemed to do, the importance of medical and surgical attention in the men at the front. Therefore he offered himself to his country, and he was privileged to render such service as seldom falls to the lot of any man.

A few days ago, speaking in Toronto, Sir Arthur Currie declared:—"It will take 10 or 12 Canadians that the wastage in the Canadian Corps was lower than in any other unit of the British army." To those who know the man and who have observed his career this was SO SURprise. Day in and day out, year after year, for almost the best part of four years, he was

Justice Harsh to Brave Youth

A BRIEF despatch appeared in Canadian papers a few days ago stating that Clinton Taylor, a young Toronto boy who had been sentenced to imprisonment for life by a military court-martial, had been pardoned; and would return immediately from overseas. This case is one of the most interesting incidents of the latter days of the war, and the story of Clinton Taylor is worth repeating for the benefit of his fellow-countrymen.

Clinton M. Taylor enlisted for overseas service on August 14, 1914, when only seventeen years of age, though he declared his age to the military authorities to be 19 years. He left Canada for France in February, 1915, and all through the war and up to the time of the armistice served faithfully in the Canadian Engineers. Early in September, 1918, while with the 5th Field Company, Canadian Engineers, he won the military medal for devotion to duty while in the line. During his whole service up to the time of the incidents he had a clean conduct sheet, except for one paltry offence, for which he was sentenced to fourteen days' field punishment, No. 1. In connection with this offence he was defended by his company commander, and a member of his battalion, Lieut. Robinson, has written regarding the case as follows: "He had to undergo fourteen days field punishment, No. 1, most unjustly, in France."

From the files of the Department of Militia you will be able to learn that during the month following the signing of the armistice there was very grave dissatisfaction among the whole Third Canadian Division on account of the poor rations, and also on account of the men having to carry their full packs during the march into Germany. The men of the 9th Canadian Company of Engineers, among others, refused to carry their packs. We quote herewith from the letter of Sapper Taylor to his mother dealing with this incident:—

"On the 14th of December, 1918, my division were marching on the road to Germany, and when we got just beyond Brussels there was a mutiny throughout the entire division. Divisional headquarters asked for delegates to come and they would talk to them. Eight of us went, picked by the men to represent them. I myself representing a brigade of engineers. The complaints of the men were that the food was bad, and that they were not going to carry their packs any longer. Well, mother, through us eight being straight to the thousands that we represented, they turned the division around to come home to Canada, but on the first day of march they arrested the eight of us as ring-leaders of a mutiny. The seven of the eight they gave five years' and to me two years' hard labor."

This story has been confirmed in practically every detail by Pte. Noel Robinson and Lieut. Hanes, of Vancouver, both of whom were in the same battalion at the time of the mutiny.

Sapper Taylor was sentenced on January 28, by F.G.C.M., to two years' hard labor on the following charges: (1) Joining in a mutiny, and (2) being present and not doing his utmost to suppress a mutiny.

He was once again defended by his own company commander, and in passing the sentence of two years, the court recommended him to mercy. He was confined in No. 7 Military Prison, France. While serving this term his sentence was increased from two years' hard labor to life imprisonment, but on April 3, 1919, he made his escape.

From a letter written from the Minister's office, Department of Militia, Ottawa, on September 23, to Mrs. Jean A. Taylor, Toronto, we quote as follows:

"You are in error in supposing that the sentence of life imprisonment imposed on Sapper Taylor was imposed by reason of his escape. Sapper Taylor escaped on April 3. The sentence was imposed upon him on March 24, ten days previously. From information received from the overseas authorities it is believed that the increased sentence was awarded on account of the part he played in a mutiny which occurred at the Imperial Prison, Calais."

Sapper Taylor retained his freedom until the early part of July, when, on his father's advice, he gave himself up. His father advised him to do so, because of a letter he received from Lieut. Hooker, of, on June 25, as follows:

"I have a letter to-day from Gen. Turner from Argyle House, London, England, in which he informs me that your son, Clinton, from No. 7 Military Prison, and that it is impossible to reconsider the case while he is still at large. He promised that if he should be apprehended the case will be inquired into fully. The general informs us that it is unfortunate that he escaped because, his offence being of a purely military character, he would have been released within a comparatively short time but he is not absolved himself."

It was on account of the generous tone of Gen. Turner's letter, and also because he was in entire ignorance of the real circumstances of his imprisonment, that Mr. Taylor advised his son to give himself up to the authorities. It will be noted that Gen. Turner, though aware of Taylor's escape from prison, seemed ignorant of the lesser of his sentence to life imprisonment, though the latter took place ten days before the escape.

The Real Issue of the Referendum Oct. 20th

EVERY effort is being made by certain interests to confuse and mislead you into thinking that you must either vote for the retention of The Ontario Temperance Act in its present form—or see the old license system revived with all its abuses and evils.

Let it be clearly understood here and now—No one wants the whiskey bar back and the general sale of liquor—the Government does not want it, the Citizens' Liberty League does not want it—even the Brewers and Distillers are opposed to it. There is no sentiment in this Province supporting a return to the old license system and the sale of whiskey over the bar. The Citizens' Liberty League does not and will not support such a course.

But—the Liberty League conscientiously believes that anyone who makes a careful study of Ontario's vexed temperance problem will agree that The Ontario Temperance Act, as it now stands, is too drastic in its prohibitory measures. Ninety per cent. of Ontario's labor unions have asked for a more palatable beer—the Beer of the Ballot—a little stronger than the beer sold under The Ontario Temperance Act, yet absolutely non-intoxicating. The same request has been made by a large number of the returned soldier organizations and citizens generally.

Vote "Yes" on Questions 2 and 3—Assure These Men the Beer of the Ballot.

These men are neither drunkards nor children. They are the same men who form the backbone of Ontario's industrial life—they are the same men who fought Germany to a standstill and brought Canada to the forefront among the nations.

In voting "Yes" to all four questions, you will not be voting for a return to the whiskey bar, but you will be voting for the sane, moderate compromise that the labor and soldier organizations are asking for—the sale of light beer and wine generally and the sale of pure, spirituous liquor only through Government agencies.

Which are you for—Intolerance or Compromise? Vote "Yes" to all Four Questions.

Mark your ballot with an X. Any other marking will spoil it. Remember, also—every voter must vote on every question or his ballot will be spoiled.

Money from Canteens.

Canada will benefit by a substantial sum from the proceeds of the expeditionary force canteens. There were canteens with which the Y.M.C.A. and other organizations supplied all the British troops in France with extra morning supplies, liquors, cigarettes, and various other articles. Their surplus proceeds have been turned into a fund, of which Gen. Julian Byng is director and which will be used for ex-service men of the Imperial army, and amounts to over $20,000,000. An allotment, however, is to be made to the troops of the various overseas dominions, according to proportional strength. This money will be paid to the Canadian militia authorities, and will probably amount to between two and two and a half million dollars.

This decision has been made known by Gen. Byng in reply to the request of the British branch of the C.W.V.A. for assistance from the general canteens fund for a club-house for demobilised Canadian soldiers in Britain. Gen. Byng, who was former commander of the Canadians, explained the arrangements and wished the war veterans' scheme every success.

A Hiver Man to Be Honored.

The Minister of the Interior of Belgium declared in the Chamber of Deputies recently that in concert with the British authorities, it has been judged desirable to keep the Cloth Market, Cathedral, and adjacent house at Ypres in their present state. The Government had agreed to the request of Canada that the emplacement whereon Gen. Mercer fell should be allotted. It would be with a view to the erection of a museum on the spot. The ground would be expropriated, failing a friendly ar-

Gen. V. C. After Five Years.

The gallant behaviour which cost the late Lieut. William Archer Merrick his life in the battle of Somme ago has just been rewarded with the Victoria Cross. Lieut. Merrick was a young officer of the regular Indian army, 57th Scinde Rifles, and was formerly commanded by his father, and was a nephew of Edward Hay, former general manager of the Imperial Bank of Canada. The young soldier displayed great bravery at Givenchy on the night of December 19, 1914, leading a party against a German trench, and afterwards, though severely wounded, walking up and down encouraging his men to hold out against the overwhelming masses of the enemy. The morsh of the field grey hordes later swept over little cupost of the "Old Contemptibles," and most of those not among the slain were taken prisoners. Consequently it was only lately that the story of Lieut. Bruce's gallantry became known.

The "Pretended" Bank.

In 1819 the people of the town of York (now Toronto) asked for the incorporation of the Upper Canada Banking Company, which was granted, but reserved for royal assent, which, however, was not proclaimed until April 5, 1821. But previous to that date a private bank was established in Kingston under the name of the Kingston bank for this purpose, been called the "pretended" bank of Upper Canada. The charter of Bank of Upper Canada failed in 1866.

Over two thousand years ago the ancient Gauls made their soap of beef suet and the fat of goats.

Fight to Finish With Miners.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—The miners, apparently going to be a fight to a finish in the struggle for the $20,000 Yorkshire miners. The Coal Controller has told the men leaders it was impossible to concede their demands. No further conferences with a view of arriving at a settlement have been arranged. It is believed the strikers' funds will last only another fortnight. Already a quarter of a million pounds sterling have been spent in strike pay.

Afghan Amir Loses Subsidy.

SIMLA, India, Aug. 12.—The Amir of Afghanistan, under the peace treaty signed with Great Britain last week, not only loses the annual subsidy of $600,000 but must then find $5,000,000 in subsidy which it appears he had on deposit with the Government of India. Confiscation of these arrears is a hard blow for Habibullah.

Prime Minister to Meet Prince.

OTTAWA, Aug. 12.—Sir Robert Borden will leave Ottawa in the next few days for St. John, N.B., to meet the Prince of Wales, who arrives there on August 15.

Austria to Sign Treaty.

VIENNA, Sept. 12.—The National Assembly, by a vote of 97 to 23, Sunday decided to sign the peace treaty. The Assembly, however, protested against "the violation of Austria's right of free disposal of herself."

The Austrian delegation at St. Germain has informed the French Peace Mission that Dr. Karl Renner, head of the Austrian delegation, has been charged with signing the documents. Dr. Renner is now on his way to Paris. His signature will be affixed to the treaty at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Maple Products.

Reports from various maple districts in Eastern Canada show that there will be products this year well beat all records. The makers of maple sugar and syrup in Canada exceed 45,000. About 850,000 acres of land are being used over in their natural wooded state, of which two-thirds are situate in the Province of Quebec. The Eastern Townships of Quebec are the centre of the world's supply of maple products. Maple syrup is rapidly becoming known in Great Britain as a table delicacy, while maple sugar is finding favor as a sweetmeat.

Land to Soldiers.

The latest figures given out by the Soldier Settlement Board show that up till the 24th of July the board had approved 6,420 loans, aggregating $21,311,428.

The establishment of the agricultural training branch of the board indicates that 25,722 applications had been received, of which 19,558 had been approved.

The greatest activity, of course, is in the four western provinces. Alberta reports 8,111 applications; Saskatchewan, 5,661; British Columbia, 4,417; Manitoba, 1,553.

Will Mark Battlefields.

The commemoration of Canadian battlefields, now occupying the attention of the Dominion Government, Hon. Dr. Beland has made it clear of what was to short a time ago known as sentiment, and the visit was mainly in connection with this object. It has been proposed to erect eight memorials commemorating probably the Canadian battlefields at St. Julien, Courcelette, Vimy Ridge, St. Eloi, Passchendaele, Arleux and Hill 70. It is understood the Government has already selected a site for the Ypres memorial.

LET THERE BE HARMONY IN THINGS ESSENTIAL—LIBERTY IN THINGS NOT ESSENTIAL—CHARITY IN ALL.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, OCTOBER, 10, 1919.

Hear Sir William Hearst at the Armouries Saturday Evening

EVERYBODY WELCOME

Sir William Hearst Is Sure To Win The Election

SUCH IS THE OPINION OF MEMBERS OF DOMINION PARLIAMENT AFTER VISITING THEIR CONSTITUENCIES—DEWART LOSING GROUND DAILY—SWING OF VICTORY FOR HEARST CANDIDATES.

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—Government members of the Commons who have spent the week in their constituencies in Ontario have returned to Ottawa in an optimistic spirit regarding the result of the Ontario provincial election on October 20. Before and after the writs were issued many Conservative federal members took a gloomy view of the prospects of the Hearst Government. Now they claim that with the collapse of the Liberal campaign, the swing of the electorate is to Sir William Hearst and his return is absolutely certain.

When the Dominion Government made Canada bone-dry it was in Ontario, the most resentment was felt and it was directed against the Ontario Premier, not against those responsible for the legislation that prevented the importation of liquor for private use. It certainly looked for a time as if the Hearst Government was doomed Then a life line was thrown to him by the selection of H. H. Dewart as Liberal leader. Since then the Hearst Government has been steadily growing in strength and dropping unpopular candidates in several constituencies. There is toward the close of the campaign a rally to his support hoped for but not expected. The Government has no scandals or mal-administration to defend.

The issue is, who would best enforce the provincial prohibition measures their author or H. H. Dewart who has always opposed them? In fifteen constituencies former Government members won't seek re-election. They have invariably been replaced by those more qualified to cope with the united farmer movement. H. H. Dewart's campaign has practically collapsed. The powerful Liberal press has deserted him. The Toronto Star is supporting Sir William Hearst and the Toronto Globe is admitting a Conservative victory. Mr. Dewart is not receiving the support of prominent Liberal Unionists and his party will occupy third place in the next Assembly. Some prognosticate but twenty supporters; others fifteen, while the majority of his opponents claim he will suffer a personal defeat in Southwest Toronto, where he won three years ago through the dissatisfaction of the Conservatives with the Hearst temperance legislation.

NEW ELEMENT IN FIGHT

The new element in the fight and what lends an uncertainty to the contest is the United Farmer party. They have 65 candidates in the field and from 20 to 30 constituencies are conceded to them. The farmers lack leadership, and as the campaign progresses there is evidence of the usual jealousies among this class. Their appeal to the electorate is confined to one class. Already there is disintegration in their ranks, and it is predicted that their permanency will be no more lasting than was the patron of industry movement. As the campaign grows in intensity, farmers are returning to the fold of political affiliations, fearful that their desertion of their former political friends may benefit former political opponents. The farmers' movement in Ontario will not outline the next Legislature without there is more intelligent leadership and a broader policy.

It is now conceded that Sir William Hearst will have a majority over both parties. The United Farmers will carry more constituencies than the Dewart Liberals. Some predict 70 support ers for Hearst, 25 United Farmers and 15 Dewart Liberals. Some predict 70 supporters for Hearst, 25 United Farmers, and 15 Dewart Liberals. No one predicts Hearst's defeat by the Opposition or a combination of both.

Won Stolen Money In a Poker Game

TORONTO, Oct. 10.—Judge Coatsworth in the Criminal Sessions convicted Benjamin Evensky of having received from A. Grey, former bookkeeper at the Walker House and now in the penitentiary, $6,000, which he knew the latter had stolen from the hotel. Sentence was deferred until November 10, to give T. C. Robinette, K.C., an opportunity to prepare for a stated case. Evensky's case was heard some time ago when Judge Coatsworth reserved his judgment until he reached a decision as to whether money paid over during a poker game could be regarded as having been "received" under the Criminal Code.

A PLATFORM OF PROGRESS

The policies upon which Sir William Hearst will ask the people of Ontario to pass judgment are set out under the following headings:

(1) The greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every shape and form.
(2) The faithful enforcement of the people's verdict on the liquor question;
(3) Vigorous support of Hydro-Electric development and cheap light and power for our farmers;
(4) Conversion of certain railway lines into Hydro-Electric lines;
(5) Good roads reaching every part of Ontario;
(6) A pension fund for mothers;
(7) Direct representation of Labor in the Cabinet;
(8) Establishment of a minimum wage;
(9) Unification of the labor laws of Canada on a just and equitable basis;
(10) Such further labor legislation within Provincial jurisdiction as ma yarise out of the findings of the National Industrial Conference and the International Labor Conference;
(11) Housing accommodation for industrial workers.
(12) Special consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation;
(13) A new era for education, providing technical and agricultural instruction throughout the province;
(14) Improvement of transportation facilities in Northern Ontario;
(15) Conservation of our timber resources and encouragement to mining;
(16) Measures to reduce the high cost of living;
(17) Protection of the public health, generous assistance to hospitals and charities, and special care of mental defectives.

RUSH OF PROSPECTORS.

Cobalt, Oct. 10.—Some exceedingly rich specimens of ore brought out from Skead Township, and taken from claims owned by Haileybury men, have started a rush of prospectors to that district. The territory is not a new one, as a number of important finds have been made in the township in recent years. The result is that the territory has been kept pretty well stoked up. These claims are now the centre of interest. The point of interest at present is about eleven miles from Boston Creek.

DEWART'S BRANDY CHERRIES CHARGE IS EXPLODED

Wine For Churches Legal

CHAIRMAN FLAVELLE OF LICENSE BOARD TAKES ALL RESPONSIBILITY—APPLICATION MADE BY JEWISH COMMUNITY IN REGULAR WAY TO BOARD FOR PERMISSION TO USE WINE IN RELIGIOUS SERVICES—STRICTLY ACCORDING TO ONTARIO TEMPERANCE ACT—IF CONFIDENCE OF BOARD HAS BEEN VIOLATED, PROSECUTION WILL FOLLOW.

Hartley Dewart, the "so-called" Liberal leader in Ontario, made a theatrical charge at a Toronto meeting that large quantities of liquor, cherry brandy or brandy cherries, no less, had been distributed in the Jewish community in Toronto, contrary to law, and insinuated that the liquor was being used to influence votes for the Government. Mr. J. D. Flavelle, Chairman of the Board of License Commissioners, explodes Dewart's cherry brandy charge in the following frank manner, and another of Dewart's hysterical pipe-dreams goes a-glimmering:

In view of the allegations and charges made by Mr. Hartley Dewart at a meeting in Toronto regarding the sale of wine to members of the Jewish community for common purposes I have to say that by the provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act the Board of License Commissioners, of which I am chairman, are authorized to appoint such persons as may appear desirable for the purpose of importing into this province under the provisions of any statute of Canada or any order-in-council passed thereunder, wine for use in divine service. On the 30th of September at the regular meeting of the Board, the Chief Rabbi of the Jewish community of Toronto waited upon the Board, and after hearing his application the following resolution was passed:

COPY OF RESOLUTION

Passed by the Board of License Commissioners for Ontario on the 30th Day of September, 1919.

Whereas, representations have been made to the Board of License Commissioners by the Chief Rabbi of the Jewish religion in Toronto that it is necessary that suitable wine should be provided for the use of members of the Jewish community in Toronto during the Feast of the Tabernacles for the year 1919, under the direction of the Rabbi of each congregation, and an application has been made to the Board for authority to import such wine as may be necessary for that purpose during the said feast, being a religious observance extending from Tuesday, the 7th day of October, until noon of Thursday, the 16th day of October, 1919, and it appearing desirable that such application be granted, therefore,

Resolved, that Barnet Stone, residing at 633 Euclid Avenue in the city of Toronto, be appointed a special vendor under the provisions of Section 54, of the Ontario Temperance Act for the period aforesaid, it being understood that the said wine shall'be obtained through the Government dispensary at Toronto by the said vendor, who shall distribute the same under the directions of each such congregation as aforesaid.

(Signed) J. D. FLAVELLE, Chairman.

FOR FEAST OF THE TABERNACLES.

It was represented to the Board by the Rabbi that the wine referred to was for use by the Jewish community in religious observances for the purpose of celebrating the "Feast of the Tabernacles," as required by the Hebrew ritual, that the festival lasts for eight days, commencing on Tuesday, October 7th, and ending on Thursday, October 16th. The Rabbi recommended Mr. Stone, who is a member of the Jewish community, for the appointment in question, and vouched for his reliability, and thereupon the appointment was made.

If any irregularity such as charged by Mr. Dewart has taken place there is nothing to stop whoever is guilty thereof from being dealt with pursuant to the act, and until evidence is forthcoming proving that the act has been contravened the Board feels justified in assuming that the authorities of the Jewish church have acted in perfect good faith.

Whatever responsibility attaches to the action of the Board is assumed in full by the Board. Neither the Prime Minister nor any member of the Government or the Legislature have been consulted or, as far as the Board is aware, had the slightest knowledge of the Rabbi's application, which was dealt with the same as all other matters of business coming before the Board.

CHURCH WINE PERMISSABLE.

It will be noticed that the law is applicable to the churches of the Christian community as well as to the Jews, and I presume that not even Mr. Dewart would contend that wine for communion purposes should not be available. All proper precautions have been taken by the Board in connection with this application, and if there has been any irregularity or impropriety it will be dealt with according to law, irrespective of who the guilty parties may be.

Lucas Shakes Off Mckenzie Charge

No Responsibility on His Department in Regard to Bad Beans for Soldiers.

TORONTO, Oct. 10.—Hon. C. B. Lucas, the Ontario Attorney-General, when interviewed regarding the charges of Mr. D. D. McKenzie in the Dominion House that canned pork purchased on an inferior quality were supplied to the overseas troops by the Dominion Canners, said:

"I have read the editorial in the Globe and the statements of Mr. McKenzie, the Liberal House leader at Ottawa as reported in The Globe of October 7th, where he states that a complaint was laid before the Attorney-General in reference to a contract between this British Government and the Dominion Canners for the supply of pork and beans.

"Mr. McKenzie's statement is not correct. No complaints were made to the Department of the Attorney-General. Counsel acting through Ottawa, on behalf of the British Government made an investigation of alleged circumstances in connection with the above contract and conferred with me as to the procedure that should be taken if, after investigation the counsel thought any proceedings should be taken. Every request or suggestion was agreed to on behalf of this department in the entire satisfaction of the counsel representing the British Government through Ottawa.

"The whole matter rested entirely with Ottawa and the British Government and this department was only concerned if it was deemed desirable, to take any action in our courts.

"All the facts so far as this department had any knowledge of them, and the machinery of our courts and our offices were placed unreservedly at the disposal of the counsel in charge of the enquiry. There is no justice whatever, for either the Liberal House Leader or the Toronto Globe to bring into any controversy over this contract the Department of the Attorney-General of Ontario. This is the season for "ironhacks" and we may expect the usual supply of them during the next few days."

Almost Made Long Non-Stop Flight

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

GREENPORT, Long Island, N.Y., Oct. 10.—The Handley-Page bombing machine Atlantic from Roosevelt, N.Y., which was compelled to land here last night with her eleven passengers eighty miles short of Montreal, will resume her flight to Mitchel field today, according to the present plans of Admiral Kerr, commander of the giant bomber.

French Soldiers Wounded By Germans

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer

PARIS, Oct. 10.—A French Major and three soldiers were wounded in a riot at Sarrebruck in occupied Germany. The riot is described as having grown out of labor demonstrations against the high cost of living by which Spartacans joined.

There are more thorns than roses on the path that leads to a woman's heart.

Canadian Railway Shopmen Negotiating With Ry. Board

MEN'S EXECUTIVE IN CONFERENCE WITH RAILWAY WAR BOARD AT MONTREAL ON PROPOSED SCHEDULE OF WAGES.

MONTREAL, Oct. 10.—The executive committee of the Canadian Railway Shopmen, Division No. 4, opened up negotiations with the Canadian Railway War Board in a second effort to bring about an amicable settlement of the dispute between the class of railway workers and the railways of Canada. All the members of the executive committee are not in the city but President Fallon and Secretary Dickie are on the ground and the work is being proceeded with. Other members of the executive will arrive in the city and join in the negotiations.

The session opened at 10 o'clock yesterday morning as is the rule the deliberations are being conducted in private. The negotiations will be conducted from the basis of the United States Railway Administration award which allows the men an increase of four cents an hour. The men in their original claim demanded an increase of approximately 17 cents an hour, owing to the fact that this tentative agreement has been arrived at in the United States, and the railway shopmen of North America work in concurrence in their various divisions, it is believed that the United States agreement will be finally adopted on Canadian railway lines, if it is only for a short period.

The United States railway shopmen it is reported in local circles, are not very well pleased with their award, but agreed to accept it for eighty days, during which time the administration would do what it could to reduce the cost of living. Whether this rider will be attached to the Canadian agreement or not is not forecasted. It is not likely that the negotiations in Montreal will occupy a very long time.

Apply For Arbitration

The Star learns today that the fair wage officer for this district has applied to the Department of Labor for an arbitration board to be appointed in the strikes of the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Company, under the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act. The officer went to Ottawa yesterday to make the application, but whether or not the company and the men will agree to this is doubtful, for both parties to the strike have already expressed themselves as agreeable to arbitration within their own bodies, but not to arbitration by a board upon which outsiders were given seats.

The strike committee of the Builders' Exchange meets this afternoon and at this meeting the offer of G. R. Brunel, registrar of the provincial council of conciliation for this district to form a conciliation board will be dealt with. The carpenters have already announced that they are willing to participate in such a board. It is believed that by the end of the week the strike will find adjustment through this channel.

A partial strike is in existence in the plants of O'Shea, Hobbs, Consolidated Plate Glass Company, and the Canada Metal Company. The men are not asking for an increase in wages. The companies affected claim that it will not be to their advantage to adopt that step, and it is believed that some arrangement whereby the men who are out will return to work will soon be reached.

No Nationalization of British Mines

Special Despatch to TheIntelligencer
Canadian Press, Limited

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Miners and other trades unionists in all parts of the country are very restless to-day following a definite declaration of Lloyd George to the committee yesterday that nationalization of mines would not be considered by the government, as it is thought there will be no strike, however, till after October 22, when the committee will report to the Trades Union Congress in Glasgow.

Cincinnati Won World's Series

Cincinnati—10 runs, 16 hits, 2 errors.
Chicago—5 runs, 10 hits, 1 error.

Such is the tabloid summary of the decisive game in the World's Baseball Series, played yesterday which gave the Cincinnati Reds the world's championship after the sensational series with the Chicago White Sox. Cincinnati won five games, Chicago three.

The game by innings was as follows:

Chicago . . . . . 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 4 0— 5

"The Miracleman

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 9.—Sitting on the world tonight are the Cincinnati Reds. The gallant Reds who dashed through the National League race are atop the baseball universe by virtue of their 10 to 5 defeat of the White Sox in the eighth and final game of the World Series this afternoon.

The Victory puts Manager Patrick J. Moran again in the miracle class. This New Englander, who was unceremoniously fired by the owners of the Philadelphia Nationals after winning the pennant in 1915, has been mounted again on the pedestal of fame, and he looks down from the utmost pinnacle as manager of the champions of the world.

To-day's triumph of the National Leaguers is the first since 1915, and the latter was the only occasion on which the older league has won the premier honors since 1909. On only two other occasions has it been necessary to play eight games, once in 1903 and again in 1912, but not until this season was the nine-game schedule adopted.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

WILL BE NO OPPOSITION TO DRAYTON IN KINGSTON

Kingston, Oct. 10.—It is stated in Labor circles that Wm. Patterson has decided not to be a candidate at Dominion elections in Kingston.

DEWART'S WAR RECORD

Major William McBrien, candidate in South-west Toronto for the Conservative party, in a recent address, appealed to the women to duplicate the party they had played in the war. His charge against his opponent, Mr. Hartley Dewart was, "why does he not answer the charge of Sir William Hearst explaining why he did not sit, when requested by the Premier, on the Resources Committee during the war, instead of going about the Province stirring up party strife."

ANOTHER DEWART BLUFF

The Hon. G. Howard Ferguson when interviewed was in a very cheerful humor about the 'so-called overwhelming' charge made against him by Hartley Dewart. "Hartley Dewart says if he just had a week in my department," said Mr. Ferguson "he would show up. Now, he's had just three years, with all the assistance of the Public Accounts Committee and the floor of the House to ask for an investigation, and to make charges, and he hasn't yet been able to put his finger on any impropriety in my department and never will, as long as I am Minister. This is just some more of Mr. Dewart's bluff."

THE REFERENDUM

Evidently there is still considerable confusion in people's minds as to the ways in which they may properly vote on the referendum and as to the possible result in the event of certain decisions by the majority. It is not difficult to get the matter straight and everyone should be clear about it before declining to vote.

The first thing to be remembered is that all four questions must be answer ed. If they are not the ballot will be thrown away. The Referendum Act has called for this in order that there may be as complete an expression of opinion on the various phases of the temperance question as possible.

The second important thing for the voters to understand is that each question on the ballot and the answers to each question are to be considered as distinct and independent of the others. Thus, the voter's preference on one question need not prejudice his preference to another.

The effect of each question standing by itself is mainly this: A person may be opposed to the continuance of the Ontario Temperance Act and desirous of voting for its repeal but at the same time be desirous of having it amended as provided for in the second, third or fourth questions should the people vote against its repeal. This person may express himself freely. He can vote for the repeal of the act and for one or more of the suggested amendments to the act, and his votes as to amendments will have no reflection on his vote on the first question. Or, if a voter doesn't like the act but prefers it in its present form to an amended form, he may vote for the repeal of the act and against amendments. The direction of his ballot will be a vote toward the repeal of the act, and if the majority were otherwise, also in the direction of keeping it as it is rather than having it changed.

Those who want the greatest possible measure of prohibition will vote in the negative on all four questions. The effect of their ballot being to support the retention of the O. T. A. in its present form. Those who want the greatest freedom possible—the repeal of the act if they can have it, and lacking that, modification of its restrictions—will of course vote four times in the affirmative. Those who are between these two classes, who want the temperance act retained but not in so prohibitive form can vote accordingly. They may or may not favor the sale of light beer either in government agencies or in standard hotels and will vote accordingly. Questions two and three, And they may or may not favor the sale of spirituous and regular strength malt liquors through government agencies, and will vote accordingly on question four. A majority for question four would provide for the sale of spirituous and regular strength beers, and light beers as referred to in questions two and three.

Another point on which there appears to be doubt in the minds of many people is as to what would be the result should the majority vote for the repeal of the act. The Premier has said that the result would be the revival of the Liquor License law "as amended."

Minister of Agriculture Here

Hon. S. G. Henry, Minister of Agriculture of the Province, was in the city this afternoon and at Peterboro this evening will be the principal speakers at a meeting to be held there in the interest of Mr. Sandy Grant, Conservative candidate.

Ladies for Ireland

At Trenton yesterday afternoon the ladies of that town who are supporters of Mr. W. H. Ireland, Conservative candidate, met in large numbers and completed a perfect organization. A captain, vice captain and a strong committee for each polling subdivision of the town was appointed. Mr. Abbott of this city was with the candidate present at the meeting and gave an address.

Premier Here

At the Armouries in this city tomorrow evening, Sir Wm. Hearst, Premier, will give an address upon the political questions of the day. The committee in charge are making every preparation to receive the Premier.

Sandy Grant Optimistic

Mr. Sandy Grant, the popular Conservative candidate for East Hastings, was in the city last evening and visited Mr. Ireland's committee rooms. He reports that the prospects for his re-election are exceedingly bright.

No U. P. O. Candidate in Prince Edw.

The executive of the United Farmers of Prince Edward County held a meeting at Picton on Saturday to consider what action it was advisable to take in view of the retirement of their candidate, Mr. Clarence Mallory, from the contest. A long discussion took place and it was finally decided to have a committee interview Mr. Nelson Parliament to see if some arrangement could not be effected so that Mr. Parliament would be thoroughly acceptable to the U. F. O.

Mr. Parliament was to meet this committee on Monday last and it has since been announced that there will be no U. F. O. candidate in the field.

The Hearst Government record task will roll over any pill box that the Dewart Opposition can erect.

Globe is an adept at camouflage. The grand old organ turns its wet side to the Grit leader and its dry side to the referendum.

A tour of Ontario circuit has just been completed by the Grit leader. Week from next Monday he will start for Salt Creek with every stitch of canvas set.

Evidently Tories throughout the province do not think they are engaged in a losing fight. At the Prince Edward Tory convention there were only ten candidates in the field, the nomination going to "Bob" Norman.

Many Liberal conventions are deciding not to nominate," and trying to tie themselves up with the U. F. O. Nobody likes to back a losing horse.

When is Hartley Dewart, K.C., going to enlighten Ontario voters as to his exact stand on Canadian "independence?"

'Time for a change!' shout the Grits

Hearst will make whatever changes are necessary.

Globe makes it plain that never, no never, will it take away Dewart's personal liberty to sit on the referendum fence.

Indications point to the fact that saloons will be closed all day on the day of the election—and then some.

If Dewart is the White Hope of the liquor interests, then are those interests afflicted with color blindness.

What did Hartley Dewart dew for anybody but Dewart?

COUNT NABBED WHO CARRIED FALSE PAPERS

Montreal, Oct. 10.—Arrested at the Windsor Hotel here, where they had registered as Mr. and Mrs. Dunn, on the eve of embarking on the Empress of France for Great Britain, Count Maximilian Egon Petocki was today sent up to Napukasing internment camp, while the woman who was travelling with him was sent back to New York, whence the two had come to Montreal.

Word from the staff of Captain J. N. Carter, registrar of alien enemies, found on the person of the count incriminating papers. One was from Dr. Friedrich Adler, Spartacus leader in Vienna, commenting on the "wonderful work" the count's mother was doing in southern Europe, together with a eulogy of Rosa Luxemburg and Karl Liebknecht. In the lining of his hat and in the lining of his overcoat were found addresses of men and women whose names were on Government files in many parts of Europe as people of more or less advanced opinions. Count Petocki was travelling incognito as James Dunn, and his passport showed him to be a British subject and general manager of a big corporation.

When arrested the couple had letters of credit on them for $48,000 and cash, $5,673.00, besides jewelry worth $8,000.

The arrest was made under the Defence of Canada Act, 1914, and under the sections relating to the use of false passports and the carrying of letters.

DISCUSSION ON ASPERIN

WINNIPEG, Oct. 10.—Dr. B. W. Tobin, of Toronto, was requested to withdraw from the Canadian pharmaceutical convention yesterday by a unanimous vote of the delegabs following a discussion about "asperin."

Dr. Tobin is the Canadian representative of the Bayer interests, New angels, and the majority a good deal York, original dispensers of asperin more so.

Following the suggestion of J. E. Tremblay, of Quebec, that Dr. Tobin be asked to speak on the topic, Delegate E. K. Knolton, Vancouver, and G. E. Gibbard, Toronto, opposed the hearing, the former stating that German propaganda was still in operation in Canada, in his opinion. The vote was then passed.

The address of Dominion President E. Nesbitt, Winnipeg, formed the theme of a discussion and "asperin" was the principal subject.

Although there was some little difference of opinion, the convention was virtually in accord with the idea that the patent protecting the name of "asperin" from general use should be cancelled in Canada as it has been in the United States.

All men are a little lower than the

Hastings County Ores Are Coming Into Use

WAR PERIOD AFFORDED OPPORTUNITY FOR DEVELOPING CERTAIN ESSENTIAL MINERALS—RESOURCES AWAITING DEVELOPMENT.

For decades Canada was deemed a land of barren wilderness. Just so Hastings County. Today Canada gleams forth as one of the brightest jewels in the British crown, so Hastings county will prove itself a jewel beyond price in Ontario.

The government in the past did not realize at all the great lumber value of the rugged wilderness of Hastings. Indiscriminately it granted timber licenses and lumber "gangs" ruthlessly slashed through taking the choicest maple, birch and hemlock. Not satisfied, evidently with the wreck it had caused, the government left the county without fire protection, and twice with furious energy forest fires have swept through demolishing practically all trees and leaving a sterile soil wholy unsuited to agriculture.

Forty years ago a great writer prophesied that in fifty years Hastings county would be the "treasure island" of Ontario. The idea was then scorned because although people supposed that beneath the thin covering of sand the soil there might be minerals, they considered them of minor value. In the early part of the nineteenth century every effort had terminated in disaster, and mining in Hastings had become a stock joke.

A blast furnace had been built in 1820 on the Crow River near Marmora to smelt the magnitic ores at Blairton. This attempt proved a failure, and in 1823, when the Hon. Peter McGill, who had been the chief creditor, asked for a provincial loan of £10,000, it was refused. In 1847 another effort to open up the plant proved as futile as the firm was unable to secure sufficient financial backing.

Four thousand years before the Christian era gold had taken its place as the most valuable metal and every new party of colonists hoped and endeavored to find gold in their new homes. History tells many tragic tales of "gold rushes," but never has it recorded a superabundance of the metal.

No different has been the "gold" incident in the history of Hastings. In 1866 the Richardson gold mine was started and it was then found that valuable gold veins ran through Madoc, Hungerford and Tudor townships. Here again the government failed to realize the splendid possibilities. A private firm bought the mine and after before very long they were facing a financial failure as well as a lawsuit.

Several other attempts were made to reveal the mineral wealth of the county but until very recently all efforts have been futile. During the war the manufacture of munitions and shortage of shipping resulted in a more extensive investigation of the mineral resources of Canada. The report of the mineralogists who were engaged by the federal government in Hastings has been published and is most encouraging. Those interested are now convinced that the mineral wealth in Hastings are quite equal to anything in the world.

Prior to the war nearly all the arsenic insecticides war imported from France, but in 1914 when this source was cut off the country realized that there must be arsenic in Canada. At once the mineplcel ores of Hastings became valuable and at Deloro, near Marmora, is an arsenic plant now working to its full capacity producing for insecticides and glass.

The Canadian steel furnaces require annually 10,000 tons of fluorspar, which is used as a flux. There are few such extensive deposits as those in Hastings County, which as yet have been barely touched, although in a limited way fluorspar is mined in Madoc and Huntingdon townships.

Talc Mines Found

Throughout the province, in fact, it might say, throughout the Dominion, there are very few talc deposits, excepting in Hastings County. Talc mines have been successfully operated on a small scale at Madoc, and Deloro. The Eldorado talc mine has as its chief, Sir John Hall, who is full of vitality and confidence in the county's possibilities. The talc in these localities is of a fine compact quality, suitable not only for powder and filler but also for pen tips and crayons.

An outline, no matter how brief, of the minerals of Hastings would be strikingly incomplete without mentioning their extensive iron values. Geneticially every township there is rich stories of iron of varying qualities. Although few of these mines have been opened up, those in the township of Marmora have been successful.

Then, as all other countries rich in mineral wealth, Hastings has geological formations quite superior to those of other counties. There are splendid marble quarries in Madoc and Marmora and throughout the northern part of the county great stores of asbestos untouched. Lithographic stone, a fine grained homogeneous limestone, spreads extensively over the southern portion of the county.

So this has been the extent of the mining efforts in Hastings. Indifference has prevented Hastings from realising the magnificent treasures stored beneath its rocky and unpromising surface. For almost five decades the mineral wealth has remained practically untouched save for a few small mines which, because of primitive methods employed and lack of sufficient capital, have failed. But now Canada realises more fully than prior to the war the tremendous extent of her mineral wealth and she realises too, that this resource must be developed more rapidly and more efficiently. The mineralogical report shows that a considerable amount of Ontario's minerals lie in Hastings County.

This matter, however, must not be viewed from a purely commercial standpoint.

For a century people have lived and died on these little farms. They have grown up in poverty, lacking the means to abandon the county.

There is something else, too, which holds them. Despite their skepticism they have still great confidence in the county. They tell stories of hidden pots of gold and of great caves of sparkling jewels. These stories have passed from generation to generation and many have been the expeditions in dark and terrible nights to wrest from the superhuman guards these mighty treasures. There are many Walter Wekers in Hastings and it is this background of legendary glory which weaves about their lives a gold halo that prevents them from resting to its full extent the dreariness of their lives.

Went To School In an Aeroplane

NE YORK, Oct. 10.—Mrs. Seymour E. J. Cox, who flew in an airplane from Houston, Texas, with her son, Seymour, jun., aged nine, landed at Roosevelt Field shortly after noon.

Mrs. Cox was held up at Binghamton for three days and started from the up-State city this morning. She expects to fly to Washington tomorrow.

Mrs. Cox and the boy left Houston a week ago last Sunday. The trip is for the purpose of placing Seymour in the Raymond Riordon School at Highlanu. She has been a pilot for some time.

The first leg of the flight was from Houston to Dallas, the distance of 325 miles being covered in two hours and 35 minutes, almost a record.

Mrs. Riordon of the school has been waiting in New York for the last few days to greet her aerial visitors.

It's so cowardly to speak ill of a man behind his back as it is dangerous to say it to his face.

PURITY - QUALITY - ECONOMY

With the increased cost of labor and materials due to war conditions, it is not reasonable to suppose that a really first class baking powder can be made and sold at the old prices. Rather than sacrifice the quality of we found it necessary to make slight increases in price during the war period. Even though Magic Baking Powder may cost a few cents more than the ordinary kinds it is still by far the most economical baking powder on the market to-day when purity, strength and leavening qualities are taken into consideration.

HELPED THE CAUSE OF LABOR.

Workingmen of West Hastings can not be better represented in the Legislature than by Mr. W. H. Ireland, who has always been a friend of the workingman, and through whose efforts, largely, the big munition plant was brought to Trenton with its steady work and big wages for workingmen. He has always worked hard to bring industries to this district and when returned as a member of the Legislature will be in a better position than ever to assist the industrial development of this district, which will help every workingman in West Hastings, as the more factories here the more work there will be and the more remote will be the menace of unemployment and the possibility of having to leave home and seek employment at a distance. Workingmen, in their own interests, should support Mr. Ireland to the limit.

APPEALS TO ALL ELECTORS.

"The Globe believes that Liberal prohibitionists will do their duty as citizens by voting against any candidates of their party who are unsound on the supreme issue, even though that involves voting for a Conservative candidate."—Toronto Globe.

So says the Liberal Globe, which is so against the "so-called" leadership of Hartley Dewart that his name is seldom or ever even mentioned in its editorial columns. If Liberal prohibitionists vote for Liberal candidates they vote for the leader, Hartley Dewart; so why make a quibble about that? The only way to express disapproval of Hartley Dewart is to vote against his candidates. Even a child could understand that, although the Globe continues to wiggle and wobble all around its dilemma, 'twixt love and duty. The Liberal Toronto Star comes out flat-footed in support of Sir William Hearst and his candidates as the only solution of what might appear a difficult problem for some Liberals. On the other hand, electors who may not be willing to go as far as Sir William Hearst on the prohibition question can not but respect his manly straightforwardness and take pride in the integrity of his administration of the business affairs of the province. To vote for a candidate lacking a leader possessed of the confidence and support of the party and press is too much of a departure from the principles of good business common sense in these days of breaking down of party lines.

THE OPEN BAR OR NOT.

(Ottawa Journal)

"Our experience is that the abolition of the bar has worked decidedly in the interest of better merchandising. Since the abolition of the bar-room our business has been one of a larger volume than ever before. . . . I do not think the public would ever for a moment consider going back to the open bar."—Mr. Stewart McClenaghan, proprietor of the Two Macs store.

That, we are convinced, is the opinion of the overwhelming majority of the people of Ontario. And it should be so. The open bar is of the past. It is an evil we have left behind. We don't want it back again. Few even among the opponents of prohibition but commend the abolition of the bar.

We are going to vote for or against the return of the open bar on referendum day: Question one of the referendum ballot which asks: "Are you in favor of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?" is the question which has a direct relationship to the open bar. Votes cast for the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act must then necessarily be interpreted as in favor of the open bar, and a majority vote would be naturally regarded as a mandate to the Government for its return.

This was made clear by Sir William Hearst when explaining the Referendum Act in the Legislature. He said:

"If the first question is answered in the affirmative, the Ontario Temperance Act will be repealed, and the old License Law, as it existed prior to 1916, will be revived. In that event there would be no necessity for further consideration of the answers to the other questions, for the greater would include the less, and liquor would be sold in bars and shops as in years gone by."

To be sure of preventing the return of the open bar, therefore, the people of Ontario must vote against the repeal of the act—they must vote "No" on question one.

The people of Ontario may be, and undoubtedly are, of differing opinions as to the restricted sale and consumption of spirituous liquors and light beers. The second, third, and fourth questions on the referendum ballot enable them to express these opinions, and the majority opinion will govern.

The manner in which the people vote on these last three questions will have no reflection whatever on the decision on question one. That question stands alone as regards the open bar.

The voter who desires the sale of all intoxicating liquors, but who does not desire the open bar, should vote "Yes" on the last question and "No" on the other three. But vote "No" on the first question he must.

CRISP COMMENT

Electors who mark their referendum ballots against the return of the bars can not consistently vote on the other ballot for a Dewart candidate. Sir Wm. Hearst and his government abolished the bars, and the consistent elector who votes endorsation of that policy on the referendum ballot can not fail to back up that endorsation and make it effective by voting for a Hearst candidate. Vote for William H. Hearst and William H. Ireland.

× × ×

The placing of a third candidate in the field in West Hastings is of no benefit to anybody except to the politicians who see in this method a possible chance to take a few votes away from the Government candidate, Mr. W. H. Ireland. Electors should not be persuaded to lose their votes to further any such transparent political trick.

× × ×

The Toronto Globe's political summary gives prominence to the statements of the Conservative paper in Peterborough, the Review, that if Mr. Gillespie, the Liberal candidate there is beaten, "the reverse will not be due to his own demerits, but to his associations and the leadership under which it is his misfortune to serve." The Globe's heading over the item is "Likes candidate, but not company he keeps." Editorially the Globe pays a tribute to Sir William Hearst's courage, and adds that "the Globe regrets greatly that equal courage has not been shown by Mr. Dewart in telling the electors what his personal attitude is towards the greatest issue before the people of Ontario," an act which it thinks puts all Liberal candidates at a disadvantage.

Clothing Prices Must Come Down

Board of Commerce Intimates Cost to Consumer is Too High.

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—Pointing out that in the progress of an article of clothing from the factory to the consumer nearly 100 per cent. was added to the original cost of production, Col. W. H. Price, representing the Department of Justice recommended to the Board of Commerce at the hearing at the City Hall, that an order be passed requiring a general reduction in the prices of men's and boy's clothing. While not prepared to suggest just how much should be the amount of the reduction, he argued that in view of the profits made during the war period the makers of and dealers in clothing might well adopt a public spirited attitude and to aid in rehabilitating the country, run the business at cost, or even with a loss, in 1920. Col. Price declared that the investigation of clothing matters came at an opportune time when those engaged in the business were thinking of increasing their prices instead of reducing them.

PRESCRIPTION PLAN OF SALE IS SCORED

Windsor, Oct. 10.—Advocating a positive answer to question four on the proposed referendum ballot as "the better temperance measure than the present system," William R. Woolatt, Conservative candidate, at a meeting last night said: "The Ontario Licence present system," William R. Woolatt, the province to each write one hundred prescriptions a month.

"That means 1,000,000 quarts of liquor a month consumed in "dry" Ontario," Mr. Woolatt said, adding that John Barleycorn, in his palmiest days never did a greater business than that, and yet speakers for prohibition are telling Ontario audiences they will be satisfied to see the present system remain.

Hostile Reception For Rev. Ivens

SARNIA, Oct. 9.—Rev. William Ivens of Winnipeg strike fame, true to his word, came to Sarnia, braved the many threats of one of the largest crowds that ever assembled on Sarnia streets, and successfully addressed upon three hundred workingmen in the Moose Hall here.

The open-air meeting in Victoria Park was called off owing to the action of Mayor Nesbitt, who refused to allow Ivens to speak in any civic building or on any civic property.

Long before the hour of the meeting crowds surged in the streets. It was the largest gathering since the declaration of peace. A band paraded up and down the streets, followed by a large mob, pro and con. Everywhere heated arguments were carried on.

The Citizens' Safety League held a mass meeting, and following the announcement of Mayor Nesbitt that he did not wish to read the Riot Act, and that the police had been instructed to see that law and order were kept, the league members seemingly vanished at 9 p.m.

Rev. Mr. Ivens took the platform in Moose Hall and began speaking on the Winnipeg strike. He had hardly been introduced and commenced his speech when a signal was given and there was "Hell to pay." So far as electric lights were concerned. Gas light was brought into use, and he addressed a meeting that was orderly and without heckling or interference in any form. The address given by Ivens was absolutely an appeal on his behalf and those of his fellow Winnipeg Trades and Labor Council members who figured in the Winnipeg strike.

How To Make Your Hair Beautiful

Ten Minutes' Home Treatment Works Wonders. Stops Falling Hair and Dandruff and Makes the Hair Soft, Brilliant, Lustrous and Fluffy.

Better than all the so-called "hair tonics" in the world is a simple, old-fashioned home recipe consisting of plain Bay Rum, Lavona (de Compposee) and a little Menthol Crystals. Mix these ingredients at home in a few minutes, work wonders with any one. Try it just one night and see. Get from your druggist 6 oz. Lavona, 6 oz. Bay Rum and ½ drachm Menthol Crystals. Dissolve the Crystals in the Bay Rum and pour in 6 oz. bottle. Then add the Lavona, shake well and let it stand for an hour before using. Apply it by putting a little of the mixture on a soft cloth. Draw this cloth slowly through the hair, taking just one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair delightfully soft, lustrous and fluffy. To stop the hair from falling and to make it grow again rub the lotion briskly into the scalp, use the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. Apply night and morning. A few days' use and you will not find a single loose or straggling hair. They will be locked on your heads as tight as a vise. Dandruff will disappear. You will find the most unsightly hair growing up all over your scalp and this new hair will grow with wonderful rapidity.

Any druggist can sell you the above. The prescription is very inexpensive and we know of nothing so effective and certain in its results.

BURGLARS' WHISKEY ORGY ON BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—There was gloom, pulpitating, odorous gloom, hanging over the Broadway district Spring street today, little as thousands who passed up and down the boroughfares knew it, and yesterday knew it. Ten detectives and ten times ten amateurs sniffed the air and breathed deeply and said unkind things of the burglars who yesterday spent much of Saturday night in the offices of the Hollywood Whiskey Company getting a load of silverware, jewellery and cash in the thousands—and another load of a sort soon to be beyond practice of the law, even now none too easily accumulated.

There were four safes in the place and twenty barrels of high proof whiskey last Saturday night. William Kalt, the bookkeeper, entering the office Monday, found most of the barrels empty. There was whiskey in fire buckets, in paper cups, in tin cups, and there were one or two derby hats which had been apparently used in the burglarious orgy. There was an inch of whiskey on the basement floor There was whiskey on the walls and some thieves had fairly splashed each other with it.

One small safe, the private property of W. N. Fleish, jr., of the firm, had been neatly opened, apparently early in the morning. There was money and dollars in silverware, $500 in jewellery and $500 in cash had been taken. Another larger safe, which held the thousands of dollars ready for instant payment on release of whiskeys in bond, had also been opened, but the job had been done with clumsiness and obvious lack of professional finish. A third safe was covered from top to bottom with zigzags showing the tracks of uncertainly of coarse drills and, glancing blows of wedge and hammer. Here there was one of the largest whiskey pools seeping into the floor.

The robbers got in by crossing the roof from a tenement at No. 174 Spring street and breaking into the skylight of the whiskey building.

Officials of the company said they could not figure how much had been taken from the second safe until they had gone over their books and bank balances.

AVIATORS ABSTAINERS FOR THREE MONTHS

New York, Oct. 10.—Sir Arthur Brown and Sir John Alcock, who made the first non-stop airplane flight across the Atlantic, became total abstainers three months before the flight, according to statements made by Sir Arthur who is lecturing in New York. He said that this course was adopted so that "when we were flying, a small quantity of brandy would have a maximum effect."

He said the number 13 had no superstitious terrors for the fliers. Work on the plane was begun February 13, it was the thirteenth of its class. There were thirteen members in the expedition to St. John's and the fliers arrived at St. John's on the 13th, Sir Arthur said.

COSTLY WASTE OF EGG.

New York, Oct. 10.—Max Pickard, 28 years old, of 780 Caldwell avenue, secretary of the Hard-Rubber Workers' Union, which is on a strike, was fined $10 today for disorderly conduct in the Centre Street police court.

Miss Grace Calvin, who refused to join the strike, told the court that while she was driving her automobile through Centre street yesterday after noon, Pickard made faces at her. Then when her machine was stalled he threw an egg which struck her in the forehead.

"The worst of it, judge," she said "the egg was addled."

GROWING DEAF WITH HEAD NOISES? TRY THIS

If you are growing hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmit double strength) and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

ample should be made of a man who would put an egg to such use, with eggs at ninety cents a dozen, and level the fine.

"It's no wonder that the cost of living is high," he said at parting.

REAL VALUE

is based, not on the price paid for a commodity, but on the benefit derived. That is why Zam-Buk is the cheapest skin healer on the market—because the benefit derived is far greater than can be got from ordinary ointments. This is due to the fact that Zam-Buk is all herbal—100%. Ordinary ointments are 5/6 medicine and the balance animal fat.

The superiority of Zam-Buk is proved by the many cases of chronic skin trouble and old sores which yield to the power of Zam-Buk after all other treatments have failed.

The unusual power of penetration which Zam-Buk possesses enables it to reach the underlying tissues, where skin troubles have their root. Then the germicidal properties in Zam-Buk destroy all germs. Until this is done healing can never be thorough. The reason why sores that have been treated with ordinary ointments break out again is because the remedy has never got to the seat of the trouble, but has only healed over the outer skin. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, uproots skin disease, and the cure is complete and permanent.

Zam-Buk should always be used for eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, blood-poisoning, bad leg, piles, cuts, burns and scalds. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER V—Continued

"Happy ending this time?"

"I don't quite see it to be consistent," he."

"Damn it, I mean to be true! I won't sell my birthright for a third edition! I shall work like blazes and we shall live quietly somewhere in a little house——"

"That's impossible," said Turquand "You may live in a little house, or you may live quietly, but you can't do both things simultaneously."

"In the suburbs—in Streatham, probably. Her people live in Streatham and of course she would like to be near them."

"And you will have a general servant, eh, with large and fiery hands—like Cornelia downstairs? Only she will look worse than Cornelia, because your wife will dress her up in muslin and streamers, and try to disguise the generality. If you work in the front of your pretty little house, your nervous system will be shattered by the shrieks of your neighbors' children swinging on the gates—forty-pounds a year home in the suburbs are infested with children; nothing seems to exterminate them and the inevitable gate-groan like souls in hell—and if you choose the back, you'll be assisted by the arrival of the joint, and the vegetables and the slap of the milk-can, and Cornelia the Second's altercation with the errand-boys. A general servant with a tin pail alone is warranted to make herself heard for eleven hundred and sixty yards."

"Life hasn't made an optimist of you," observed Kent, less cheerfully, "than you talk about "happy endings".

"The optimist is like the poet—he's born, he isn't made. Apropos of life I suppose, you'll renure yours when you marry?"

"Yes," said Kent meditatively; "yes that's a good idea. I shall..... But your suggestions are none exhilarating," he added; "let's go to dinner."

"I'm ready," he affirmed. "By the way, I never thought to inquire, Mr. Walford hasn't a large family has she?"

"A son as well, that's all. Why?"

"I congratulate you," said Turquand it was the first time the word had passed his lips. "It's admirable to any man should never marry anybody; but if he must blunder with someone, let him choose an only child, if possible. Marrying into a large family is more expensive still. His wife has for ever got a sister having a wedding, or a christening, or a birthday, and wanting a present; or a brother asking for a loan, or dying and plunging her into costly crape. Yes, I congratulate you."

Humphrey did not express any thanks, and he determined that his engagement was a subject he would avoid as much as he could in their conversations together henceforward.

He was due at The Hawthorns the following afternoon at five o'clock and his impatience to see the girl again was intensified by the knowledge that he was about to see her in her home.

The day was tedious. In the morning it was showery, and he was chagrined to think that he was doomed to enter the drawing-room in muddy shoes; but after lunch the sky cleared and when he reached Victoria the pavements were dry. The train started late, and traveled slowly; but he heard a porter hailing "Streets Mill!" on the welcome platform at last and, making the station's acquaintance with affectionate eyes, he hastened up the steps and in the direction of the house.

He was prepossessed by its exterior and his anticipations were confirmed on entering the hall.

Mrs. Walford was in the garden, he was told, and the parlormaid conducted him there. It was an extremely charming garden. It was well designed and it had a cedar and a tennis court, which was pleasant to look at, though tennis was not an accomplishment his life had furnished opportunities for mastering; and it contained a tea table under the cedar's boughs, and Cynthia in a deck-chair and a rushing frock.

Gas In The Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble. Caused By Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

RETURNED SOLDIERS WILL BUY FARMS

Victory Loan 1919 Will Supply Capital to Start The Veterans on Land of Their Own

"Back to the land," has been the cry for some years past. Many who would like to have done so had not the means for gratifying their wish. Others had no such lofty desire.

The returned soldier is being offered a chance by the government of taking up a farm and stocking it. The government will lend him the money at a moderate rate of interest and on long time. Then it's up to him to make good.

Fancy the heaven it would be for a mother with five or more kiddies to get to the country. What if it meant a lot of work—she has always worked hard and got no place. Now all the work she would do would be for her own farm.

This wonderful chance can only be given to the returned soldiers if Canada has the money to finance the scheme. The Victory Loan 1919 will supply the means to put it through. And that makes it devolve upon the citizens to subscribe.

Will you give the returned man an opportunity?

ASKS M'KENZIE TO REPEAT CHARGE

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—F. R. Lalor, M. P., of Haldimand, who is interested in the Dominion Canners, Limited, has challenged D. D. McKenzie to repeat outside the Commons charges against the company which he brought to the attention of the House yesterday. The leader of the Opposition read letters alleging that in filling a contract for pork and beans for consumption by soldiers at the front, the company had failed to put the requisite quantity of pork into the cans, and had put in bad beans, pebbles, and other unwholesome substances. Mr. Lalor was not present when Mr. McKenzie spoke and is precluded by the rules of procedure from reopening the subject in the Commons.

THREW BOMB AMONG MOURNERS

Helsingfors, Oct. 10.—Ten persons were killed and 25 others seriously injured by the throwing of a bomb into a funeral procession in Moscow recently, according to advices from that city received here.

The despatch states that the bomb, of the high explosive type, was thrown by an unknown man "during the funeral of victims of the recent bomb outrages in the Kremlin."

FLIN FLON MINE SALE INVOLVES $12,500,000

The Pas, Man., Oct. 10.—The reported sale of the Flin Flon Mine, to Hayden Stone Company, of Boston, involves a sum of ten million dollars for the construction of a railway, water powers and smelter which is exclusive of the purchase price which is estimated to be two million and a half dollars.

The negotiations for the purchase of the Flin Flon were begun in 1915 and an option taken for a price of four million dollars.

Diamond drills were put up on the property and blocked out an enormous body containing approximately twenty million tons of copper ore with which is associated small values in gold and silver aggregating a total value of nine dollars to the ton.

The body has been examined by learned geologists from various parts of the world and pronounced a remarkable deposit.

EDITOR OF VETERAN PAPER IS REPORTED AS MISSING

Toronto, Oct. 10.—E. J. Stephenson, a returned soldier and editor of the "Veteran Democrat," disappeared Tuesday morning after leaving his home. He was on his way to the printers with a quantity of copy for the coming issue of his magazine, but as far as can be ascertained he never arrived there. Nor did he visit his office. The Police Department was notified and are seeking to locate him.

It is the belief of his family that he has been overtaxed by a lapse of memory to which he has been subject since his return from overseas.

Misfortunes come in pairs for the man whose opponent holds three of a kind.

CANADA'S PROSPERITY RESTS WITH YOU

Continued Business Activity and Good Wages Depend on Canada's New Victory Loan

DURING the past four years Canada's prosperity has been due largely to orders from Great Britain and our Allies.

Canada was able to obtain these orders because she advanced credit to these countries.

Canada was able to give this credit only because you bought Victory Bonds.

Great Britain, with France, Belgium, and other Allies, are now prepared to place large orders with us for the products of our factories, farms, forests and fisheries—provided Canada again gives them credit.

Credit must be given if we are to have any guarantee of good times and good wages. But our workers on these orders must be paid their wages in cash; so, much of the money that you invest in Victory Bonds will go out in wages to Canadians.

You will be absolutely protected—you will get a good rate of interest and all of your money will be paid back at the time stated in the Bond.

Every cent will be spent in Canada, and ultimately circulate to the benefit of all.

Canada can give this credit only if you again buy Victory Bonds.

Therefore Canada's continued prosperity rests with you.

LOOK!

If you were told of a way Cuticura Ointment is making good, and relieving skin troubles in all short stories at once, you would say it was impossible. Yet, it's a fact, and you don't feel like giving that away, wouldn't you feel like giving that away.

Here is the discovery:

There are little pimples, eczematous, scaly, itching, irritated, inflamed skin, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately arouse that vapour, and, as it goes through down the air passages to the lungs. On this journey, they soften the sickness and irritated membranes of mucous tissue, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the sick, in a word, while no liquid or solid goes to the lungs and air passages, since Pope found out there direct, and Cuticura does their work of healing.

FREE TRIAL

Write for free sample and cake of the ointment, mail it (with a stamp to pay return postage) to Dept. Co., Torn o. A free trial packet will then be sent to you. All druggists and stores sell Pepe, 50c; box.

Business Men In Navy League Drive

Prominent business men throughout the coast are backing up the National Day Campaign to raise $500,000 for the continuance of the work of the Navy League of Canada. The various useful activities of the Navy League include the conduct of Naval Brigades at which youthful Canadians are thoroughly trained to become good seamen. The Merchant Marine, recently given such prominence, is also looked down the air passages to the lungs. On this journey, they soften the sickness and irritated membranes of mucous tissue, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the sick, in a word, while no liquid or solid goes to the lungs and air passages, since Pope found out there direct, and Cuticura does their work of healing.

All of the funds raised in the National Day Drive will be spent in Canada mainly for the support of the Naval Brigades and for the Sailors' Homes at Canadian Ports. Ontario's quota is $225,000 including $125,000, which will be subscribed in Toronto. A brisk campaign is now in progress and the actual drive will take place October 21, 22, 23.

First Nights at "The Movies"

Ethel Clayton in "A Sporting Chance" at Griffin's—Mae Marsh Feature at Palace—Vaudeville at Grand.

If you were driving along a country road in a roadster and punctured a tire, and were confronted by an escaped convict, stripes and all, whom you immediately recognized as a notorious prisoner you have been reading about, would you desert the car, convict and all, and make a quick getaway, or perhaps fall in a dead faint. When the convict gallantly offers to change the tire for her, it made a world of difference to Ethel Clayton, playing the role of Carey Brent in "A Sporting Chance," which was screened before a large audience at Griffin's last night. So impulsive is Carey that she determines to reform the man and hires him as her chauffeur. This supposed convict turns out to be pure gold at the finish and helps Carey defeat the schemes of a society black-mailer against herself and her father's youthful bride—Carey's step-mother. Besides the above offering, Gaumont News, a funny Lyons Moran comedy, and "A Fatal Marriage," a typical Fox sunshine 2-act comedy, with comedy action every minute are also being offered on the same program. Three vaudeville specialties are also being offered on the same program in James McNally, a very clever comedy juggler, who delighted the large audience present and was accorded huge applause at the close of his turn; Mabel Dugras in a song-logue, and the maid of mystery, Kendall's auto doll, a turn which proved novel and interesting. The entire program is being repeated again tonight and Saturday matinee and night.

MAE MARSH DELIGHTFUL

Mae Marsh cleverly combines whimsical comedy and gripping drama in her new picture, "The Bondage of Barbara," which was presented at the Palace yesterday. She finds her happiest role as the "Little Mother" of a wayward younger brother, for whose shortcomings she holds herself responsible. He is used by two individuals to gain their own ends. One is "Slick" Simmons, keeper of a questionable resort. The other is Jack Newton, son of Barbara's employer. Tony, the brother, is eager to escape his sister's care and seek his fortune in New York. Jack Newton fans this desire until the boy is willing to accept money from him on the promise that he (Tony) will leave town for good. The money Jack gets by robbing the safe in Barbara's office, taking enough to pay his debts as well. Barbara suspects her brother but says nothing that will fasten the guilt on him. Instead, silently, she takes the blame, and while her employer cannot believe her a thief, he feels justified in turning her over to the authorities. Her sentence to a reformatory cannot be prevented by her lawyer sweetheart. How these two solve the mystery and bring the guilty ones to justice constitutes most of the engrossing action. "Unearned Money," a funny Mutty comedy, and the 15th chapter of the popular circus serial, "Love of the Circus," are also being exhibited on the same program.

Music and Drama

"HEARTS OF THE WORLD"

Is there a theatrical producer alive who ever spent eighteen months on one picture? Hardly. Yet this is the amount of time concentrated thought David W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," and "Intolerance" devoted to the production of "Hearts of the World," which is acclaimed his supreme triumph of direction. His background was the war front of France; his characters were humans in the midst of an awful tragedy, and he intermingled in all the melee of gas attacks, flame waves, bombardments, and aeroplane fights a wonderful story that no heart can resist. Nobody knows how much it cost for D. W. Griffith for his his supreme triumph 'Hearts of the World' which will be presented at Griffin's next Monday to Wednesday matinee daily, and nobody seems to care. Mr. Griffith himself doesn't know. He had Carie Blanche orders from the British and French Government to produce the picture. All he feels about it is that the greatest ambition of his life is realized, which is more to him than money.

NATURE'S MIRROR

When a woman is well and healthy there's a sparkle in her eyes, a rose tint in her cheeks, and she has rich red blood. There's elasticity in every movement and a spring in her step. Love comes to every woman who has bounding health—but when she is pallid, dull eyed, languid, she has no magnetism nor does she appeal to any man.

Such a change in feelings and looks!

After suffering pain, feeling nervous, dizzy, weak and dragged down by weaknesses of her sex—with eyes sunken, black circles and pale cheeks—such a woman is quickly restored to health by the Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce. Changed, too, is looks, for after taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the skin becomes clear, the eyes brighten, the cheeks plump. It is purely vegetable, contains no alcohol.

Druggists sell it in tablets or liquid. Send Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y., 10c for trial package.

PETITION FOR CLEMENCY

A petition asking the Minister of Justice to exercise clemency in the case of Mrs. Lorica Thompson, sentenced to be hanged at Kingston on December 17th next, for the murder of her infant, has been placed in the Salvation Army Citadel at Kingston for the purpose of receiving signatures and already over one thousand names have been appended. Mrs. Smith wife of the adjutant of the Salvation Army at Kingston, who was much with Mrs. Thompson during her imprisonment is in charge of the petition and it is her intention to enlist the co-operation of the churches. She declares that the prisoner is not a bad woman and should be given a chance to live down her crime.

BRIG.-GEN. HEPBURN RETURNING.

A cable has been received stating that Brig.-Gen. R. R. Hepburn, M.P., C.M.G., is returning to Picton and is expected to arrive in a few days. This is Col. Hepburn's first visit to his home town for some time. He has been engaged since the armistice was signed closing up the very extensive work of forestry organization. This has fully occupied his time for nearly a year, and the work is not yet complete. Last advices were that he would reach Picton about October 12th, but this is uncertain as steamboat sailings have been very much delayed owing to strikes in England. His many friends in Prince Edward will welcome him home after his distinguished service overseas.

COMMITTEE WORK

A number of the members of the County Council were in the city yesterday attending meetings of the Bridge and House of Refuge Committees.

SLIGHT INCREASE IN PRICE

Yesterday $16.50 was paid for live hogs here, which is an advance of 50 cents per hundred over the price paid last week. A shipment of two cars were made yesterday.

CALL FOR POLICE

Last evening the police answered a call to apartments on Front street, where it was alleged trouble was disturbing between husband and wife. On arrival of officers an amicable settlement of the difficulty was arranged.

BURGLARIES AT CAMPBELLFORD

There has been a number of stores burglarized in this vicinity of late and Campbellford has not escaped. Last week about twenty pairs of rubber heels were taken from Mr. A. Winters' Shoe Store, and on Monday morning of this week, Mr. Herbert Leonard found that his store had been broken into and a considerable amount of goods taken therefrom.

CHARGE OF FRAUD

Sergt. Naphan of the local police department received word from Toronto to-day from Toronto to bring a man who was arrested on obtaining by fraud a Willard storage battery from the Quinte Battery Service Station here. The article is valued at over $140.00. He was this morning before Magistrate Masson, and the case was not completed.

BODY TAKEN TO PICTON

The body of the late Russell Davis, engineer on the ill-fated steamer Waubic, was brought to Kingston yesterday by the Cape Vincent ferry. The body was shipped to Picton where burial will take place. No news of any other bodies from the Waubic has been received by the owners of the boat. Engineer Davis' body was found washed up on the American shore. It will be remembered that William Sweet of Belleville, was mate on the Waubic. Sweet at the finding of mate Sweet's body has yet been received by his mother, Mrs. Alicia Fisher, who resides here.

DIED AT BROCKVILLE

Mr. Matthew Irwin, 67 years of age, a prominent merchant of Brockville, died at the latter Wednesday night after a long illness. He was head of the firm of H. B. Wright & Co., confectioners, was an ex-Mayor of Brockville, and served in various municipal bodies. Mr. Kyle was a good citizen honest and upright in all his dealings, and his genial personality won him many warm friends. He had many friends in Belleville who will regret his death.

TEACHERS IN CONVENTION

The school teachers of South Hastings are in annual convention in this city and all the schools in the inspectorate are represented. At Queen Mary School the sessions are being held. After the opening of this convention yesterday, Mr. P. S. Deacon, chairman of the Board of Education and Mr. W. H. Ponce extended greetings to the teachers and expressed the wish that their deliberations would prove profitable. Miss F. Nelson, President, responded. In the evening a session was held at the High School, Miss E. Hall, Principal of Peterboro Normal School at to-day's session gave addresses on "Education in the Home," and Household Science in Rural Schools."

Toronto Couple Both Grateful

Holman Says He Believes Tanlac Saved His Life—Wife Joins in Praising It.

"I actually don't believe I would be alive today if it hadn't been for Tanlac," said John Holman, of 183 Chestnut street, Toronto, Ont.

"I had suffered from nervousness and stomach trouble for about two years," he continued, "I had no desire to eat and was wasting away to nothing. I suffered terribly from indigestion, my nerves went all to pieces and I became so weak that I couldn't do a lick of work. Many a night I would be unable to sleep a wink and would get up feeling so weak and nervous I could hardly drag myself around.

"I tried all kinds of medicines but got no better. Finally my wife induced me to try Tanlac, so I got me a bottle and it has certainly done a world of good. My appetite is great and I can now eat anything without having indigestion afterwards, my nerves are stronger and I sleep fine all night and feel better and stronger than I have in a long time. I have gained some in weight, too, and my wife and I both feel so grateful for what Tanlac has done for me that we want everybody to try this wonderful medicine. Why, I simply wouldn't be without it for anything."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by A. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Maley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. W. Vince & Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

LIQUOR SEIZED.

Mr. R. Arnott, License Inspector of this city, at 1.30 this morning, at Marysville, met express No. 12, westbound and secured a quantity of liquor. The consignment consisted of three dozen bottles of Hiram Walker's special whiskey; one dozen bottle of Seagram's whiskey, and six one gallon jars containing alcohol. The inspector was, however, unable to secure the party who was in charge of the liquor.

Letters to the Editor

POUND DAY AT THE SHELTER

Belleville, Ont., Oct. 9th, 1919

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly permit me again to appeal to the Public to help us in our work. The store-house at the Shelter is getting low and we are about to face a winter which may prove to be a severe one, but whether or not we need the store replenishing and we propose holding a "Pound Day," on Monday, October 13th, at the Shelter. The matron will be delighted to meet anyone on that day from two o'clock to five p.m. and trust that all callers will bring along with them a pound of something that will be beneficial to the children; it matters not what, but come along and bring a pound of something good with you and spe the little ones. Also may I point out that we are in very urgent need of clothing, owing to the great number of children that have come in and passed out of the Shelter within the last few months and let it be borne in mind that each child's clothes in nearly every case has to be destroyed and there to be refurnished which you can very well grasp is a severe strain upon the Clothing Committee and they are most anxious that some kind friends would send in clothing for boys and girls from the ages of two to fourteen years, both underclothing and outerwear, good and warm for the winter use. If it is not possible for you to pay a visit to the Shelter on Monday, any food, goods or clothing will be gratefully received at our Office, 232 Church St.

Thanking the kind readers and friends for past favors and solicitating their liberal help this time.

I remain,
Yours sincerely,
T. D. Ruston, Insp. C.N.S.

HARVESTERS BUSY.

Hamilton Spectator: The Harvesters have a busy time ahead. Tonight the baseball team leave for Belleville, where tomorrow it will meet Queen and company in the second of the final games for the Ontario championship. The Harvesters feel that they can win, as they point out that it was errors that lost last Saturday's game here and the team is not likely to "blow" again.

Plans To Combat Venereal Disease

Dominion Council of Health Outline Scheme for Nation-Wide Campaign.

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—The Dominion Council of Health, established under the Act relating thereto is in session here.

Up to the present the control of venereal diseases has occupied almost entirely the attention of the council and very definite results have been arrived at, particularly the assurances given by the representatives of the provinces of most active co-operation with the federal department of health, in combating in every way venereal diseases.

A complete unanimity of opinion has been expressed by the representatives of all the provinces as to the proper measures to be adopted. The council has decided that out of the Appropriation Act set apart by the federal Government for division among the provinces for the combating of the disease, the sum of $10,000 shall be given direct to the national council for the combating of venereal diseases in their nation-wide campaign of information and propaganda and measures of treatment, and a further sum of $1,000 to be expended by the federal department of health along the same lines.

The balance of the grant, namely $180,000 will be proportionately assigned to the provinces assuming the department of health that equivalent amounts of provincial funds will be set apart for the same purpose.

Great Copper Mine To Be De evloped

U. S. Interests Acquire Flin Flon Property in Manitoba—Ten Millions Involved.

THE PAS, Man., Oct. 10.—The reported sale of the Flin Flon Mine to the Hayden Stone Company, of Boston, involves a sum of ten million dollars for the construction of a railway, water power, and smelter, which is exclusive of the purchase price, estimated to be two million and a half dollars.

The negotiations for the purchase of Flin Flon were begun in 1915, and an option taken for a price of four million dollars.

Diamond drills were put upon the property and blocked out an enormous ore body containing approximately twenty million tons of copper ore, with which was associated small values in gold and silver aggregating a total value of nine dollars to the ton.

The body has been examined by famed geologists from various parts of the world, and pronounced a rich marketable deposit, second only to one in the United States and one in Spain. It is understood here that Hayden Stone Company are acting for the Tennessee Copper Company and the Arizona Copper Company and the closing deal is the result of the entrance of the Anaconda Company into The Pas field and their attempts to secure options for the purchase of the Flin Flon themselves.

About the only good things that can be said in some men's favor is that they are not good for anything.

Experience is a good teacher, but some men are convicted enough to think that they can give experience a few pointers.

Vanity and hypocrisy are the parents of prudery.

The higher a man climbs, the harder he may fall.

CANADA'S PESTS.

Mrs. Mosquito Does All the Biting of Human Victims.

Whatever else may be said of the mosquito, there is one thing certain: he is a perfect gentleman. The male mosquito never bites. But, unfortunately, the same cannot be said of the female of the species, for it is the lady mosquito which helps to make life unbearable for us during the warm weather.

The female mosquito has the ability and desire to pierce the human skin with her needle-like mouth, if she gets the chance, and to suck a small dose of blood. If this were all she did it would be bad enough; but, when Mrs. Mosquito pierces the skin she also injects an irritating substance, saliva, which sometimes carries with it microscopic, unicellular animals, which cause malaria. Indeed, down the microscopic scale very duet of the mosquito has flowed the fluid, which has altered the fate of continents and played a colossus-ous part in the destruction of the ancient civilizations of Greece and Rome, according to no lesser authority than Shipley.

Mosquito larvae live only in water, but the females of certain species display what might almost be called foresight; they lay their eggs on ground, which will later become covered with water, as on the mud of low places, along a salt marsh. The most familiar mosquito eggs are those of the rain-barrel species—eggs which are laid on end, side by side, in a boat shaped mass on the surface of the water in barrels, tubs and similar places.

The larva, or "wriggler," which hatches from an egg has a very short breathing siphon on its back, at the tail end. The larva is lighter than water; when feeding or at rest it floats head below the surface and parallel to it; when disturbed it wriggles vigorously from side to side, the motion sometimes carrying it down, but more frequently in other ways. When at the surface the end of the breathing siphon pierces the "surface film," opens it, and exposes the ends of the tracheae, the tubes which convey air to all parts of the creature's body. In order to feed on the microscopic plants and other organic material floating at the surface, the larva lives in such a way that its mouth is on a line with its back.

As a young insect feeds its flesh increases, but its skin does not stretch sufficiently to accommodate the enlarging body. Therefore, the old skin is cast from time to time and a new, larger skin is formed. Finally there comes a time, as in the case of such insects as moths and beetles, which like the mosquito have a complete metamorphosis or change, when there emerges from a larval skin something which is neither larva nor adult, and which is called the pupa.

The pupa of moths is, for the most part, immobile and frequently enclosed in a protective case, the cocoon, which is spun for it by the larva. The pupa of the mosquito, on the other hand, is active, but not so active as a larva, and it does not feed. It also differs from the larva in being bunched up, instead of slender and in having a pair of breathing siphons on its thorax, (the part of the body just back of the head), instead of a single siphon on the tail. The adult mosquito finally emerges from a split in the back of the cast pupal skin, which forms a miniature boat, upon which the adult may stand while stretching itself before it flies away to perpetuate its species, perhaps at the expense of ours. Studies on a common fresh-water mosquito, recently made, showed that at 20 degrees C., the cycle was completed in 13.6 days, at 22 degrees, in 11.7 days, and at 20 degrees in 7.8 days.

Mexican Civilization.

There was roughly three settled national civilizations prior to the Conquest, with a minor fourth, the Tarascan, on the middle west coast, Michoacan. The Aztecs were a nation of sacrifices who had come down from the north some centuries before, and treated the far higher and more peaceful civilizations of Southern Mexico about as did the Goths in Rome, or the Manchu Tartars in China. Their civilization was about on the level with that of the temporary Europe in organization, and much beyond that in education, though they destroyed and never learned the use of what existed before them, writes William Gates in the World's Work. But they were, and still are, a warlike and Tartar race. Oaxaca, the California of Mexico, was the seat of a great civilization, of the Zapotecs and Mixtecs, conquered in time by the Aztecs but a short time before the Spaniards came. The Mayas of Yucatan are wholly different in race and character; they always have a smile, one never sees a scowl or hears a quarrel; but they are sturdy, laborious, and tenacious of their nationality. The Aztecs were in course of conquering them when the Spaniards came. And the racial antagonism of Mayas for all Mexicans is extreme; they do not want them.—Family Herald.

Prolific Breed of Fish.

Everybody seems fed up with restriction, and the last straw seemed to have been reached when all but went forth that our gas was to be rationed.

But such a decree would have few terrors for the inhabitants of Brighton Columbia, who possess a prolific breed of fish, which not only supplies them generously with food, but saves them the cost of electric light, gas, and candles.

It is a species of smelt, and when dried you either eat him or light him. The fish is full of oil, and can easily be adapted to any form of candle-stick. The dried fish is stuck tail uppermost in the receptacle, and when a light is applied it burns with a power which puts an ordinary dip in the shade.

The oil, too, is spoken of as being as efficacious as cod-liver oil, while it is infinitely more palatable.

GREAT PEACH SHORTAGE

Disease Has Ravished Orchards in Niagara District.

Cheap and Effective Remedies to Combat the Fly Nuisance—Especial Care Required In Case of Dairy Cattle. Care Must Be Taken to Prevent Sun-Scald of Figs During the Hot Weather—Prevention and Treatment Explained by Experts.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

No fruit tree disease this year has been so conspicuous and so injurious as the Leaf Curl of Peaches. In early June more than half of the peach orchards between Beamsville and St. Catharines and many orchards in other localities were so badly affected that almost every leaf was distorted, swollen and turning a brownish color. Most of these trees will not matter sooner or later, and hardly bear no large a crop next year as if they had not been attacked by the Curl.

Control.

This year's experience, though a hard one, will doubtless be of much value to the fruit grower, for it has shown as perhaps seldom before the great importance of early spraying of peaches to prevent Leaf Curl. By early we mean before the leaf buds have begun to swell. Sometimes late spraying, that is spraying after the buds have begun to swell, will control the disease, but it will only do so where the wet weather does not come until after the spraying. A single day's rain would be of course be sufficient to start up the disease. It takes several days of moist weather. There is good evidence that even fall spraying after the leaves have dropped will also check it.

The best mixture to use is lime-sulphur about 1 gallon to 10 gallons of water. Soluble sulphur 12½ pounds to 40 gallons of water will also control the disease, but is not so popular with the growers as the lime-sulphur. L. Caesar, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

Fly Remedies.

The fly, like the poor, is always with us in summertime. In spite of many campaigns having for their slogan "Swat the Fly," he is still with us, and likely to be until the end of time.

Flies are a terrible nuisance in the home, in the dairy and in the stable. They torment the very life out of cows. It is strange that man with all his ingenuity should not have been able to overcome his agile enemy, the fly.

Up to the present, no very satisfactory remedy for our ills has been worked out. The most we can do is to apply something which keeps them off for only a time. Some number of fly remedies is legion. There are several good fly-repellent remedies.

A good home-made mixture consists of two quarts of fish-oil or any soldier-disinfectant, one quart of pint coal-oil, and four tablespoonfuls of crude carbolic acid, thoroughly mixed and applied to all parts of the cow except udder and teats, by means of a cloth or sponge. One application will coat twenty-five cows, and unless heavy rain soon after, a second application will last a week. (Leave out the coal-oil for calves.)

Lighter mixtures, containing creosol, zenoleum, etc., may be sprayed direct from the can. Of these, however, great care is needed, else the milk will become tainted.—Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

"Protecting Figs From Sunscald."

Now that the hot summer weather has arrived those who own a few tender figs are beginning to complain of sunburn or sunscald. This condition is due to the bare animal heat, similar to that of people; it gives the same degree of uncomfortableness to the pig and is caused in the same manner. Some people provide a "hog wallow" in their pasture which is a very good thing, but this location should be some place in the shade, as it is well known the fact the hide will blister far quicker when wet than when dry. A pig seems to think that a bath is an essential thing, and that if he persuades the farmer into thinking the same, the farmer must lead him to believe that during the heat of the day it is the best time to keep out of it.

If the pigs have become sunburned at all, it is well to keep them inside for a few days and thoroughly grease their bodies, with some nice smooth grease such as vaseline. This grease tends to keep the air from the irritated skin and case the uncomfortableness of the animal. Vaseline also has a wonderful healing and curative property which make it preferable in such cases.—C. H. McIlrath, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

A RECORD OF SERVICE.

Splendid Work Done by Gen. Ross In the War.

Brig-Gen. the Hon. E. Ross, of Kingston, is a soldier and a citizen of national reputation. By his eminent services and self-sacrificing devotion he has earned and reserves the enthusiastic admiration of practically every Canadian soldier who went overseas. Dr. Ross is a native of Ontario, now in his 45th year. During the South African war, while still a young man, he enlisted and fought as a private, and later on gave proof of his "parts" as a surgeon. Dr. Ross was the representative of Kingston in the Ontario Legislature when the great war broke out. Recognized as a man clear and strong in his convictions by all his associates, and yet a moderate thinker, he was perhaps keener for action than for debate. His contributions to the deliberations of the House were characterized by sound, practical common sense, by fundamentals of judgment and an accurate knowledge of the subject in hand. From the moment war was declared Dr. Ross realized, as few men did, the importance of medical and surgical attention to the men at the front. Therefore he offered himself to his country, and he was privileged to render such service as seldom falls to the lot of any man.

A few days ago, speaking in Toronto, Sir Arthur Currie declared:—"It was largely due to Gen. Ross that the wastage in the Canadian forces was less than in any other unit of the British army." To those who know the man and who have observed his career this was no surprise. Day in and day out, year after year, from almost the beginning of the war until the guns were silenced, Gen. Ross labored with unfailing enthusiasm and his great talent, close up to the front firing line, sparing no effort and avoiding no danger, in order that the men might receive the best. It is well known that he was several times offered work of a less hazardous and less exacting nature, outside of the danger zone, but he sought only safety and comfort while Canadians were in action. Even the strictest sense of an appointment as Director of Medical Services with the Fifth Military Area could not persuade him to leave his own Canadian command, and even when he suffered the greatest loss that can befall any man in the illness and death of his fellow partner, he remained at his post. He learned from actual experience how much more about the hardships and the suffering of our army than any other man in the service, and he labored in earnestly for the welfare of Canadians as it would be possible for any man to do.

Khaki Settlers In Quebec.

Very encouraging results from soldier settlement work in the Province of Quebec are reported by Col. Bruce Campbell, provincial superintendent of the Soldiers Settlement Board. The board has been brought to a high plane of organization, the province having been divided into three separate areas, all of which report good progress. The headquarters of the three areas are at Montreal, Sherbrooke and Quebec.

The soldier is required to pay down only 5 per cent. of the actual purchase price of the farm. This payment is required mainly to give the soldier a financial interest in himself in his venture. In certain cases the payment of this 5 per cent. is waived. The money paid down is to apply solely on the purchase price of the farm itself; thus $5,000 may be paid for the farm, the soldier to pay $250 of the amount. The cost will be Government loan of $4,500. This is loaned for 20 years at 5 per cent. In addition the Government will buy live stock and equipment up to the sum of $2,000, upon which no payment is made for the first year, the third year the soldier-farmer starts paying 5 per cent. on this $2,000, or $100, and the $1,000 is made for building repairs, making the grand total of $7,500.

In a visit through St. John's and Huntingdon counties Col. Campbell and Major W. R. Stevens came in personal contact with many of the soldier settlers and found in every case favorable progress was noted.

HARVEST FROM UNDER OCEAN

Kelp Has Been Proved of Such Value in Industry That It Is Now Carefully Gathered.

A good deal has been written about the use of the seaweed, kelp, for the production of iodin, and a good deal of extravagant dreaming has been indulged in. However, the kelp industry has put itself on a solid and prosperous footing, and gold in the slime of the Pacific beaches is being dug out, harvested from the waters of the Pacific. The cutters or harvesters are seeming gold mines as they work at all the time, while the barges carry the material to the factories. Here it is dried, is pumped from the holds into fermenting tanks. Foreign matter such as bolts, nuts, etc., found in the kelp are removed by electromagnets before the pumps are reached.

Harvesting consists in cutting the plant about six feet below the surface of the water. It is found that it has been found that this treatment improves the growth and stand of the beds to such an extent that they may be cut about every 90 days. The area cut at present extends from Point Conception south to the Mexican line.

The potash is all used for chemical purposes, owing to its unique purity, and there is not enough of it to supply this demand. The total quantity of the pure product is not great enough to be considered seriously for fertilizer purposes. There are, however, a number of residues produced containing potash which amount to quite a tonnage.

GUARDING YOUR HYDRO SUPPLY

At midnight the same as at noon; in January the same as in July, Nature's tireless force generates Hydro Power and places it at your command.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario has made possible its transmission. Regular inspections are made of transmission and feeder lines to prevent interruptions in service from avoidable causes. At the generating plants, and in all transformer stations of modern appliances have been installed to prevent breaks in the circuit. But should some unavoidable accident occur the service provisions have been made to restore it in the quickest possible time. The Commission, in its endeavor to aid the Province and Hydro Power to secure the most satisfactory service, recommends the use of HYDRO Quality Lamps for home illumination.

HYDRO Quality Lamps are tested in the laboratories of the Commission for brilliancy, current consumption and durability. These attributes are assured to users of HYDRO Quality Lamps.

To the Voter

DO YOU KNOW—that the beer sold in Ontario previous to prohibition ranged up to over 7% alcoholic content by weight measure, whilst the "Beer of the Ballot"—the beer for which you are asked to vote October 20th—has a strength of but 2.51%?

¶ DO YOU KNOW—that such well-known beers manufactured in the United States as Blue Ribbon, Budweiser and Schiltz—always spoken of as "very light non-intoxicating beers"—ranged up to 4.19¼—sixty per cent. stronger than the "Beer of the Ballot"—the beer for which you are asked to vote October 20th?

¶ DO YOU KNOW—that in Maine, where prohibition has been in force over sixty years, the courts have held that beer of 3% alcoholic strength, was non-intoxicating—and any beer of under 3½ strength was permitted to be sold as freely as ginger ale?

¶ DO YOU KNOW—that in Sweden, Norway and Denmark—as a result of the findings of Government commissions appointed to determine what was an intoxicating liquor—beer of practically the same strength as asked for in the coming Referendum is regarded as non-intoxicating and is sold everywhere, by anybody, without license, and without paying a Government tax?

CAVALRY MAN WINS V.C.

Lieut. Harvey Was First Canadian To Do So.

For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty. During an attack on his regiment on a hill-top a party of the enemy ran forward to a machine gun in front of the village, and opened cross fire on the British gun fire, first at a very close range, causing heavy casualties in the British troops.

At the critical moment when the enemy showed no intention whatever of retiring, and fire was still intense, Lieut. Harvey, who was in command of the leading troop, ran forward well ahead of his men, and dashed at the trench, still fully manned, jumped into the wire, shot the machine gunner, and captured his gun.

His most courageous act undoubtedly had a decisive effect on the subsequent of the operation.—Official Record.

In the general retreat of the Germans in the spring of 1917 the Canadian cavalry brigade was used to harass them in their departure from the Somme area. The Germans were fighting a rear defence action. The new famous Hindenburg line was their objective and in order to give themselves time to gain this position and consolidate themselves therein they maintained a strong outpost action in the rear. Villages were fortified and many of the best troops were left for their defence. The enemy seemed sometimes to lose his usual strategical balance and to change his mind peevishly. Several times after abandoning positions he would re-attack, the fortunes of war going usually to the British who were following on the heels of the unwelcome visitor who was making haste to leave the territory which he had held for the last two years.

In March the brigade was ordered near Peronne, north of the Somme river. So rapid was the retreat that the infantry were put to it to keep up with the Germans as they left their trenches and strong points, destroying everything as they went. Peronne was laid waste. Civilians were turned out of their homes in villages and the houses blown up, and yet the retreat continued. Only the cavalry could overtake the enemy with speed enough to hurry him as he left. In this the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery did splendid work. When the cavalry had driven the Hun out of a position it handed it over to the infantry and continued the chase over hills and through woods. There frequently strong machine gun posts had to be dislodged.

March 27 saw the cavalry still in pursuit of the enemy. In the early part of the day several villages and fortified woods were reclaimed from the Hun and a counter-attack driven off. Then a snowstorm stopped proceedings for several hours. It was 5.15 o'clock in the afternoon before the air was clear enough for the horsemen to start out again.

The daylight was failing when the Lord Strathcona Horse reached the top of the hill overlooking Gagnicourt. They found themselves faced by strongly held machine gun posts, and wheeling they galloped around to the northwest corner of the town.

Lieut. Harvey was in command of the leading troop. Riding ahead of his men he was first to reach the outskirts of the town and found again that the Germans had entrenched a machine gun in front of the town and protected it with wire entanglements. Springing from his saddle, he ran at the post, firing his revolver at the same time. He leapt over the wire, shot the gunner and jumped at the gun. When his men came up he was in possession of the gun. The troop entered the town. For clearing the way for his men the troop leader was awarded the Victoria Cross.

Lieut. Harvey was the first Canadian cavalry man to win the Victoria Cross in this war. Besides this, the highest award a soldier can win, Lieut. Harvey wears two other decorations, the Military Cross and the French Croix de Guerre. The French decoration was conferred on him for being the first to enter the village of Pontain, March 25, 1918, where he effected a connection with the French cavalry. It was at this time that the French, thinking Harvey and his men for German spies dressed in British uniforms, had them arrested and held for several hours, releasing them with many apologies on identification by other British officers.

The Military Cross was won a few days later when by sheer gallantry the Canadian cavalry stemmed the advance of the Germans on Amiens.

Lieut. Harvey was farming and ranching near Macleod, Alta., when war broke out. In the spring of 1915 he joined the 13th Canadian Mounted Rifles as a private, receiving his commission before going overseas. He was with his unit at the time of signing the armistice and just before going into Germany with the army of occupation went to England one day in a fog in an airplane to get the colors for his regiment, under which to march into the conquered country. The colors were presented by Lady Strathcona.

Frederic Maurice Watson Harvey was born in County Meath, Ireland. —Carrie Cornell in the Toronto Star Weekly.

Curry, Not Currie.

That the correct spelling of the name of Canada's commander-in-chief is "Curry," although Sir Arthur has been called "Currie" since the outbreak of the war, has just come to light. On September 16, when Middlesex county presented Sir Arthur and Lady Curry with a gold chest of silver, it was noted that the spelling was changed in a manner at first ascribed to an engraver's error. Later the Warden of Middlesex, John Curry, brother of the general, announced that Canadians at large have been in error during the war and that the Middlesex silverware is accurately designated.

TWO FALLS CONTRASTED

Our Own Niagara, and the Victoria of Rhodesia.

While Niagara Falls still continues to hold their own as a means of honeymooners and other travelers, Victoria Falls, the newest in comparison with another natural wonder of the world, Table Mountain, in Africa, becomes frequented by tourists and visitors. The Falls of Victoria, so named after Livingstone, who discovered the falls in 1855, had first obtained a reputation by followers to accompany him. Then came the railway, and now a railway that crosses the river half a mile below them, and over it will run the proposed route of the Cape to Cairo aerial service, which is to be established this autumn.

Louis Livingston Seaman describes a visit to Victoria Falls and contrasts them with Niagara, as follows:

"Our approach was made by rail from the Indian Ocean at Beira, near the mouth of the Zambezi (the Nile bed of micro-organisms described by James Bryce as the most deadly in Africa), and across the narrow belt of swamp and jungle forming the coast; thence up the gradual slope to the volcanic plateau that forms the real continent of Africa.

"By morning an altitude of nearly 5,000 feet was reached, and a transition from the scrubby, sandy bed, and moisture of the lowlands was experienced that was most grateful and exhilarating.

"This section still abounds with antelope, elephants, lions and other large game, which find excellent cover in the tall, coarse grass or in dense forests and jungles, while in the sandy, silt-like soil of the Kalahari desert, in unsightly herds amid the floating islands of rank vegetation of Nile reeds and papyrus.

"With the altitude, however, came another and less grateful change. The forests were no longer in evidence but in their stead were the arid, birdless plains, with parched hungry vegetation, whose anaemic and stunted growth bears witness to the scarcity of moisture that so conversely affects Rhodesia and the great stretches of veldt far away to the Transvaal.

"Early in the morning of the third day we were suddenly awakened by the guard and treated to a scene of beauty never to be forgotten. Some ten miles distant five enormous columns of vapor were shooting their roseate-tinted shafts hundreds of feet heavenward, while the faint roar of the falls fell on our ears. The great fear—the smoke that sounds—was no longer a mystery.

"Each moment increased the beauty and vividness of the scene. With the first rays of the rising sun came a picture of color of wondrous loveliness. Delicate hints of violet, crimson, and beryl played through the mounting spray as it arose higher and higher, ultimately disappearing as virgin clouds in heaven, while the ever-increasing thunders of the waters lent an added solemnity to the view.

"Hardly could we wait to reach our destination, so great was our enthusiasm. But our hopes were doomed to momentary disappointment, only to be more than realized after a study of the environment; for, notwithstanding their bounds, the first view of Victoria Falls is decidedly disappointing.

"Although nearly a mile in width and 400 feet in height, the grandeur of their proportions is eclipsed by the sudden disappearance of the river, as it lunges into a narrow, rocky fissure extending across the entire width. Only at a single central point is there a breach in this fissure through which the falls can be seen and appreciated in their full proportions, where the converging waters rush madly to the abyss cannot be low. So restricted is this view that there is an entire absence of that awe-inspiring and almost paralysing effect which strikes the visitor dumb with wonder and amazement when Niagara bursts on his near vision. On first sight of the Victoria Falls one involuntarily exclaims, 'Oh, how beautiful!' but they lack the majesty of our grand Niagara.

"No single visit can reveal the fullness of their charms, but repeated excursions must be made to the islands and precipices, their grottoes and palm gardens, their rain forests and projecting cliffs, their arabesque and cataracts and many-sided views of their exquisite setting in the emerald framework of tropic forests, before their indescribable beauties can be appreciated. The fascination of discovering new and diverse charms from different points of view rests on the visitor and becomes one of the greatest attractions.

"Had the falls been in America, the Indians would have named them Minnehaha, Laughing Waters; for like a coy maiden are they in their actions, half concealing, half betraying their beauties, and requiring much wooing before revealing all the loveliness of hidden treasures and charms."

Why Plenty of Water is Necessary for Cows In Hot Weather.

Water is very necessary for cows at all times, because the body itself contains a large proportion of water; the functions of the body cannot properly take place except plenty of water be supplied; and milk contains about 87¼ per cent. water. All this makes water needful at all times to the cow. Flesh, milk, but in hot weather there are added reasons why the cow should have plenty of water. These hot weather additions to the water supply of cows are necessary:

1. To assist in cooling the body. When the animal's body becomes too warm, nature suggests a free supply of water, which lowers the temperature of the body of the animal, making the cow more comfortable, hence she produces more milk.

2. The second reason for supplying plenty of water to cows in summer is the fact that the body excretions are very much increased during hot weather. These excretions consist largely of water, with certain salts, materials in solution, and to supply this waste material, the cow must be supplied with an abundance of water. After proper and abundant feed, the second great need of the cow giving milk is plenty of pure, cool water. Dairymen prefer to locate along the banks of a never-failing stream. Lacking this, a dairy farm must have a good supply of well-water. — Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

OUR GUNS IN FRANCE

SOME FIGURES CONCERNING CANADIAN ARTILLERY.

Sorting the Entire War, One Army at the Front Lost Only Two Cannon In the Battle of Somme Fought and They Were Recaptured Inside of a Few Hours When the Troops Advanced.

GEN. SIR EDWARD MORRISON, who was in command of the Canadian artillery in the war, addressed the Canadian Club at Hamilton the other day—in which city he was at one time a newspaper editor—and gave some information about the work of the Canadian gunners in the war which the people of this country will be proud to learn.

He repeated the statement of Gen. Curry that in the war the Canadians never lost a gun, although the artillery fought in something like twenty-three pitched battles. A newspaper report appeared on one occasion saying that the Canadians had lost a battery, but the facts in that case were that two 18-pounders had been placed close to the firing line trenches for special purposes and were overrun by the enemy, but the Canadian artillery screened the position with fire, the enemy could not remove the guns, and our forces recaptured them with the gun crews lying about them as they had fallen. The general made it himself was the first artillery officer to reach the guns after they had been retaken; they were as they had been on the last moment of the fighting; the slight teth guns and the breech-c one had been smashed by shells—none of which would be useless to the enemy; one gun had a shell in the bore, and the dead gunner lay across the trail with the lanyard in his hand. This gallant exploit of our artillery was one of the incidents of Sanctuary Woods.

The first assault of the Canadian heavy artillery was to knock down, with two rounds, the dominating tower of the church at Pronville, a German observation post which had been previously shot at for weeks without result. This notable feat resulted in the Canadian heavy battery being taken over by the first army; and, as the general puts it, "we did not see it again for nearly two years." And, by the way, this serves to remind us that our guns, sometimes, as well as those of the enemy, fired on churches.

The first Canadian Division went to France equipped with nine batteries of 18-pounders and one battery of 4.5 howitzers—a total of 60 in all. In France a brigade of modern 4.5 howitzers was loaned by the British, until a Canadian brigade arrived after the second battle of Ypres. By this time the artillery was signed the Canadians had 246 field guns and 18 batteries of heavy artillery. On October 1, 1918, the Canadian guns fired 7,000 tons of ammunition in the course of the day, while the Canadian corps fought like fifteen German divisions. In 4 month, at Passchendaele, the Canadian artillery fired nearly ten million shells, which, if caded on railway trucks, would make a train 175 miles long, in about twelve days at Amiens and after, the ammunition needed, if it loaded on motor lorries, end to end, would stretch 37 miles. During the famous battle of Amiens, the battle of Amiens, the Canadian artillery fired 1,424,000 tons of ammunition, or a total of 2,737,058 shells.

The above will give some idea of the work done by the Canadian artillery, and it is a matter of common report that Gen. Morrison deserves great credit for the skill and enterprise which characterized his command. It is said that at the ending of the war they boasted of the finest artillery corps' artillery were the only heavy that kept pace with the march of the infantry, and were deployed on the banks of the Rhine to cover the crossings at Cologne and Bonn on the morning of December 13, 1918. "On the previous day these heavy guns had made the unprecedented march of forty-two miles.

What Is a "Canadian Citizen"?

All Canadian citizens are British subjects, but all British subjects living in Canada are not Canadian citizens. The Duke of Devonshire for example, is not a Canadian citizen, because he is not domiciled here. According to the Immigration Act, the term "Canadian citizen" means: (a) A person born in Canada who has not become an alien or (b) a British subject who has Canadian domicile, or (c) A person naturalized under the laws of Canada who has not subsequently become an alien or (d) a former British subject. "Domicile" is defined as the "place in which a person has his present home, or in which he resides, or to which he returns as his place of present permanent abode and not for a mere special or temporary purpose" — it takes a residence of three years under these conditions for an immigrant to acquire Canadian domicile.

Preserving Chilkat.

The photograph has been requisitioned to preserve the tribal language and folk songs of the Chilkat Indians of Alaska. Louis Shotridge, a member of that tribe, has recently returned to the United States after an absence of four years in Alaska, in the employment of the University Museum at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He has devoted this time to studying the language, traditions and customs of his people, as well as to collecting their folk songs. Shotridge is the first Indian sent on such an enterprise. He has brought with many phonograph records of the Chilkat folk songs and ceremonial chants. Some of these will be transcribed into musical scores. The Chilkats are rapidly taking on the ways of civilization, and, but for the work of Shotridge, their native folk songs might have completely disappeared in time. The Chilkats are fortunate people. What would many give to hear a phonographic record of English as spoken in the days of Chaucer, or the French of Moliores' time.

HUMANISM, EDUCATION AND CULTURE

Famous Canadian Gives Advice to Edinburgh Students.

Very gently does Sir William Osler, the famous Canadian doctor, suggest to the students of the Oxford Classical Association that the study of that cult of the humanities needs chiefly is to be humanized. No man ever praised the classics more than Sir William; the name of Hellas stands no longer for the land of a hero, but as the name of knowledge) or, as more tersely Osler puts it, "Greece, the source of nearly all our literature, nothing worse is the world that is not Greek in origin." Yet those who defend it on the classical association, it is said a little sadly, have to limit their plea to establishing Greek as a "Religion, professor of medicine," and to the classics as "come home with masterly skill. To them the humanities are the true sense, and all of prime importance in modern education. To the students of Greats, Aristotle is known as author of the "Metaphysics," "Politics" and "Poetics," but not as a scientist. Yet he was so pointed out to Darwin and acclaimed by him as the "principle of natural selection" was shadowed forth in Aristotle's "Theory." Even Osler, "Aristotle speaks for the first time the language of modern science, for the first time he seems to have the first and foremost a biologist; his real and lasting influence has influenced profoundly his sociology, his psychology and his metaphysics, and more scientifically "the problems of heredity, of variation, of the development of adaptation and of the struggle for existence." Though encyclopedic in his interests, he was a specialist in embryology unrivalled for 2,000 years. The discovery of a new mode of reproduction in one of the lowest forms of sharks" in the middle nineteenth century to be confirmed. Then Osler searched the examination papers of the school for the old manners through the past decade and found no reference to Aristotle as a scientist. Other cases are almost as striking. Lucretius, the writer of "the origin of the world and the origin of man" which are to be found with the most modern thought; and his conception of "continuity in the working of nature" was recognized among the ancients or moderns"; in fact it singly planned the whole school of literate humanizers. The Greek genius for "the whole" is to grasp what is fundamental in history and philosophy, man's relation to the primal forces of nature and to the universe.

Osler is another side to the picture, the professed scientist. "The 21st century" developed a new science may be her undoing. Specialization, now a necessity, fragmented the specialties themselves. The worker loses all sense of proportion and of the "panacae," living themselves early to research, and their men get into narrowness, far from the main stream. They quickly become hypercritical, and the smaller the field the greater the tendency to dogmatism. "Under specialization, scientific men are in a more parlous state than are the humanists under over specialization. The salvation of science lies in a recognition of a new humanism—the scientia scientiarum' which Plato describes: "Now, all these studies reach the point of intercommunion and connection with one another, come to be considered in their mutual affinities, then I think, it is worth while to pursue them and them have value." Osler accordingly proposed a so-called fourth school in which the principles of philosophy as well as the methods of the various sciences, and in which science is to be illumined by the introduction of literary and historical studies. Science will take a totally different position in this category when the knowledge of its advances is the possession of all educated men.

Many minds are to-day moving towards the conception of the truly cultural education, "as a satisfy list of modern classicism pointed out, the danger is not the pedantic scholarship that they were ancients. In Osler's words, those who wish to understand them best think of them as living men just like ourselves, as men themselves when they walked and talked on the Acropolis. To us of to-day they are living men, with their very low their tentative observations in their first groping attempts and in the moving forces in this world material, and with this out with out fuller correlation of facts, our study of the humanities is of little use.

Recently the Scottsburg board sent up papers of a man, 19, asking exemption because of marriage since August 5, 1918. In due time the papers were returned to the appeal board with the ruling "deferred classification refused. Place can be filled by another."

It is presumed that the appeal clerks wrote a reason for refusal of an appeal for exemption on marriage grounds as the papers instead of the one intended for case.—Indianapolis News.

Impediments.

In one squad you will see a man carrying full pack, including extra shoes and overcoat, and wearing a whole string of condiments, cans much as a Fiji Islander wears a loin cloth. Another man in the same squad will go up his mine house, and carrying only a blanket, gas mask and helmet.—Paris Stars and Stripes.

RAILWAYS IN CANADA

THEY HAVE COST THE HUGE SUM OF $9,500,000,000.

The Government and the People Have Contributed Enormous Amounts of Cash, Not to Mention $4,000,000,000 Acres of Land, Much of It Very Valuable—Roads Are Now Probably Worth $6,500,000,000.

THE people of Canada have a peculiar and intense interest in the monetary aspect of the railway problem. In the first place, they contributed largely to the construction of the railways built after 1880; and, in the second place, they have guaranteed a considerable amount of the railway liability now outstanding. It will be well to have clearly in mind the extent and character of these contributions. Before going into the facts in that regard, however, it should not be forgotten that the railways could not be made for the setting up of a third claim—a claim which is very real and, in the final reckoning, may be recognised as rising above the other two. The money which operates the railways pays for wages, charges and provides for dividends, comes out of the pockets of the whole people. Discussing this question in the Grain Growers' Guide, J. E. Payne puts the matter in this way: "The only ranks first in the order of payments, but is unfortunately the most generally distributed of all the various forms in which money appears. When allotment is made in the ordinary course to taxes, the mind of the average citizen at once turns to customs duties or to municipal rates. To these he is directly charged, and the income tax, which still bears the stigma of novelty, but with which he is likely to become fairly familiar before long, is one which few of us but he thinks at all of the levy arising out of transportation tolls he is apt to assume that it falls only upon those who happen to pay freight bills. But, in fact, it falls practically everything he buys—his food, his clothing, his furniture, and so on — is covered by the included transportation cost. It is there, and the citizen can be exacts paying it, however stilfully it may be eamouflaged. Hence, it is a matter of more serious than that, as will be shown later on.

In 1917, the last year for which the facts are at the moment available, the freight bill of the people of Canada was $210,000,000. That was for railway charges only. The charges for transportation by water would increase the total. By the time is near at hand when the whole of this enormous sum will be brought under a sound and comprehensive system. Properly so, the railway charges might properly be put at $250,000,000 for express toll, bringing the total up to $230,000,000. That would be equal to $30 in round figures for every man, woman and child in the Dominion.

Customs duties in 1917 came well under $150,000,000. Incidence of the transportation tax, as with the customs tax, quite unavoidably includes a large "over and" grant which merchants and others charge on the primary cost of their goods. That is to say, the railroad charges 10 per cent on the top of that is placed the usual "over and" grant. Making due allowance for exceptions, that rate would not exceed even 5 per cent. Let us say, so that our transportation tax at one step amounts to $250,000,000, or $37.50 per capita. This is surely a very substantial reason for popular interest in our railway systems in all ways. Exact figures showing original cost of the railways have not been had. In this situation we are driven back on the best available data in existing liabilities, showing stocks and bonds. The facts in that regard are as follows:—

Stocks	$872,829,995
Debentures (C.P.R.)	$113,155,121
Bonds	$96,005,116
Total	$1,985,119,991

To aid the construction of railways in Canada, the following cash subventions, loans, etc., were made:

By the Dominion	$185,493,914
By the Provinces	$5,437,500
By municipalities	17,914,836
Total	$240,846,645

The loans were not large as a whole, but they have been never repaid and are not included in the foregoing statement. One of the largest of these was a loan of $3,000,000 to late fifties to the Grand Trunk. It was repaid in the early 70's, but the lesser company got no other aid from the Province and never repaid the principal nor interest thereon. Interest rates were pretty high in those early days, and the astounding to realize that the debt, at 6 per cent, compounded for 20 years amounts to $495,000,000, or more than the total cost of the whole Grand Trunk system.

We must add to the one step farther and add the cost of Government railways, the account for which in 1917 would be:

Intercolonial	$131,118,667
P. E. Island	1,165,797.21
Prince Edward Island	11,459,026
T. & N. O.	20,737,832
N. B. Coal and Railway	1,568,727
Total	$319,049,909

Bringing the foregoing accounts together, the final statement would be:

Cost to orig. builders	$1,440,609,588
Subsidies, etc.	240,846,645
Government lines	319,049,909
Total	$2,000,506,143

The last two accounts, having an aggregate of $559,896,554, would represent the actual investment in our railway interests. That is unquestionably a large amount; but it

A Sad Case.

The lieutenant was lonesome for a familiar face. Seeing a chap who looked like the boy who used to deliver groceries at his home, he stepped him and asked: "Do you know who I am?" "No, sir, don't you?"

Adam may or may not have tried his famous Canadian climate, but it is certain that Noah was the first to think of making weather predictions, he had most to go by. The Ark in the time of Noah the gentleman prophesied a long, wet spell, and, after a lot of later weather prophets he had most to go by. Later progressive nations that he took measures to meet the situation. Further than that, Government officials proved that Noah was a 100 per cent. prophet. Many of his forecasts, after years, showing a lower balling average. It is true that meteorologists at times went on that in view of the frequency with which the prognostics failed, the subject should be placed on a scientific basis in order to reach accuracy in the results, but at least to spread a sort of halo of hallowed mystery about the school of this miniature the curse, as it were, of the possible error. So many excuses were instituted, which same have been in more or less successful operation now for many years, with attendants on the Government payroll, as they multiply. Entirely apart from scientific weather observations, however, home-made weather forecasting has persisted as a pleasing pastime for all these years, and on this very day there is a set of rules governing it, more or less recognized by all lovers of weather prophesying. The benefit of those who may be unfamiliar with the rules the Ottawa Yerk Sun has obligingly made a compilation of them, and they are set forth as follows:

When sunshine on high ground and the horizon is unobstructed from all quarters, if the sky is absolutely cloudless, it will be fine for the forty-eight hours.

If it is raining at 10 a.m. rain after seven o'clock in the morning it will continue all day. If it rains after noon it is the indication of a three days' rain.

When it is raining and it brightens and darkens alternately you can look for showers. But with little chance of clearing at sundown.

When the rain ceases and the clouds are still massed in heavy banks there is no sign of fine weather is the patch of blue sky that shows through the rift large enough to make a pair of pantaloons for.

Another sign of continued rain is when the smoke from chimneys hovers low around the housetops. When it ascends straight into the air this indicates clearing weather.

A foggy morning is the sign of the forerunner of a clear afternoon.

A thunder-storm in winter (usually in January or February) is likely to be followed by clear, cold weather. It is also a sign of a thaw. Much breaking up of winter.

A bright lifting near the seashore say a storm is "brewing" when the air is salty, caused by the wind blowing from the sea.

A red or copper-colored sun or moon denotes wind, and a hazy or silvery moon denotes clear, cool weather.

The old Indian sign of a dry month was when the ends of the new moon were nearly horizontal. Some of them resembled a hook on which the Indian could hang his powder-horn. Any deviation from this is a thunderstorm and neuralgia usually are accordant barometers and rain and unchangeable weather by "feeling it in the bones."

And the advice of the old weatherwise is "never go sparking April month without your umbrella."

And then, for the special benefit of those who never can remember anything they read in prose, but delights in sardine and tinny lingoes, the following important formulas are added on to verse:

Red in the morning the sailor's warning;
Red at night the sailor's delight.
Red in the morn a mackerel sky,
'Twill not be many hours dry.
When the rainbow stand by
Know ye that a storm is nigh,
But on the contrary
Means a storm is coming soon,
When it rains before seven
'Twill clear before eleven.

The Red Flag In Hamburg.

Over the Rathaus in Hamburg you may see the red flag flying—you cannot help seeing it. One evening a man among the residents will take a temporary monument to the point it out to you as a sample of how necessary it is going to be done says Samuel Crowther in the Works' Work. At the big gateway of the Rathaus will find a guard of dozen soldiers and sailors standing—or to be more exact, machine-gun guard. They have fixed bayonets and bulging cartridge belts, and to that extent they are militant. But also they are demoralic in that they seldom shave, wear civilian clothes and smoke cigarettes instead of pipes. Further they have none of the smartness and "pep" that a sentry as representing the army is supposed to have. They remind one of the Russian regiments of Russian soldiers, once the revolution had gotten under way, and I think they regarded themselves of the same thing.

Fight to Finish With Miners.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—There is apparently going to be a fight to a finish in the strike of the 300,000 Yorkshire miners. The Coal Controller has told the men's leaders it was impossible to concede their demands. No further conferences with a view to arranging a settlement have been arranged. It is believed the strikers' funds will last only another fortnight, and that then many more million pounds sterling have been spent in strike pay.

Afghan Amir Loses Subsidy.

SIMLA, India, Aug. 12.—The Amir of Afghanistan, under the peace treaty signed with Britain this last week, not only loses his annual subsidy of $600,000 but must pay $5,000,000 in subsidy which it appears he had on deposit with the Government of India. Confiscation of these arrears is a hard blow for Habibullah.

Prime Minister to Meet Prince.

OTTAWA, Aug. 12.—Sir Robert Borden will leave within the next few days for St. John, N.B., to meet the Prince of Wales, who arrives there on August 15.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

How and When to Paint Them Efficiently.

In the Fall the Buildings, Like Machinery, Should Be as Thoroughly Overhauled as Labor Conditions Permit—Broken Windows Should Be Repaired, Dust and Cobwebs Cleaned Away and the Premises Brightened by Cleaning and Whitewash.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

EVERY farmer should care for his farm buildings in such a way as to maintain them in good serviceable condition and so conserve his resources generally. On most farms there are many details in themselves of minor importance, but in the aggregate of tremendous influence. Carelessness of the exterior of buildings is an indication, generally, of the conditions existing in their interior. Slovenly surroundings and general run-down conditions are the hall-marks of ineptitude, and mismanagement.

The farmer may not be able to change the location of his farm, but to a great extent he can control its appearance and general conditions by seeing that the roofs are in good repair and weather tight, the fences in place, gates in order and painted, on hinges, not sagging or dragging on the ground, the latches and hinges of all doors and gates greased and operating freely; no broken lights in the window sashes of the various buildings; the stable fixtures in order, the stanchions and partitions in place, and the stringers and floor in good repair, giving to the whole place the impression that it receives prudent care and regular attention.

Investigation has disclosed the fact that concrete is an ideal material for repairing and making in the hands of a resourceful person on the farm. Publications issued by cement manufacturers as to tools and materials used, aggregates, proportioning the mixture, how to mix, how to plan forms, reinforcement, etc., may be obtained for the asking.

Doors—The ordinary stable door construction of two thicknesses of matched lumber is not satisfactory, because the effect of the warm moist air of the stable on the inside ply of lumber causes it to swell, while the outer lumber, being less affected, causes the door to spring out top and bottom. A panelled door is less affected because the expansion and contraction resulting from atmospheric conditions is taken up by the panels.

To hang a door hold it up against the jambs and mark round with a pencil. Then cut down to these lines. Make it ⅛ narrower and ⅛ shorter. The hinges should be placed about six inches from the top and the lower one ten inches from the floor. The thickness of the casing should be taken from the total width of the hinge, the balance, divided by two, gives the distance the hinge is to set back from the face side of the door. In all cases the hinge should be wide enough to reach across two-thirds of the thickness of the door. Heavy doors should have three hinges. The mortise for the hinge of the door should be cut slightly toward the front, so that the hinge will not strike the jamb.

Setting locks for the door — Iim locks are those that are simply screwed on to the face of the door. Mortise locks are those set into a mortise in the door itself. The rim lock is held in position and marked for keyhole, knob-bar hole, and screw holes. The first two are cut and the bar are bored and the lock screwed into place. The escutcheon and knob plates are put on, and the keeper is then put on to the jamb.

The mortise lock is set into the mortise cut in the door just wide and deep enough to admit it, the face plate of the lock being set flush with the face of the edge of the door. Mark for the knob-bar and keyhole holes. Set the lock and fasten in; the knob plates and escutcheon set, and knobs adjusted. The keeper is then morised into its proper place, flush with the edge of the jamb.

Roof.—See that the roof is tight. Remember that there are shingles and shingles. The old standard size 16 inches long—five butts together to equal 2½ inches — are superior in several ways to the present method of cutting them 20 to 16 inches long, six butts of two inches. Much depends on the way the shingle is manufactured. A roughly cut shingle will not give good service because of its tendency to draw the water up under the weather line by capillary attraction, and the "fuzz" harbors dust, making good bed for moss to start growing. The edging should be smooth and carefully done so that the butts are slightly narrower than the points so as to allow any debris to pass through the joints and not accumulate and start a rot.

Cattle Ties and Mangers — The comfort of the cattle is of great importance as it affects the milk production and their feeding qualities. Whatever type of manger is used simplicity of construction, convenience of feeding and cleaning should be considered.

The swivel of the chain cow-tie should be examined to see if it works freely. In any case apply a little grease to it. Any weak or broken links may be neatly and effectually secured by using a slit-link or a wire link made out of two or three turns of fence wire through the links, allowing the ends long enough to be crossed and wound round the strands in opposite direction after the manner of the lineman's splice. The stanchions, links and swivels should be attended to in similar way. —Prof. John Evans, O. A. College, Guelph.

Field secretaries of the Anti-cigarette League have been working all summer organizing a national campaign to banish all forms of tobacco. It is predicted the movies will be the next to be attacked.

Start Campaign Against Tobacco

WASHINGTON.—The forces which are opposed to the manufacture, sale and consumption of tobacco in any form, have begun a campaign which they hope will result in the prohibition of the use of the weed throughout the country. The three organizations in the campaign are the Anti-Cigarette League of America, the Anti-Cigarette Association of America and the Anti-Tobacco Society of America. The latter organization was founded, according to its secretary, Clarence True Wilson, of Washington, D.C., on the 27th day of May, 1869, at the close of the Civil War, in which, it is said, cigarettes had been used to a considerable extent. Field secretaries of the Anti-Cigarette League have been sent to every state to organize local campaigns against the weed.

STILL GETTING DEFAULTERS

Peterboro, Oct. 10—Although the Dominion Police office here has been closed the Dominion Police have not let up in their hunt for defaulters, and on the advice of Capt. J. J. Graham, chief inspector of the Dominion Police for this district, B. Harrington surrendered to the police. Harrington had just returned from the States and this morning he was fined the customary $250. Captain Graham has been very active lately and no less than six defaulters have surrendered to the police during the last week as a result of his activities.

Belleville Baseball Boys Champions of Ontario

FINAL GAME IN BELLEVILLE RESULTED IN HAMILTON BEING SHUT OUT BY G. T. R. TEAM—LARGE CROWD WITNESSES FINAL GAME—GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

It seems almost too good to be true, yet nevertheless it is a fact, that Belleville is the home town of the champions of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association.

Yesterday afternoon the final game was played here and victory perched upon the banner of the Grand Trunk Railway team. It was some game of ball and was witnessed by a record crowd; in fact it was one of the largest crowds ever assembled within the enclosure. The Harvesters team of Hamilton were the final opponents, they having won the championship of western Ontario. A week ago at Hamilton the Belleville boys took the measure of the Hamilton aggregation to the tune of 5 to 2, and yesterday they applied to them a liberal cost of whitewash—5 to 0. It was confidently expected that the game yesterday would be a fast one, and such it was—at times. Unfortunately the diamond was not in that condition conducive to the best of play, owing to the fact that on Thursday afternoon it rained continuously and also in the early hours of Friday morning. The condition of affairs was quickly cleared by both teams. It was unfortunate that in the first innings an accident happened to one of the members of the Hamilton team. It was while the Belleville team was at bat. Gurry, centre fielder, one of the best players of the visiting nine, was after a hit ball when he slipped and fell in such a manner as to severely sprain his right ankle. He was carried off the field and compelled to retire for the remainder of the game. Trailor was substituted for him and played a fairly good game.

While, perhaps, under all circumstances it would be out of place to specialize any one or two players of the Grand Trunk team, as all members played their best to land the championship, Freddie Goyer, pitcher, is worthy of special mention. In the two games with the Harvesters he had no less than eighteen strike-outs to his credit—seven at Hamilton and eleven yesterday. Mills, behind the bat, is a great acquisition, not only to Goyer, but the team. He certainly is a gilt-edged catcher and is alert in every play. Every member of the team did good work and congratulations are due to each and every one of them. In only two innings did a member of the Harvesters reach third base, but not one reached the home plate, although two attempted it, but were nailed by Mills. In the sixth inning it looked as if they might score, when the bases were full and only one player had been retired. By a fine piece of playing and steady pitching by Goyer the hopes of the Harvesters' admirers for a run were short-lived.

Tufford, pitcher for the visiting team, is a good pitcher, but at critical points he does not appear to have that control of the ball he should have, and in the field at times he was not given the support he deserved. The game was virtually won by our boys in the first inning, when well-placed hits and good base running three runs were made, and two more were added to the score in the sixth inning. These were the only innings in which tallies were made.

Wild Enthusiasm.

Altogether it was a great game and it goes without saying that the spectators were more than delighted with the result and gave vent to their feelings in no uncertain manner. That the citizens are proud of the home team is a mild expression. At the conclusion of the game Goyer was picked up and hoisted upon the shoulders of two enthusiastic fans and carried about the diamond, with the 15th Regiment Band following, playing inspiring airs. The cheering was also hearty.

Good Officials.

Mr. L. Burke of Hamilton was umpire on strikes and balls, and he is the right man in the right place. He is thoroughly impartial in his decisions and not one unfavorable comment was heard in regard to him. Mr. E. Solomon, of Peterboro was umpire on bases and fulfilled that position in a most creditable manner.

The following indicates the play during the game:

Play by Innings.

Harvesters—Precious hit foul on first ball delivered by Gurry, flied to Kelcher. Dean hit to Goyer, out at 1st. Gurry hit to Weir, out at first.

G. T. R.—Ross made safe hit to right field, reaching first. Smith reached 1st on bunt, Ross advancing to 2nd. Weir reached 1st on hit. Ross forced out at 3rd, Smith going to 2nd. Mills made a two-bagger, scoring Smith. Gerow flied to Dean. Kelleher made a three-base hit, scoring Mills and Weir. Whelan flew to McQueen. Three runs.

Second Inning.

Harvesters—McQueen struck out. Sullivan hit to Goyer, out at 1st. Dolman struck out. No runs.

G. T. R.—Symons hit to Tufford, out at first. Goyer hit to Dean, who made

Peterboro Police Inquiry Resumed

Protection Charge Alleged to Have Been Made By License Inspector.

PETERBORO, Oct. 11.—The investigation authorized by the local Board of Police Commissioners to inquire into certain charges against the local Police Force was resumed. The charges are alleged to have been made by Inspector Stewart and reflect on the integrity of certain members of the police force, including Detective S. Newhall. The main charge accuses the police of promising protection to certain local men in event of them undertaking an expedition for the purpose of stealing a large quantity of confiscated whiskey, which was in the home of County Constable A. Moore, acting under instructions received from License Inspector Stewart. The whiskey was seized at Keudry Station where it was dropped off by an early morning C. P. R. express last Spring.

Ray Sullivan, who was alleged to be implicated in this shipment of liquor, was convicted and fined one thousand dollars on that occasion. At the inquiry now in progress Gerald Dunford, a local express man, swore in the witness' box that he not only received money from whiskey runners for bringing whiskey into the city from nearby stations where it was dropped off, but also admitted he received a commission of twenty per cent. from License Inspector Stewart for his part in revealing such cases to the inspector. In Dr. Sullivan case, Dunford said he received two hundred dollars, and in another case in which the fine was five hundred dollars, Dunford received one hundred dollars as his commission from License Inspector Stewart.

Accused the Police.

The charges also accused the police of promising protection to a man named Johnson, imprisoned in the County Jail for a breach of the O. T. A., should he make an attempt to escape while on his way from jail to the Police Station where the trial was to take place. Sergt. Jas. Reid, of the Police Department, swore that he assisted License Inspector Stewart to pour confiscated liquor down a sink in the police station. This is the liquor which the license inspector alleges was conveyed to Chief of Police Thompson's house. Chief of Police Brown, of Sudbury, who at that time was on the local force, is being brought from Sudbury to give evidence on that particular point.

WASHINGTON Oct. 11.—Anticipating attacks on the constitutionality of war time and conflictionist prohibition enforcement legislation, Attorney General Palmer will prepare an opinion which will be transferred to the White House before the bill becomes law.

SIR WILLIAM HEARST
Premier of Ontario, Who Speaks at The Armouries, Belleville, To-night

Arbitrate Purchase Price of G.T.R.

OTTAWA, Oct. 11.—The Government is about to introduce legislation which will protect it in case the Grand Trunk Railway should decide to cease operations. It will be remembered that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway notified the Government on short notice that it would not carry on after a certain date. The Government immediately responded by appointing Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Railways and Canals, as receiver, with power to continue the road in operation. The road is now in operation, but if the Grand Trunk Railway Company were to follow a similar plan the Government would find itself in a much better position if it had the power to treat the Grand Trunk Railway and all its subsidiary railway and other companies as one system. Therefore it is proposed to amend the Exchequer Court Act so that in any proceedings a controlling company can be dealt with along with all the companies controlled.

DENIES ROYALTIES TO PUBLISHERS

Dr. Cody Issues Statement About Mr. Charlton's Charges.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—In reply to assertions by W. G. Charlton at Millverton, Hon. H. J. Cody, Minister of Education, issued a statement in regard to the claim made that advertising rights, a supply of plates, or royalties, had been given to publishers of school text-books. Hon. Mr. Cody gave this an emphatic denial.

He also stated that any delay in sending a supply of text-books to certain localities arose from the exceptional labor situation in the book-binding and printing trades. In connection with a few text-books still in use, for which contracts have expired, the Government was paying the difference between the actual cost and the selling price to pupils until the revised books can be secured.

Sir Henry Drayton Will Represent Kingston

No Opposition Probable in Dominion By-Election to Finance Minister.

KNGSTON, Oct. 11.—It is announced that, as a result of the numerously signed petitions presented to him by influential citizens of Kingston, Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance will be a candidate for the coming by-election in the Dominion House. Official news to this effect came from Sir Henry at Ottawa to W. A. Givens publisher of the Daily Standard, and the announcement of his candidature appeared in the local papers.

Central campaign headquarters have been opened in the Standard Building and the campaign will be officially opened on Tuesday evening next in the City Hall when Sir Henry Drayton, Hon. Arthur Meighen and Senator Robertson will be present. Practically every business man in the city, Liberal and Conservative alike, has signed Sir Henry's petition and his supporters predict his election by an overwhelming majority.

Ex-Mayor Hughes has retired from the field and Sir Henry is thus the only candidate left and will be elected by acclamation on nomination day.

AMELIA CORHAM

The funeral of the late Ms. Amelia Corham, took place on Friday, 10th. After a short service at the house, the remains were taken to Emanuel church where the Rev. Mr. Marshall, pastor of the church, preached a very impressive sermon. He told of the many excellent qualities of the deceased and of her high standing in the church. The remains were then laid to rest in the Belleville Cemetery. Among those who contributed floral tributes were the following:

Anchor—Ladies' Auxiliary Stationary Engineers.

Pillow—Brothers and sisters.

Cross—Vestry and congregation of Emanuel Church.

Star—J. W. Barlow and family

Wreaths—W. Cook; Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Chesher; Employees of Machine Shop of the Springer Lock Works

Hearts—Mrs. C. H. Vermilyea; Mrs. Watkins; Miss Case and B. Hand jr.; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Davis; Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Cooper; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Anderson; Miss Worrell; Canadian Association Stationary Engineers Lodge No. 31.

Sprays—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Earle, Mr. and Mrs. J. Penny; Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Ridley; B. A. Clarke and family; Mr. and Mrs. R. Andrews and Myrtle; Mrs. George Ridley and daughter; Mrs. Holt and family; Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Fairman; Mr. and Mrs. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher; Mr. and Mrs. R. Dunn.

The pall bearers were W. Cook; J. Neale; F. Fairman; D. Lessels; F. H. Chesher and E. Beale.

No candidate will be nominated by the Liberals to oppose Hon. G. Howard Ferguson in Grenville. This was decided at a convention held at Spencerville.

Gov't Will Arbitrate Grand Trunk Purchase

AGREEMENT REACHED FOR ARBITRATION OF TERMS UPON WHICH GOVERNMENT WILL TAKE OVER GRAND TRUNK AND GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAYS.

OTTAWA, Oct. 11.—Negotiations looking to the acquisition by the Dominion of Canada of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railway systems, which have been in progress now for twenty months, have finally resulted in an agreement between the negotiators, subject to the approval of their principals, to resort to arbitration to determine what compensation shall be paid by the country to the present proprietors of the roads. Hon. Arthur Meighen was able to announce to the Commons last night that an understanding had been reached between the Government and Sir Alfred Smithers, chairman of the Grand Trunk Board of Directors, that an agreement to arbitrate should be made, subject to approval, on the one hand, by Parliament, and, on the other, by the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Railway Company. At the same time, the Government has given notice of a resolution by which Parliament will practically sanction the acquisition of the old Grand Trunk system and, consequently, also of the Grand Trunk Pacific, will authorize the Government to proceed to enter into the agreement to submit certain questions at issue to a board of arbitration for decision, and then, to carry out the steps by which control of the two great transportation systems will pass from the present private owners to the Dominion of Canada.

Five Foreigners To Be Executed

Convicted of the Murder of Philip Yanoff, Near Havelock, in June.

PETERBORO, Oct. 10.—There was a most affecting scene in the court-room here when Chief Justice Sir William Mulock pronounced the death sentence upon Tom Konek, Alex Marinfuse, Philip Rotinsky and Samuel Zalauki, Russians, and Michael Bahrt, Austrian, the five foreigners convicted of the murder, near Havelock on June 22nd, of Philip Yanoff in the bunkhouse of the Ontario Rock Company, where they had gone from Toronto to rifle the purpose of robbing the inmates.

The prisoners were ordered to be hanged on the 14th of January, 1920. Chief Justice Mulock almost broke down in pronouncing sentence and his voice was barely audible.

"It is the most painful incident in my official career," he informed the prisoners adding that the recommendation for mercy made by the jury would be forwarded to the proper authorities.

Each of the prisoners was tried separately, and after Bahri and Konek had been convicted (the other three were tried on the same day) and told the story of the crime. They stated that Bahri, who had worked at the bunkhouse previously had taken the others to Havelock, and that Konek had fired the shot that killed Yanoff. Afterwards the others assisted in the robbery, and the $437 secured was divided among the five. They were arrested early the next morning at Indian River.

WEMYSS RESIGNS; BEATTY GETS JOB

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Vice-Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss has resigned as First Sea Lord.

It is announced that he will be succeeded by Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty, Commander of the Grand Fleet.

Vice-Admiral Wemyss was appointed First Sea Lord in succession to Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, in December, 1917.

Strike of Longshoremen Ties Up Shipping

NEW YORK HARBOR SHIPPING COMPLETELY PARALYZED—STRIKE MAY SPREAD—MEN ASK INCREASE FROM 65 CENTS TO ONE DOLLAR AN HOUR.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

New York, Oct. 11.—An extension to the coastwise traffic at every Atlantic port of the longshoremen's strike, which has completely paralyzed New York harbor, appeared inevitable today. John Fricky, chairman of the committee directing the strike, announced that orders for such an extension had been issued, following the action here yesterday of the National Adjustment Commission of the United States Shipping Board, which refused to grant an increase in the coastwise longshoremen's scale from 65 cents to $1.00 an hour.

German Forces Reported To Have Captured Riga

"GERMANY'S NEW WAR" IS FEATURED IN ENGLISH PAPERS—WHEREABOUTS OF GEN. VON DER GOLTZ UNCERTAIN—CONFIRMATION LACKING.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Confirmation of a newspaper report that German forces had captured Riga is being awaited here, but if the disparity of the rival forces is as great as reported in some despatches the success of the attack on the city would not be surprising. Germany's new war is featured in this morning's newspapers, but reports printed here add nothing of importance to the despatches received by the Canadian Press. The whereabouts of General von der Goltz continues to be the subject of contradictory rumors and estimates of the size of the army commanded by Colonel Avalon Bermondt also show a wide divergence.

It was stated in authoritative quarters here this afternoon that a German attack on Riga was carried out on Friday under cover of a heavy bombardment by German guns, forcing the Letts to evacuate the city.

Unconfirmed Report Of Great Sea Disaster

ARCHANGEL RECEIVES REPORT FROM HELSINGFORS THAT BRITISH SHIP HAS BEEN WRECKED ON NORWEGIAN COAST WITH LOSS OF 2,000 LIVES — THOUGHT TO BE BRITISH TRANSPORT FROM ARCHANGEL—BRITISH ADMIRALTY AND LLOYD'S HAVE NO WORD OF DISASTER AND DISCREDIT STORY.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

ARCHANGEL, Oct. 11.—Two thousand lives have been lost in the wreck of an unnamed British ship on the Norwegian coast, according to a wireless despatch received here from Helsingfors.

If the loss of life in the wreck reported in the foregoing despatch is as large as indicated, the disaster will mark a new record in the annals of the sea. It would seem probable that the ship which was wrecked was a military transport bringing British soldiers from the Archangel front, from which port Great Britain has been embarking a large number of men during the last month.

The largest recorded loss of life in a marine disaster occurred when the Titanic was sunk after colliding with an iceberg south of Newfoundland on April 14, 1912, the list of deaths showing 1,503 names.

The Lusitania, sunk by a German submarine May 7, 1915, carried down more than 1200 of her passengers and crew.

When the Empress of Ireland was sent to the bottom in the Gulf of St. Lawrence on May 30, 1914, the loss of life was 1,027.

Neither the Admiralty or Lloyd's have received any information relative to the wreck of a British ship on the Norwegian coast. At these sources the report is discredited.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

Another Liberal Candidate Withdraws

R. J. Emery, Liberal candidate in South Renfrew, has withdrawn from the contest, in his letter to the Secretary of the riding Liberal Association he states that he will support the U. F. O. candidate. He calls upon all Liberals in the constituency to do likewise. This leaves Hon. T. W. McGarry with but one opponent. At the last general election and at the by-election in 1915, when Mr. McGarry was taken into the Provincial Cabinet, he was returned unopposed.

A Wet Whistle

Hartley Dewart, K.C., is keeping up his whistling even if it isn't accomplishing its purpose of sustaining his courage. Despite his praiseworthy efforts, however, his loyal followers are getting into a state where whistling no longer revives them. With nomination now but a few days away, it seems apparent that the Liberal leader will not have candidates in two-thirds of the ridings of the Province. During the past few days several new men have entered the field, but these accessions have been considered by the retirement of others and it is expected that on Monday, when nominations are called for, still others will fall to toe the line.

Dewart Dubious

It must be admitted that the retirement of Liberal candidates in a number of ridings has made the fight of the Government nominees somewhat harder, but it has made the position of the Dewart party in Ontario a rather hopeless one, and there are seasoned old campaigners who are venturing the prediction that Mr. Dewart's following in the next Legislature will be less than the representation of the Farmers' Party. Dewart estimates giving Mr. Dewart not more than half a dozen seats have not been materially changed by the past two weeks of campaigning.

Triumphal Tour

Sir William Hearst's tour of Eastern Ontario has been a reassuring one. In the East the situation has not been complicated by third party candidates to the extent that it has in the western part of the Province, and from present indications the Government forces will come back certainly as strong as they were in the last House, and possibly stronger. Mr. Dewart is out of East Ottawa, Premier Codville and Russell, all French-Canadian ridings, and in West Peterboro the Parliamentary popularity of G. A. Gillespie may hold the seat for the Liberals but Prince Edward appears likely to go to R. A. Norman, who held the seat previous to 1914. West Ottawa is another Liberal seat that seems destined to fall into the Conservative column. In West Northumberland, the issue is a straight one between Liberal and Conservative, and Sam Clarke, the veteran of Hon. Government days, has a hard row to hoe.

North Solid

Reports from Northern Ontario are exceptionally promising and the Government workers there have sent down promises of a solid block of Government supporters. The Liberals hold but two seats in the North Country in the last House—Sturgeon Falls and the new riding of Cochrane. In the former, A. A. Aubin, a former member, who went under in 1914 upon the bilingual issues which had stirred up the large French-Canadian vote there, is depended upon to retrieve his defeat and oust Zotique Magnan. In Cochrane, the Liberals have in Lang, the late member and a returned soldier, a very fine candidate, but the Conservatives have built up an efficient organization and expect to win.

Nomination Meeting

At the City Hall in this city on Monday nomination of candidates for West Hastings will take place. Mr. W. H. Mathews, returning officer, will from 12 to 2 o'clock receive nominations, after which speech making will be in order. There are at present three candidates in the field, namely W. H. Ireland, Conservative, Colonel O'Flynn, Liberal, and J. W. Galloway, Labor and U.F.O.

In the Village of Madoc on Monday morning the Conservatives of North Hastings will meet to select a candidate. Only one name is mentioned, namely Mr. R. J. Cook, the present popular member. There is at present no other candidate in the field.

The nomination for East Hastings will be held at Plainfield. There will possibly be only two candidates in the field, namely, S. Grant, Conservative, and H. K. Denyes, U.F.O.

TO-NIGHT'S MARKET

Our country friends were this morning in large numbers upon the market. While much farm and garden, also dairy products, were offered for sale in considerable quantities, it did not have the effect of lowering prices. Fresh butter sold readily at 65c. per pound, and strictly fresh eggs brought the same price. Dressed poultry was quite plentiful. Chickens sold at from $1.75 to $2.50 a pair; ducks from $2.50 to $3.50 a pair, according to quality, and geese from $2.50 to $3.50 each. Garden products were disposed of at lucrative prices.

Card of Thanks

The brothers and sisters of the late Miss Amelia Corham wish to thank their many friends and neighbors for kind expressions of sympathy extended during her illness and bereavement. Also for the many beautiful floral tributes.

Sporting News

BOXING BOUTS

At the City Hall last evening a large number of the sporting element of the city assembled to witness boxing bouts which were of an interesting nature.

The proceedings opened with a three round bout between L. Carnahan and S. Carson of Belleville, two young aspirants of the fistic art, both of which showed up to considerable advantage.

Irish Jordon of Peterboro, champion of the Canadian Corps, France in 1918 and James Barry of this city boxed six rounds. Although the latter has been out of the game for some time he showed up well and during the bout surprised his friends. With training, Jimmie will be able to show the boys of them how to use the gloves. The bout was declared a draw.

The chief attraction was a 10-round bout between Stanley Caplon of Toronto and Jack Jarvis of Buffalo, both being in the light weight class. They went hard for the full ten rounds and both at the finish appeared to be nearly all in. At times they mixed up well but were inclined to get rough, which necessitated several admonishments by the referee.

Over one hundred have entered the University of Toronto Jubilee Tournament which opened at Toronto yesterday.

Teachers Meet In Annual Convention

The Annual Convention of the teachers of South Hastings, Belleville and Trenton was opened on Thursday, October 9th, in the Assembly Room of Queen Mary School.

After the Scripture Reading from I Corinthians, 12th chapter and prayer conducted by the Rev. W. H. Wallace, Mr. F. S. Deacon, Chairman of the Board of Education, Belleville welcomed the teachers as a character forming and citizen building body. He stated that the relation of teacher to pupil should be more as parent, where as in his day, he approached the teacher with fear and dread. He urged that the teachers treat music with more care, as a subject on the curriculum and give the child a wider knowledge through teaching the fundamentals of music. Also, that Biblical Instruction be attended more carefully as there was a danger arising from our alien population. Mr. Deacon also thought the teachers should be real social leaders in the community.

Nominations of Press, Resolution and Nomination Committees were then made, followed by the reading of the minutes and Treasurer's Report by Mr. C. I. Frederick.

HEALTH OF PUPILS

The Convention was then favoured by an instrumental solo by Miss Violet Wheeler, a pupil of Queen Mary School, followed by an address by the City School Nurse, Miss Sinclair, regarding the health of children attending school. Co-operation of teachers with parents in care of the bodies of the pupils was necessary. Symptoms of Defect of Vision, Nose and Throat Obstructions, Adenoids, Chorea and Decayed Teeth could be discerned much more readily by the teacher. Simple tests could be made by the teacher and the matter placed before the parents for attention. In inspecting children in Belleville, Miss Sinclair had found 73% with decayed teeth. There should be Dental Inspection in schools. Nervous disorder in children should be attended, as run down children are open for infection.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE

In the afternoon session, the teachers were divided into sections, dealing with the difficulties of each grade; while the High School teachers were addressed on the topic of "Household Science in High Schools," by Miss MacVannell of the Peterboro Normal School. By the training of Household Science, better homes are made. The child at twelve years is more eager and active to learn. The parent has not the time to devote to the proper instruction. Hot lunches in school aids discipline, inculcates habits of cleanliness and orderliness, and makes the most period a social hour. The teaching of Household Science makes the child systematic and technical, affords disciplinary, mental, physical and moral training; while at the same time it is the real life work of the child.

The subject was then discussed by the teachers, most of whom felt that Household Science was quite necessary in our rural schools.

In the evening, the teachers were very agreeably and pleasantly entertained by Misses Tuite and Potter and Messrs. Staples and Anglin.

CLOSING SESSION

The closing session opened on Friday morning at 9 a.m. Scriptural Reading of I Corinthians, 13 chapter and Prayer was given by Rev. W. E. Elliott.

The President, Miss F. Nelson, of Trenton, gave an excellent address on "Modern Education," which emphasized the great need and demand of the present for a broader and more uplifting education, physically as well as mentally.

This was followed by Miss MacVannell on "Education in the Home." No nation can rise above its home without good homes. In the family life should be worked out the ideals of home living and the development of each member of the family the main study.

To assist this no education can be too broad. There is a great need of a connecting link between the home and school. The end of education is life if it does not bring about an all round development of mind and soul. There must be a strengthening and enriching of the personal life in the home. We owe better homes to the rising generations and to accomplish this, we must realize the responsibility of the citizens in this great commonwealth.

Miss Eva Bird, the representative to the O. E. A., gave a most interesting and thought report which was certainly appreciated by the Association.

Miss Christie Turtle gave a couple of Readings, which spoke well for the talent of Queen Mary School.

Inspector H. J. Clarke, B.A., in his remarks to the teachers pointed out the many ways of increasing the efficiency and attaining a high standard in our schools.

The reports of the several committees were brought in.

Sandy Grant A Winner In East Hastings

INTERESTING MEETING AT FOXBORO ADDRESSED BY THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE AND THE CANDIDATE—BENEFITS TO AGRICULTURE FROM PROGRESSIVE METHODS OF HEARST GOVERNMENT—FARMER ORGANIZATIONS WHICH HAVE GONE INTO POLITICS HAVE ALWAYS FAILED—MISTAKES OF THE U. F. O.

The popularity of Sandy Grant, the efficient representative for East Hastings in the Legislature is a great fact that not even the prospects of a wet night could prevent a large and representative audience from greeting him at Foxboro last evening to hear the issues of the day discussed from the public platform. The no more popular citizens in East Hastings than Sandy Grant, honest and upright in all his dealings, and genial and considerate to everybody. During the eight years of legislative service to the constituency he has served the citizens faithfully and well, with the welfare and advancement of East Hastings always uppermost in his mind as well as the best interests of the Province as a whole. The meeting held last evening in Gowanlock's Hall, Foxboro, was interesting and instructive, and the deep interest taken in the various addresses evidenced the fact that the electors of East Hastings are convinced that in this campaign there are issues far more important than the personal of parties or candidates, and the greatest of all is the continuation of efficient and stable government as a curb to the tide of unrest which is sweeping over the entire world.

HON. GEORGE S. HENRY,

Who Spoke at Foxboro Last Night in the Interests of Sandy Grant, M.P.P., Hearst Candidate, for East Hastings

With Mr. Grant on the platform was the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Geo. S. Henry, who in a clear and logical manner gave a frank and free statement of the businesslike and progressive administration of the affairs of the Province of Ontario, by the Government of Sir William Hearst, with especial reference to agriculture. No one who listened to the Minister of Agriculture, a farmer himself, could harbor any doubts as to the friendly attitude of the Government toward the farming community, and the realization of its importance as one of the greatest factors in the welfare of the province as a whole.

A feature of the meeting was the presence of ladies and their interest in the discussion, showing that the ladies now that they have been accorded a complete franchise by the Hearst Government intend to inform themselves fully on the public questions of the day.

Mr. Wesley Henderson was elected chairman and filled that position very acceptably. He extended a hearty welcome to all present, especially the ladies, whom all were glad to see at public meetings formerly monopolized by the men, taking an interest in public affairs, and doubly welcome would they be at the polling booths on election day exercising their franchise in the interests of good government. Mr. Henderson paid a high tribute to the honesty and efficiency of the candidate, Mr. Sandy Grant, who had been such an able representative of East Hastings. He had known him all his life and could say nothing but good of him.

The Conservative Candidate

The candidate, Mr. Sandy Grant, was then called upon, and was greeted with applause. In a brief address he welcomed those who had turned out despite the threatening weather, and gave an account of his stewardship as representative of East Hastings in the Legislature, and a supporter of the Hearst Government. He had represented the constituency for eight years, the first time being elected by acclamation. Of his opponent in this election he had nothing to say in disparagement, they had always been the best of friends, and as far as he was concerned would continue to so before and after election. Mr. Grant said that in his humble way he had tried to represent the constituency to the best of his ability, to use all alike, regardless of politics, representing the whole people, Conservative and Liberal alike. If a Liberal asked a favor he tried to grant it with as good grace as if it were a Conservative who asked, and if re-elected he would continue to serve the electors in the same manner. He referred to some of the criticisms made against the Government, especially as regard the roads policy. Good road plans had been formulated by the Good Roads Association, composed of eighty per cent farmers, of which Reeve Vermilyea, was a past-president. These plans had been adopted and were being worked out by the government. Mr. Grant then explained the good roads system, provincial and county, and their application to local roads. One road he had been criticised for was not in East Hastings at all and he had had nothing to do with it. Mr. Grant briefly reviewed the record of the Hearst Government which he said was the best this Province ever had. In the matter of rural schools in Hastings in 1904 the Government appropriation had been only $4,000, while this year it was $30,000, showing that in the vital matter of education the government was abreast of the time in providing that the children of the citizens should be of. To get the very best education possible to fit them to get the most and best out of life.

In closing Mr. Grant told the electors present that if they considered him worthy of their support to mark their ballots for him and if elected he would do all in his power to serve the constituency faithfully.

Mr. Grant's popularity was evidenced by the applause which followed his address.

Minister of Agriculture

The next speaker was the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Geo. S. Henry, who was greeted with applause, and listened to with attention throughout, showing that the audience appreciated the good work which the Farmers' Minister has been doing in the interest of the advancement of the agricultural community. Hon. Mr. Henry said that he did not like a stranger coming to Thurlow as he had been a member of the executive of the Good Roads Association for many years, associated intimately with Reeve Vermilyea who never tired of praising the township of Thurlow and explaining its good points. He was pleased to speak in the interests of Mr. Sandy Grant, who was one of the most efficient members of the Legislature and always active and persistent in seeking the advancement of East Hastings.

Mr. Henry sketched the record of the Hearst Government, which circumstances had made an essentially war administration, but though faced with the tremendous responsibilities and duties occasioned by the great war had still found time for an amazing amount of legislation of a progressive character. The Hearst Government upon its war record alone was worthy of unbounded confidence, and although containing only a population of about one-third of the nation as a whole, by its war record stands prominent in the British Empire. None had done better, none had done as well. Nearly half the men sent overseas from the Dominion of Canada were sent from Ontario. The call for war services were many and manifold but Sir William Hearst, with a keen conception of the minds of the people and their great concern to win the war at all hazards, had taken the lead in every war effort and measure, and so fully to every demand, backed by his colleagues and the people alike.

No section of the population had responded more quickly and efficiently to the call for war service than the rural districts. The men and women of the land responded nobly to the call for increased production, and no praise was too great for the women in the farm homes who even went into the fields when help was scarce.

Rural Depopulation

Hon. Mr. Henry paid some attention to statements made by Mr. Morrison secretary of the U.F.O., in regard to depopulation of the farming communities. Mr. Morrison's strictures inferred that we are a decadent race, basing his arguments on blue book figures. Mr. Henry refuted this by showing that the capacity of the farming population of Ontario was greater than ever as shown by the increased production during the war. True, there had been a migration to the west of the sons and daughters of Ontario, but they were building up a greater Canada in the Prairie provinces and had not deserted agriculture. Then again this was an age of machinery on the farms and thousands in the cities who were seeking agricultural machinery and implements should be counted in the farm population of to-day, for they were surely helping in the production of farm produce of all kinds.

Farm Co-Operation

It had been charged by the U. F. O. that the Government was forming farmers clubs to counteract their organization. Co-operative farmers clubs had been formed by the Government before the U. F. O. was thought of. The Ontario Agricultural Department was not antagonistic to the U. F. O. except when that body became a political organization. The Department was prepared to co-operate with them in every way as a business organization. The Farmers Club could not stand up if it goes into politics, said Mr. Henry, who proved by the past history of all such movements that they succeeded as purely business organizations but failed when they went into politics.

Fowler Dairyman, an agricultural publication of international repute, said that no farm organization has ever lived when politics was allowed to supercede business in its conduct. As soon as they begin to play politics their usefulness ends. Farmers organizations in this province before had ended in politics and had disappeared, and the same thing will happen now if the farmers do not wake up.

District Representatives

District Representatives, County Agricultural Schools, County Classes, Field Crop Competitions, Stock Judging Classes, School Fairs, etc., are their benefit to agriculture were enlarged upon by the speaker, who pointed out the encouragement of the study of agriculture in the schools and the greater interest taken by the

Mrs. E. Wabers, of Revlea, B.C., writes, praising Gin Pills for the immediate relief given by those splendid Pills. Mrs. Wabers says:

"I advise people who have not used Gin Pills to try them. I have been troubled for years with weak kidneys, and one box of Gin Pills cured me. I recommend them as the best kidney and bladder pill."

Derangement of kidneys or bladder is as very serious fact, for the first sign of pain in side or back is a hint that with Gin Pills should begin. The duty of the kidneys is to cleanse the blood. If weak or inactive, uric acid and other poisons and waste are stored in the joints and muscles, causing inflammation, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, constant headaches, dizziness, floating specks before the eyes, specks of stone in the bladder, general debility and lassitude. If you have any of these symptoms, get Gin Pills at once. Free sample on request. At druggists or dealers, 50c a box. Money refunded if not relieved.

Women's Institutes

A high tribute was paid to the work of the 900 Women's Institutes during the war, which were always the centre for patriotic effort and comprised 300,000 women.

U. F. O. Opposition

Hon. Mr. Henry said he could not understand why the U.F.O. party candidates in the field against Hearst candidates. They were not in sympathetic attitude of many of the U.F.O. candidates, who had been in evidence at a Conservative gathering at Belleville addressed by Sir George Foster. There was not one plank in the platform of the Conservative Government or Hearst Government, or any other party, which it should not have done or might be interesting to know why it should not have done so, but the U.F.O. party candidates were silent on this point. Their speakers, Said sentiments are good, but nothing tangible or definite. Before the Government could act it must have money on expenditure, but it is of no real value for it and it results in waste. The Government could not spend still more money on roads, with the certainty of getting even better results. President Halbert, of the U.F.O. who said he spoke for 60,000 farmers of Ontario, backed an appeal to the government on account of the development of Provincial Highways and asking that the back roads be attended to first. The Government had relieved the rural districts of the heavy burdens of main roads, the principle arteries of traffic and the arranged system of main roads, and the same on the side roads could be given full attention. Without the county system the Government could not have undertaken the heavy work it was now doing. The main road construction and maintenance would fall upon the counties. Eighty per cent of the traffic was on twenty per cent of the highways. The Government good road system showed up by the way, and had been the beginning of a great development, and in a decade or two the system here would be second to none. In the former city for in the city and time of the year and go any side of the province.

Ontario Finances

The finances of the province were then discussed by the Minister, who showed by the annual statement in accord with that of the Hon. Liberal Government which said that with an annual revenue of $20 million the province was in the use of its resources. Ninety million revenue this year was the government's record on all sources of revenue, taxation, sixty per cent of expenditure backed up by assets. The critics who wailed of Ontario's liabilities as a menace forgot to mention her assets which many times offset the liabilities.

Education

The education department was next taken up and tribute paid to Hon. Dr. Cody who stands out as a leader as an educationalist. Other departments of government were then dealt with showing the benefits conferred by progressive legislation, including the Health Department, which by its free distribution of medicine had reduced materially the death rate from typhoid fever and diphtheria in the province. Brigadier-Gen. Hoar, who recently taken into the service, would no doubt be appointed Minister of Health.

Other matters of interest to the children, mental and dental inspection in the schools, and other important matters were explained and dealt with at great length.

Hon. Mr. Henry thoroughly explained the O.T.A., its origin, working and the referendum ballot.

The present voters list was the most complete, comprehensive and up-to-date ever prepared in the province and was more correct than the old system.

Mixed-up Campaign

Closing Hon. Mr. Henry said this seemed a somewhat mixed-up campaign with two parties and one organization. The U. F. O. had not for seeking election and was not considered a party even by themselves. Mr. Drury has not the confidence of his own party let alone the people of the province. The U. F. O. have a special platform of development, of revolution of present system, but no program of reforms, no leader and no ambition to form a government.

WOMEN ENDORSE HEARST.

At a mass meeting of women held in North Bay a resolution was passed on motion of Mrs. H. M. S. Detlor, seconded by Mrs. Wm. Anderson, expressing confidence in Sir William Hearst and endorsing his policy, commending his plans for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, for the development of the North, for mothers' pensions and on the housing problem. Mrs. S. G. E. McKee presided at the meeting. Mrs. McKee was president for some years of the Dominion W. C. T. U. and has always taken an active part in all movements for the welfare of women. Mrs. Detlor, who moved the resolution, has been an official of the W. C. T. U. for many years, acting as provincial secretary. If the women are so strongly for Sir William Hearst, who can be against him?

HEAR HEARST TONIGHT.

At Belleville Armouries tonight Sir William Hearst will address the citizens of Belleville and vicinity, and no one should miss the opportunity of hearing the Premier of the banner province of the Dominion of Canada.

Sir William Hearst is Premier of the Province of Ontario, of which every loyal citizen is so justly proud. He is the Premier for the Whole people and not merely the representative of one party, and as every citizen can be proud of Ontario, its war record and its clean and efficient business administration, so must they be proud of Sir William Hearst, the Premier of Ontario, regardless of shades of political opinion. The world over the name of Sir William Hearst, Premier of Ontario, is a symbol of high ideals in government for the people by the people.

The citizens of this district will welcome their Premier with a just pride in their Province and their chief executive.

Let there be a rousing rally to meet the Prime Minister and show appreciation of his splendid achievements and outstanding services for Ontario, Canada and the Empire.

WIDOWS' PENSIONS.

Speaking of the Ontario Government's announced intention to provide for Widows' Pensions, the Toronto Globe says:

It was expected that a bill for this purpose would be introduced at the last session of the Legislature, the Government having announced before the session that inquiries were being made, but nothing more was heard of it until the assertion this week by the Prime Minister that a measure is being drafted. The public will draw its own inferences from the delay of this announcement until the eve of the election.

The Globe is very unfair in stating that the announcement of Widows' Pensions was delayed until the eve of election. Premier Hearst definitely announced at Marmora picnic on August 30 that a bill would be prepared providing pensions for widows, and the Globe reporter, who was present on that occasion so reported, as did the other newspaper representatives present. The Globe knows that this legislation has been foreshadowed for some time and has been definitely announced by the Premier on many platforms.

VICTORY IN DEFEAT.

One of the chief causes of the insorganization in the Liberal party in Ontario as shown by the campaign developments is the vindictive policy pursued by the non-Unionist Liberals in penalizing prominent Liberals who cared more for the safety of the Empire and the welfare of the Canadian soldier boys overseas than they did for the empty symbols of partyism. Dewart's devotion to the Liberal leadership in Ontario and the selection of Mackenzie King as Dominion Liberal leader, are outstanding instances of the policy of vengeance, dictated by the little Canadian Liberal wing at Ottawa. Mr. Proudfoot was dethroned as provincial leader as the result of the same conspiracy and even denied renomination as Liberal candidate in his constituency. Other Liberal candidates who considered the interests of the soldiers above the demands of an unpatriotic partyism have been similarly disciplined in this campaign. The best thing that can happen to the Liberal party in Ontario and in all Canada is the decisive defeat of the Dewart clique, which will show to all Canada that the men with the knives can not rule the Liberal party and must not rule Canada. All eyes are upon loyal Ontario, which can point the way to a new and greater Liberalism which will rise out of the ashes of defeat and be a power in the land. Party Government is the best and only system of Government which has been devised to date, and it will be to the interests of both parties that the avengers and wreckers are thoroughly discredited and routed, as they can be in this election if patriotic Liberals who love Canada first and partyism last will do their full duty and relegate to private life the Dewart who is in favor of a Canada independent of the glorious British Empire, and the rest of the clique of which he is a willing tool.

CRISP COMMENT

The charge made recently by Mr. J. M. McMillan, U. F. O. orator, that the soldiers' overseas pay sheets had been padded with the names of 22,000 soldiers who had never enlisted, at a cost to the country of $20,000,000, seems to have been dismissed with an emphatic denial by the authorities. It should not rest with that. People with such fertile imaginations should be made to prove their statements to the hilt, or suffer the fate of common slanderers.—Hamilton Spectator.

× × ×

Rev. Solomon Jacobs, Chief Rabbi of Toronto, interviewed by a representative of the Toronto World in regard to the Dewart charges, said "Anyone who believes that man is foolish. We have applied this year, as in others, for permission to import wines for sacred uses, and it is nothing but an unfortunate coincidence, taken full advantage of by Mr. Dewart, that the least should take place so close to an election."

× × ×

There is no necessity for a labor candidate in West Hastings. The workingman will be well represented in the Legislature by W. H. Ireland, always a friend of labor, and in the Cabinet by a Minister of Labor, whose duty it will be to look after the interests of the workingmen of Ontario.

× × ×

Acknowledging that he has no chance against Hon. Tom McGarry in South Renfrew, the Liberal candidate has retired from the contest, and advises Liberal electors to vote for the U. F. O. candidate. In all probability the U. F. O. candidate will also retire for the electors have an abiding faith in the Provincial Treasurer, who has proved himself such a worthy son of Old Renfrew.

The Globe says it knew that wine was permitted for Jewish festivals in previous years. So did Hartley Dewart know, and his recent explosion is only the result of spontaneous combustion of election gas.

× × ×

The selection of a Baptist minister as U. F. O. candidate in North Victoria is another evidence of the political scheming which is going on in an effort to defeat Hearst candidates. The candidate in question is not a farmer, but a clergyman, and has always been a Liberal. The U. F. O. rampart of "farmers only and no politicians" has thus been penetrated by the tricksters whose policy is "anything to beat the government."

Sandy Grant A Winner In East Hastings

All they talk of is the possibility of being the balance of power in the next Legislature of which there is no possible chance.

Stem Tide of Unrest

The one issue was the continuation of good government in Ontario and the renewal of confidence in Sir William Hearst and his government. These are strenuous times, great unrest is abroad, doubts and uncertainties are being sown among the people by pessimists that everything is going wrong and that the governments are to blame. An overwhelming vote for Sir William Hearst will put at rest much of this feeling of doubt and uncertainty and unrest and Ontario can get back in her stride and all pull together with renewed confidence and ambition for greater progress than ever.

By supporting Sandy Grant, the representative of the Hearst Government the electors of East Hastings can help in the reconstruction and put at rest forever all time the fault-finding calamity makers who are all destruction and no construction.

At the conclusion of his interesting and instructive address Hon. Mr. Hearn was liberally applauded.

The meeting closed with a short address from Miss Gowsell upon the temperance question, plain, pointed and interesting. Miss Gowsell conveyed to Hon. Mr. Henry the kindliest feelings and best wishes of the women of Thurlow.

With the singing of the National Anthem closed one of the best public meetings ever held in East Hastings, and it is very evident that the great mass of the thinking electors are going to mark their ballot for the popular member, Sandy Grant, and a continuation of the good government of Sir William Hearst. East Hastings electors have no mind to swap horses in the stream, particularly in the troubled stream of world-wide unrest which prevails today as the reaction from the war.

PUT VIM IN JADED MUSCLES

by stimulating and arousing the circulation with light applications of Absorbine, Jr., rubbed in thoroughly. This invigorating liniment acts quickly and surely. It is fragrant and pleasant to use—leaves no greasy residue on the skin.

An Absorbine, Jr. is a powerful germicidal as well as a liniment. It is effective for prophylactic and asepsis use; it destroys the germs in cuts and sores. It may be diluted and used successfully as an antiseptic and germicide for the mouth and throat.

Athletes will find it efficient for limbering sore, stiff muscles. A good formula for a rub-down is one ounce of Absorbine, Jr. to a quart of water or witch hasel.

It is composed of vegetable extracts and essential oils and is positively harmless. Get a bottle today and keep it in your desk, in your traveling bag, in your medicine cabinet or in the side pocket of your automobile. It is health insurance of a high type.

Latest Type Of Tourist Cars

One of the Features in Canadian National Railways' Daily Service

Toronto-Winnipeg-Vancouver

Toronto-Winnipeg-Vancouver

The Canadian National daily trans-continental train, Toronto-Winnipeg-Vancouver, made its initial trip from Toronto, with one of the very latest type of steel tourist cars as part of its equipment, the first of an order of twenty such cars in whose construction every point has been considered for the safety and comfort of passengers. This modern type of steel car, with anti-telescopic device and similar design to the standard sleeping coach, the exception being that are upholstered in leather instead of plush.

Electrically lighted throughout, all berths, upper and lower, are provided with berth lamps, a new feature for this class of car is that lamps have been installed under the seats in aisles of the car, so that when the ceiling lamps are turned out for the night light may be provided under berth curtains, a great convenience for passengers when going through the car.

Phosphorous push buttons can be readily seen in the dark, should the passenger require to turn on the light or ring the bell, when the berth is in darkness.

A safety feature introduced is a device for holding down the upper berth which precludes any possibility of the upper berth occupant when in use. Separate berth curtains are provided so that passengers in the upper berth will not disturb passengers in the lower.

The kitchen has the latest steel range facilities for washing dishes, and lockers for storing linen, china and food. Lavatories have received special attention and provide greater convenience than the older type. An electric thermostatic heating control can be so adjusted as to regulate the temperature of the car, thus preventing overheating.

Thus with the introduction of the daily service of the Canadian National lines between Toronto-Winnipeg-Vancouver is the added convenience of the very latest type of tourist cars, for second class passengers who can enjoy a transcontinental trip in every comfort at minimum expense. Itd

Jewish Celebration Wine Was Not Unrestricted, as Charged.

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—The statement made editorially by a morning paper that the Ontario License Commission had placed no restrictions on the amount of liquor to be obtained by any one person in connection with the recent Jewish religious ceremonies is contradicted by J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Commission.

"The understanding when the Jews' request was assented to," declared Mr. Flavelle," was that the quantity supplied should be one bottle to every Habbi and approved by Mr. Stone, the special dispensing agent. Each bottle contained only 26 ounces, 26 ounces making a pint. We have been informed by the dispensaries that only the regular quantity mentioned by Mr. Dewart were obtained, they were irregularly obtained."

FREED AFTER SERVING 10 YEARS PUNISHMENT

MAN CONVICTED OF MANSLAUGHTER IS EXONERATED AFTER NEW TRIAL

A case which deserves much thoughtful consideration is that of Wm. H. Barron, 103 Morgan Street, Toronto. For ten years Mr. Barron suffered the agonies caused by Rheumatism. At times he was bound hand and foot by the grip of Rheumatic pains. On the advice of a friend he gave Fruit-a-tives a trial and used T.R.C.'s.

And what he has to say—

"I have been a sufferer from Rheumatism for ten years. Have been so bad at times I could not move hand or foot for months. A friend advised me to try Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules, and I have been thankful ever since. They worked wonders for me, and I have never felt any return of the disease."

It's practically impossible to obtain evidence stronger than this testimonial, and a word to the wise is always sufficient. If you suffer, have a new trial—use T.R.C.'s.

Ask your Druggist or write us for our new booklet; it is interesting and costs you nothing. (Templeton, 142 King West, Toronto). 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. Local Sole Agents for Belleville, Dolan, the Druggist, 352 Front St. Phone 126.

A PLATFORM OF PROGRESS

The policies upon which Sir William Hearst will ask for people of Ontario to pass judgment are set out under the following headings:

(1) The greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every phase and form;
(2) The faithful enforcement of the people's verdict on the liquor question;
(3) Vigorous support of Hydro-Electric development and cheap light and power for our farmers;
(4) Conversion of certain railway lines into Hydro-Electric lines;
(5) Good roads reaching every part of Ontario;
(6) A pension fund for mothers;
(7) Direct representation of labor in the Cabinet;
(8) Establishment of a minimum wage;
(9) Unification of the labor laws of Canada on a just and equitable basis;
(10) Such further labor legislation within Provincial jurisdiction as may arise out of the findings of the National Industrial Conference and the International Labor Conference;
(11) Honest accommodation for industrial workers;
(12) Special consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation;
(13) A new era for education, providing technical and agricultural instruction throughout the province;
(14) Improvements of transportation facilities in Northern Ontario;
(15) Conservation of our timber resources and encouragement to mining;
(16) Measures to reduce the high cost of living;
(17) Protection of the public health, generous assistance to hospitals and charities, and special care of mental defectives.

NO CHANCE FOR SUCH A LEADER.

(Toronto Mail and Empire)

Mr. Dewart seems to forget that he is under observation. As leader of the Opposition he stands in the limelight, and faults that might escape notice in the conduct of one of the rank and file politicians have a swollen and disfiguring appearance in the leader. A shrewish tongue and a spirit of ill-will towards opponents are a poor political capital for even the humblest in public life nowadays, and the man who has little else to offer cannot hope to win the hearts or votes of electors. Recklessness of accusation is another fault of Mr. Dewart's. Still another is his habit of crying "Scandal!" where there is no scandal.

His limitations are pretty well known to the people of Ontario, for in his three years in the Assembly he has given free exhibitions of his animus and unfairness towards political opponents. Unfortunately for himself he has given no evidence of capacity for public service, and as for constructive statesmanship no trace of it can be found in the many speeches he has delivered in the House and on public platforms. He acts like a man who is unaware that popular intelligence is a thing to be reckoned with by the ambitious politician. The people of Ontario are shrewd and well informed, and they know a great deal more about the merits of the Hearst Government than apparently Mr. Dewart suspects. Very possibly the mass of the voters have better political information and better political judgment than Mr. Dewart. Having looked him over, having formed their estimate of him in the "work-out" for this campaign, having noted how fretful and how weak he is in the actual contest, many of his own party are taking no chances on him. He can bring upon the work of the Government no telling criticism, for the reason that it is work deserving of the highest praise and is so appreciated by the people.

Government War Record.

The Ontario Government would have been entitled to the public gratitude had it done no more than keep the Province from losing ground in war time. But it not only held Ontario through the war and found means to establish and maintain a great military hospital in England, and to send supplies and comforts to our men on a very large scale, but it also pushed Ontario forward in that time of strain. In education, agriculture and industry it marked new points of advance and its services to temperance will be remembered by every true friend of temperance. The record of the Government is as gall and wormwood to Mr. Dewart. It stands in the way of his vaulting ambition, and he therefore has nothing but words of abuse and insult for Ministers who deservedly are honored by the people. How childish it is for a man holding the position of leader of the Opposition in this Province to speak of the Ministers who have such achievements to their credit as Sir William Hearst enumerates in his Address to the Electors, as "The Seven Sleepers"! Mr. Dewart's offensive reference to Hon. Howard Ferguson on Tuesday night cannot detract from the great services rendered by that able and hard-working Minister, but they can bring Mr. Dewart still lower in the estimation of the public.

Vapor Blown Away.

The man whose charges in connection with the Lincoln by-election were so thoroughly exploded by the investigation of a Royal Commission, the man whose vaporings have been blown away by the convincing speeches of Mr. Meighen, Mr. Ferguson, and others, need not expect to command much attention when he talks of what exposures he could make if he had but seven days at the books of the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines. He was three years in the House and had the Public Accounts Committee, through which he could do his probing, and not the smallest irregularity did he unearth in the conduct of Mr. Ferguson's Department. What use could the people make of Mr. Dewart in office. Abounding virulence cannot make up for political emptiness. The leader who has so much to say in detraction of his political opponents ought not to be at such a loss for words in which to state his position on the Temperance Act. So far he has not disproved the statement that he is regarded as the rising hope of the liquor interests.

The Navy League of Canada
Its Vital Work for Canada

THE Navy League of Canada fosters the splendid spirit that made the British the greatest of maritime nations. It organizes loyal Canadians so that practical work may be accomplished for the development of Canada's direct interests at sea.

The human side of Canada's Mercantile Marine is the League's especial interest—training Canadian boys to become the sturdy type of British manhood that won its laurels again and again in the great war—relieving distress among victims of the submarine warfare—and giving the sailor ashore an alternative place for rest and recreation to the places of doubtful entertainment that abound in port.

Why the $500,000 is needed

On Nelson Day, October 21st, starts a 3-day campaign throughout the Dominion to raise $500,000 necessary to finance the coming year's work of the Navy League of Canada. Help the work by giving liberally. As a nation whose expanding trade will depend on exports, we must educate our boys to the highest type of seamanship so that they will be equipped to man our ships to carry our exports to foreign markets.

You will do your part in this work by contributing liberally to the support of the Boy's Navy Brigades, the organizations by which the Navy League trains boys for our merchant marine.

Every dollar subscribed will be used to further the work of the Navy League in Canada—the work in which you are personally interested as a patriotic citizen. Help by giving.

G. T. R. . . . . 3 0 0 0 0 0 2 0 x—5
Harvesters . . . . 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0

Guyer had no less than eleven strike outs to his credit, making a total of eighteen in the two games with the Harvesters. Yesterday Tufford had the strike-out and seven at the Hamilton game.

Linars.

Kelleher was credited with a three-base hit which in reality should have been a home-run.

A pair of silk shirts donated by the Deacon Shirt Co. and a pair of shoes donated by Holmes & Murdoff were to be given to the player making a home run.

It is stated that Fearman put the "Ham" in Hamilton, but it is evident G. T. R. team brought home the bacon.

The music furnished by the band under the direction of Bandmaster Hinchey, was much appreciated.

The small boy was much in evidence at the game and used various devices in making a noise.

Congratulations are due not only to the champion team, but to Mr. Thomas Fegg, manager, who is a live wire.

Lovers of the game from Peterborough, Port Hope, Cobourg and other places were in attendance in considerable numbers.

Guard The Children From Autumn Colds

The Fall is the most severe season of the year for colds, one day is warm the next is wet and cold and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers best friend in preventing and banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent colds or if it does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly relieve it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CANADA'S TRADE.

Figures Must Be Altered to Restore Value of Dollar.

Canadian trade statistics for the first of the calendar year appear to indicate that while the adverse balance in trade with the United States is still unfortunately large conditions in this respect are at any rate better than they were in the corresponding period of 1918. That is, Canada has been selling a greater volume of goods to the United States, and importing a less value. There has been a marked falling off in exports as well as imports since March, however, the decline in imports being perhaps due to the high rate of exchange, which has led to the cancellation of many orders. The figures from Ottawa follow:—

IMPORTS.	1918.	1919.
January	$47,244,708	$59,921,492
February	41,185,814	52,255,504
March	70,570,794	66,557,495
April	66,334,076	47,971,110
May	78,264,623	58,083,040
June	76,197,035	61,236,510
	$376,179,041	$320,635,646

EXPORTS.	1918.	1919.
January	$ 21,683,082	$18,836,266
February	22,796,703	22,357,038
March	37,111,493	28,786,670
April	46,459,118	23,625,004
May	36,784,057	35,179,067
June	33,374,229	28,351,648
	$189,665,691	$196,467,028

From these figures it will be seen that the adverse balance of trade against Canada the first half of 1918 was $186,513,350, while for the corresponding period of this year it was $124,168,618. The balance must be still further reduced by the value of the Canadian dollar is to be restored. The discouraging feature of this trade is the falling off in exports since March. Canada must produce more—not less—to supply her own people, but to afford a larger surplus for sale abroad.

Prosperous Fisheries.

An increase of over $800,000 in the total value of sea fish taken during the month of May this year, as compared with the same month a year ago, is shown by the monthly statement on sea fishing results issued from the Naval Department. The total value of sea fish at the point of landing of both the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts during May this year was $1,985,950, while in May, 1918, it was $2,329,877.

RIEL RECALLED.

Historic Buildings in Regina Will Be Destroyed.

Extensive new buildings are to be erected on the R.N.W.M.P. square at the headquarters of the famous force in Regina. While Commissioner Perry announced that the buildings would go on in the near future and would entail a large expenditure, he stated that he was not in a position to give many details.

The new buildings, he said, would be placed on the south side of the square. Officers' quarters and a large barracks will be erected. This will entail the tearing down and removal of the last of the old wooden buildings, including the historic guardroom where Louis Riel completed his crimes on November 16, 1885. The guardroom was the first frame building erected on the ground. Other original buildings were made in Quebec in 1883, sent to Regina in sections, and then put together by hand on the force at that rate of one each day.

Senior officers of the Montreal police expressed regret at the passing of the old buildings while delighted with the prospect of the new ones. There is a possibility that the old guardroom building will be removed to another spot and preserved in its present form. One of the others stood on the scaffold when Riel with all the Stoicism of his race met his death by hanging. Another has a piece of the rope and a card, written by the rebellion leader just before the hour of execution.

From memory one of the officers recalled those on the scaffold. They were: Sheriff Chapleau, Deputy-Sheriff Gilson, Inspector J. A. McGibbon (now assistant commissioner), Hangman Henderson, Father Andre of Lake Lenore, Father Scollen, Ilams and Riel himself. Telling of the actual hanging, he said there were two trap doors, and that Riel stood more on one than the other. When the rope was sprung, the result was that when he fell his feet struck Dr. Dukes, the medical officer, who was standing below, in the face. Standing near Dr. Dukes were Dr. Cotton, the coroner, and the jury.

The hangman, Henderson, had been taken prisoner by Riel at the first rebellion in 1870 at Fort Garry. Two years after the hanging Henderson died. He died of cold of winter between Regina and Wood Mountain. Some several unsuccessful attempts by other parties a party led by Inspector McGibbon found him on the prairie badly frozen but still alive. He was brought to Regina on a flat sledge.

Georgina Shoes

GEORGINA SHOES are distinguished by a definite touch of originality, that for many seasons has been favored by women of fashion.

The autumn and early winter styles of Georgina Shoes are being displayed now. The artistic lines, soft flexibility, exclusive finish, and supreme comfort, which have made this a popular and much desired brought old Canada, are even more finely developed in this season's styles.

The "Georgina" trade mark is the shoemaker's price mark.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER V.—(Continued)

He was welcomed with effusion, and presented his own wife, who had already returned from town an quite parental in his greeting. That was very like old English in the case of shade and Cynthia's presence. It was very nice, too, to be made so much under the circumstances. Really they were very delightful people.

The son was in Germany, he learnt.

"We could have given you a treat, Ted, my boy," exclaimed the old jobber, "if you were fond of music—you will hear a voice when he comes back. That's luck for a fellow, to be born with an organ like Caesar's! He'll be making five hundred a week in twelve months. I tell you it's wonderful."

"Five hundred a week!" echoed Mrs Walford. "He'll be getting more than five hundred a week, I hope, before long. They get two or three hundred a night—not voices as fine as Caesar's, and won't go on the stage till they have had their money, either. You talk such nonsense, Sam . . . stupid!" "I said 'in twelvemonths,'" murmured her husband deprecatingly. "I said 'in twelvemonths,' my dear."

She turned to Kent, and added confidentially, "There isn't a harp in existence to compare with him. You'll say so when you hear. Ah, let me introduce you to another member of the family—my sister Cynthia."

Kent saw that they had been joined by a spare little woman with a thin, pinched mouth and a nose slightly pink. She was certainly a maiden lady, and her hostess's senior. Her tones were tart, and when she said she was pleased to meet him, he permitted himself no illusion that she spoke the truth.

Miss Wix, as a matter of fact, was not particularly pleased with anybody. She lived with the Walfords because she had no means of her own, and it was essential for her to live somewhere that she accepted her dependence with mental indignation and fate had soured her. Under a chilly demeanour she often glowed inwardly with the consciousness that she was not wanted and the knowledge found expression in long, interrupted, acrimonious outbreaks, in which she quarrelled with Louisa violently, and proclaimed an immediate intention of "taking a situation"—but that was only because she thought she was competent to fill nobody attempted to conjecture, and of all the "threats" ever impose on anyone, nor did she take more than a preliminary step toward fulfilling it. She nursed the "Wanted" columns of the "Daily Telegraph" assiduously for a day or two, and wasted for the other week. The household were aware that she was persuaded to forgive them and also always at variance with the accidental person, in whom hysteria looked impossible again. But the outbreak would be repeated, a week or so later and she then threatened to "take a situation" quite as vehemently as before.

"See, Aunt Emily?"

"Yes, please, if it hasn't got cold."

Humphrey bore it to her. Sheistir-ed the cup busily and eyed him with critical disfavor.

"I've read your book, Mr. Kent."

"Oh," he responded, as she did not say more. "I hope you like it, Miss Wix?"

"Very good, I'm sure," she brought out, after a further silence. He would have imagined the epithet words could have conveyed that, if he thought it very small beer indeed. "I suppose you're in the middle of an-other?"

"No," he replied, "not yet."

"Really."

She obviously considered that he ought to be.

"You should call her 'aunt'," exclaimed Sam Walford. "You'll have to call her 'Aunt Emily.' We don't go in for formality, you'll find, my boy. Rough diamonds! Take it or leave it as you like, that's our motto."

"Perhaps Mr. Kent thinks it would be rather premature," remarked Miss Wix.

He looked at her.

"You and your name might be admired, if we liked," said she and paused took aim with a cool, of inspection. Then she continued, "I don't know what you think of Cynthia, while I'm talking about her, but she's not ordinary."

"She is not very good-looking, eh?" said Mrs. Walford; "don't you think so? I can't say he thinks so as being remarkable for beauty," said the sculptor.

"I did not say he was remarkable for beauty," corrected Miss Wix, with decided distinction. "I am surprised you should think so, and he was very much admired."

"She was! Give him a cigar, Sam. Engaged, my prima, Miss Wix? I'm glad to hear that. Very glad. Very glad indeed. I'm sure it is a relief to you."

"I don't understand you, Mrs. Walford," some what stiffly replied Miss Wix. "Engaged? And he wanted to give her a carriage for her birthday married, but Sam's forbidden it."

The maiden smiled.

Rheumatic People

Can Only Find Relief by Enriching the Blood

Rheumatism is a disorder of the blood. It attacks people when the blood is overcharged with uric acid and impurities, thus setting up inflammation in the muscles and joints. Wet weather or cold weather or dampness near start the tortures of rheumatism, but is not the cause. The cause is in the blood and the blood only. Victims of this malady have every reason to fear the first dull ache in the limbs and joints, followed by sharp pains through the flesh and muscles. These are the symptoms of poison in the blood which may shortly leave the victim partially or entirely crippled.

There is only one way to cure rheumatism, and that is through the blood. Liniments, hot applications and rubbing may give temporary ease, but cannot possibly root the trouble out of the system. Relief can only be done by the rich, red blood which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make. This new blood drives out the poisonous acids and impurities, and the rheumatism disappears. If you are a sufferer from this painful malady begin curing yourself today by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and see how soon the pains and stiffness, aches of the joints, will vanish, leaving behind new energy and new health.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Synod Executive Meet at Kingston

KINGSTON, Oct. 10.—The autumn meeting of the executive of the Synod of the Diocese of Ontario, was held in St. George's Hall, with Bishop Bidwell presiding. There were about thirty members in attendance.

Messrs. J. H. Birkett and A. N. Lyster were appointed auditors.

A resolution of appreciation for the loyal and faithful services rendered by the late Canon Loucks to the diocese, was passed by a standing vote, and his widow was placed on the pension list. Rent was reported. Chancellor Jones-McDonald, a former school mate of the deceased, moved a hearty vote of thanks for the gift.

Much correspondence was dealt with. An application from Trenton to sell a site for $200 was granted, subject to ecclesiastical conditions.

A most encouraging report was presented by John Elliott, of Belleville, on the increase of stipends to the clergy. All the parishes appealed to responded generously. No clergyman got less than a $100 increase this year, while many got $300 and $400 increase. The parishes still to be visited will receive attention before November.

Several additional grants in missions were made, Sydenham Wolfe Island, Pittsburg, Maryland being settled, while other missions became self-sustaining.

Archdeacon Dobbs reported on missions and emphasized the need of collections from different churches to be sent in more promptly. The needs of next year's demands for diocesan requirements were settled. The diocese will be asked for $11,000.

The increase is caused by expansion of work and the low rate of exchange in the foreign field.

The afternoon session was taken up in making arrangements for the Anglican Forward Movement, the object of which is to deeply benefit the members spiritually, and also strengthen the finances of missionary and domestic mission needs. Throughout Canada, the Anglican church will raise two and a half million dollars, of which sum the diocese of Ontario will probably be expected to give $10,000. The work was enthusiastically commenced. Committees were appointed. The work will be undertaken this fall, resulting in every parish and mission being canvassed in February.

Bishop Bidwell's address on the inauguration of this work was most inspiring and encouraged all to look to the success of the efforts.

Dear Sir:

Respecting the premium due this month on my policy on the all-life plan with The Mutual Life of Canada for $1,000, I am pleased to note that my annual dividend has again been increased. My premium was originally $22.75, but is now reduced to $15.15, or, over, 33⅓ per cent. in the 11th year.

I notice also that the annual increase is cash surrender value has overtaken the annual premium. So that the protection is now being carried without cost.

If this is a sample of the Company's dealings with it would appear that the policyholders of the Company are "profiteering."

Music and Drama

AMUSING MOMENTS ABOUND IN "BONDAGE O. BARBARA"

Why rantings about in "The Bondage of Barbara," the new Metro production, which Goldwyn presents at the Palace to-night. The play is neither comedy nor drama. It is a skilful blending of the two, the desire being to show Miss Marsh to her advantage in all phases of her art. The result is that she has moments of captivating comedy which gradually melt into splashes of genuine dramatic intensity. "Barbara of the Canals" is a rather modern comedy, and a thrilling and interesting chapter of the popular circus world. "Barbara of the Canals" is also being shown on the same program.

CLAYTON PICTURE A HIT

Ethel Clayton's new picture, "A Sporting Chance," which is being shown at Griffin's to-night was rounded to "impulse," a story which appeared in the June issue of the Saturday Evening Magazine, written by Rupert Hughes. Carey Brent, the part played by Miss Clayton, is an impulsive girl who gets a "chance" and acts upon it without reflection. So when she employs her chauffeur, a man she believes to be an escaped convict, to order that she may reform him she opens the doors to thrilling and unexpected adventures. The compelling unit headed by Jack Holt, a sterling player is a strong one. Besides the above offering, "Hash For Sunshine comedy, "Almost Dead," and a Lyons-Moran comedy are also being presented on the same program. Three vaudeville acts are also being presented on the same program consisting of James McNally comedy juggler, Mabel Dignam and Company comedians, and the male of ragtime, Kendall's auto doll.

GRACIE HICKS WILL APPEAR AT PALACE MONDAY

Who started the World's War—the Kaiser or the German jitkers very likely both. The strange part of it is played by a woman in the greatest crisis of the ages is graphically portrayed in the William Fox photo-drama "Kultur" in which Gladys Brockwell will appear at the Palace, Monday to Saturday, matinee daily. They say that behind every great event in history it is possible to find a woman. "Kultur" it is shown that when the Emperor's sister, who dominates Archduke on that fateful June day in 1914, and thereby plunged the World into war and bloodshed, a beautiful Countess favorite of the aged Emperor Francis Josef, was the person who influenced the crime. The Archduke, who paid the fateful forfeit, was jealous of the influence of the Countess over the Emperor and sought to have her banished from Vienna. But instead of banishing the Old Monarch's mistress, he himself was slain through her machinations. A new comedy and the 7th chapter of the serial will be full of a thousand thrills, "Perils of Thunder Mountain," are also being screened on the same program.

"HEARTS OF THE WORLD"

When "Hearts of the World" is shown at Griffin's this Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily, there will be a few in the audience who will realize that one single scene of this master production was rehearsed exactly one hundred and twenty-seven times before David Wark Griffith called "Camera!"

It is said on good authority that for two years Mr. Griffith planned to get the particular expression he sought from the face of the talented juvenile player, Lillian Gish and Robert Harron. Untold or unwarned, probably indeed, would single out this one scene as the work of nearly two years, but everybody will note the expression of reverence on the faces of the two players. Mr. Harron slips the hand of Miss Gish on the slim finger of Miss Gish, and looking upward, says: "If we are taken, then will know that we died true and wife."

"MY SOLDIER GIRL"

When the musical spectacle, "My Soldier Girl," comes to Griffin's Opera House next Friday, matinee Saturday night, Belleville theatergoers will be treated to gorgeous costumes, elaborate stage settings, novelties that are new and effective and an excellent cast supported by a bewitching beauty chorus, who present the many stage pictures that make a show a success.

One of the many novel features in the musical comedy play is a gorgeous stage setting which presents a brilliant Follies production on the roof of a New York Theatre with an illumination of the city in the distance. In rapid succession follows a "Futurism Walk," and illuminated run-bored attending spot over the heads of the audience on which the dancers will be introduced. A lawn fete at Colonel Stone's home, Miami, Fla., with banks of flowers and lights, Servo drills and dance ensembles. The fashion "peig" ballet from the roof of a New York Theatre and a brilliant ensemble spectacle is all in merry bedlam. There are some seventy musical numbers including "My Soldier Girl," "Just For You," "Wrap Me In a Bundle of Love," That Dixie Wedding Tune" and "Won't You Be My Beau," are among the real favorites. An augmented orchestra accompanies the production.

"KISS THE FLAG"

SHERIFF'S ORDER

Wierton, W. Va., Oct. 11.—Scouring down on all alleged I. W. W. headquarters in an old barn on the Ranch county road, a quarter of a mile south of here, Sheriff Armour Cooper and a squad of 60 deputies arrested a number of the supposed ringleaders and confiscated a large quantity of literature, books and papers of the organization, including a membership roll.

The sheriff arrested 186 men whose names were on the membership roll, marched them to the public square, forced them to kneel and kiss the American flag.

After this 190 of the men were released and driven out of town while the other six were taken to the New Cumberland jail and locked up pending action by the federal authorities.

Recommends Internal Bathing for Piles and Constipation.

If people who suffer from constipation, piles and the many ills resulting from accumulated waste in the intestines would realize what the J. B. L. Cascade is doing for thousands of people now using daily treatment to perfect health by its use, there would be a J. B. L. Cascade in every Canadian home.

Mrs. E. Nightingale, of Green River, Ont., writes: "I purchased a J. B. L. Cascade from you about ten months ago, and consider it the best money I ever invested. For years I have been troubled with constipation, piles in the bowels and piles, which all the money I spent on medicines and doctors only relieved temporarily. My J. B. L. Cascade has completely cured these troubles, and I feel it my duty I owe to my fellowmen to advise the Cascade in the very highest. terms. My saving of money could estimate the pains it has been to me. No home should be without one."

The J. B. L. Cascade is the only scientific invention for internal bathing. Knows the system sweet and clean, cures constipation, headaches, intoxication and kindred ills. It sells for $5, all charges paid, to any address and explained at J. H. McKenzie's Drug Store.

CHIEF AGENT RETIRING

Chief Special Agent W. M. Tisdale, of the Grand Trunk Railway Service, is retiring after several years in that capacity, during which he became known to the majority of railroadmen all this terminal. Mr. Tisdale is being succeeded by G. L. Boddington, who was formerly in the service of the C.P.R.

TWO YEARS IN-PEN

William Guernsey, who was arrested at Niagara Falls and brought here on a charge of abducting from here Dorothy Wales, at first elected to be tried by Judge and Jury but later decided to be tried summarily before Judge Deroche. Yesterday he was brought up before His Honor and pleaded guilty to the charge. A sentence of two years in the penitentiary was imposed. Mr. Carnew represented the Crown and the accused was undefended.

BILLY WOOD AT ORILLIA

William H. Wood, for some years, the popular secretary for boys at the Stratford Y.M.C.A., who lately was discharged from military service, has been appointed general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at Orillia and many friends of Mr. Wood will rejoice to learn of his appointment. He went from Stratford to Brockville where he gave excellent service in Boys' Community Work. Mr. Wood was widely known in the sporting world a few years ago, having been the first Canadian to finish at the big marathon in the Olympic games at London some years ago.

SERVICES APPRECIATED

At the Village of Canifton last night a fowl supper was held which was largely patronized. It was an event to honor the forty-two young men of the village and vicinity who enlisted and went overseas. The supper was partaken of in the Orange Hall, after which a platform meeting was held in the Methodist church adjoining. Col. Panton of this city, presided in his usual affable and inspiring manner. Mrs. A. P. Allen, Miss Tuite, Mr. and Mrs. B. Rathman and Mrs. Wagner of this city took part in the programme. Rev. Mr. McMullen gave an excellent address.

SENT TO PENITENTIARY

Wilfred Smith, a stranger here, was this morning before Magistrate Masson charged with fraud, and he pleaded guilty. The accused bought a ratchet at Mr. Dimes place of business in this city, for $15. He gave a cheque for $20 and secured the cost and $10 change. The cheque was made payable to bearer and was signed G. McLaughlin Company. It is now alleged that it was a fraudulent transaction. He also secured $30 from a business firm in this city by a similar cheque. A sentence of two years in the penitentiary was imposed. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Mr. C. A. Payne for the accused.

SAVED FROM LIFELONG MISERY

And a Dangerous Operation, by Using "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MRS. M. J. GORSE

2228 Union St., Vancouver, B.C., "I suffered with all the symptoms of Female Trouble, with chronic Constipation and constant Headaches. I had pains low down in the back and sides of the body. I tried various remedies without relief, and then put myself under a doctor's care and he advised me to have an operation. I refused.

Then, I started taking 'Fruit-a-tives'; and from the outset, I felt better, and this medicine has completely relieved me of all my misery and suffering. My weight was only 143 pounds and now it is 168 pounds. I am free of pain and headaches and the terrible Constipation; and what saved me from misery is the splendid fruit medicine, "Fruit-a-tives".

MRS. M. J. GORSE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or send postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited Ottawa, Ont.

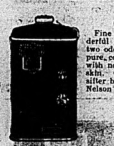
A Few Points About Garden Court



GARDEN COURT TALC.

Fine as mist—its fragrance the wonderful Garden Court blend of thirty-two odors. In composition positively pure, containing the finest Italian talc, with nothing to irritate or injure the skin. Contained in strong leak-proof sifter box, of metal, in the unique Nelson Blue finish.

GARDEN COURT TOILET WATER.

Delightful for stimulus or bath. Carries the same exquisite fragrance as the extract, differing from it only in degree of concentration. Because of the peculiar pervasiveness of Garden Court, this toilet water is actually more economical than most of those sold at half the price. In attractive frosted-bottles of our own original design with "fur-de-lis relief.

GARDEN COURT FACE POWDER.

Blends with the skin and "stays on till you take it off." Sifted three times through silk 144,400 meshes to square inch. Absolutely pure and free from any harmful ingredient. The odor is the same distinctive and alluring combination expressed Garden Court Extract. Nelson Blue box.

GARDEN COURT DOUBLE COMBINATION CREAM

The first all-purpose cream. Takes the place of "massage," "vanishing" and "nourishing" creams, and is an ideal base for the powder of any kind. Comes in graceful jars of opal glass with its decoration and cartoned in Nelson Blue.

GARDEN COURT COLD CREAM.

A smooth, protective cream for sunburned or chapped skin. The finest of all Cold Creams. Free from fat acids and proof against rancidity. Contained in same size and style jar as the Double Combination Cream, and finished in Nelson Blue carton.

NOT ROUND OF JOY

Some Few Drawbacks Connected With Simple Life.

Man Who Goes Back to Nature Finds That He Has In No Way Escaped the Curse of Adam, Laid on Us All.

Back to nature? Well, what about it? For twelve hours out of the twenty-four, I am now immolated in a house near Yashon Heights, bordering the clammy beach, trying to feed the hungry maw of the camp stove, the while mopping my streaming brow and getting back my wind. The other twelve hours of the day I am dashing across twelve miles of water in a saucy craft, going to work, working, and dashing back again at eventide to prepare the firewood for the evening repast. We would get along fine in this worst were it not for the fact that we are obliged to eat.

My poets have lately referred much to nature's wondrous beauty that we of the city lose, and I am now engaged in investigating the matter, but I find the little intimate matters connected with living close to nature taking up much of one's time that one has few moments for nature, except, perhaps, if one be profane, to swear at the enfangling brush, the beach barnacles, and the thickness of the log one is trying to saw through.

Some day when I get, perhaps, two days' firewood shed, and the pinnacle four, butter and bacon, crackers, tea, bread, etc., all in the one place, is not whistling for the dock, I intend to lift my weary head from my sodden bed, brush the perspiration from my eyes, and absorb some of this beauty of nature that I hear so much about.

Last night I tore away a few moments from wood sawing to get into the waters of the Sound. It was apparent at once that the Sound water is experiencing a very lite spring, and that its winter freshness has not yet worn off. However, after one is in—after the first shock—one gets reconciled to the change, and the lasting effect is highly exhilarating. After the dip I sat on the veranda of my shack and felt so well that I saw my way clear to buy my winter's coal and pay the last half of my taxes. My conscience, it would be worth while for everyone to take to beach bathing if only for the optimism it induces! I may even stand it to have Willie sit around and tell me how to do things. Willie is only fifteen, but he has an enormous knowledge on every subject. He is here in the wilderness for the first time in his life, yet he instructs me how to saw a log and prepare the firewood and on other assessable topics, and the only way I can get even with him is to send him two miles after milk, thereby giving him opportunity to get still closer to nature.

One would greatly enjoy communing with nature, no doubt, if one had time to commune in this busy, strenuous business life. And there are hints of it. Yesterday the sun came up on the world as fresh and bright as though it had been made overnight; the soft sea breeze came in through the window, a strange forest bird chirruped outside; the lapping of the water on the beach wooed to further slumber, and I was about to take another forty and another earful when the camp cook hovered beside me, and immediately me hastily back to this material world. If I can arrange to get along without eating, I think I am going to live a life of back-to-nature life of the camp.—Seattle Post Intelligencer.

New Thing in Diplomacy.

Just recently, one of the allied powers in the process of setting its house in order, or, rather, going carefully over the ground to see what needed to be set in order, tackled its diplomatic service. It found many things that were out of date, and many other things that never had been in date, and it determined to make many reforms.

Perhaps the most significant was the one which provided that in future the working knowledge of stenography should be an essential part of the diplomatic equipment. More and more, surely is it being proved true that the ambassador of the old order passed with the advent of the telegraph and telephone.

Some one once said, indeed, that ambassadors nowadays had become clerks; an exaggeration, of course, but the latest "requirement" lends color to the view.—Christian Science Monitor.

Farm Gardens.

The farm garden idea did not start with our entry into the war, but had its inception in 1914, when the Women's Farm Gardens association was formed. At first the association busied itself to obtain positions for women in farm and garden work. After we got into the war and the dangers of a food shortage threatened, the association began work along the lines of the department of agriculture in England, which encouraged the tilling of small pieces of land, going so far as to give out allotments to those who will till them. The boy scouts and other bodies have done much this year along the line of war gardening.

THE A VANISHED RACE.

The Tragic Fate of the Indian Settlement at Trefle Cove, Nova Scotia.

"Glory fades with the waning moon,
The Red Man's Race shall be banished soon;
Our feet are caught in the death web again,
No dawn shall be ours and no rising sun."

Thus runs Cadman's version of the folk song of the Indians of the far Western prairies and it holds intensely pitiful tree of these few members of the aboriginal American race that still linger upon the Atlantic seaboard. Fate seems to have been against the red man from the start; a curse inevitable and awe-inspiring has fallen upon his people, has blighted their hopes, decimated their numbers. Their moon has almost set and no new dawn will line their horizon with flaming golds or crimsons.

Historians dwell much upon the Indian massacres; but there are two sides to every question. If a strange race came to us to-day, robbed us of lands we had held since time immemorial, even with our pestilence leaven of Christianity we would probably reject them with scant tolerance. Why blame the Micmac then for one last endeavor to preserve his birthright? His methods may have been cruel, but what more fan one say of the savagery There was a certain tenacious heroism in his barbarity.

The struggle was a losing, hopeless one. Great world changes took little of individuals or races. What was written was written and nothing could stem the ebb-and-flow tide of Caucasian tide. The Micmac did not have the vast hinterland of the prairies to which was in the possession of the Blackfoot. The Micmac soon relaxed his resistance in despair and with his loss of sovereignty came days of desuetude and degeneration. Civilization brought him little in return for what it had taken away. He was a deadly drought of death, not mercifully speedy, but horribly lingering slow.

The finis to the relation of the Micmac to the town of Dartmouth was brought with a sudden, terrible drama, perhaps a fitting and awful finale to the epic of a nation without epos. It came with the explosion, December 6, 1917, when all Halifax, wherever its consternation, stood aghast through the lowest circles of the inferno. The small collection of ramshackle huts along Tufts Cove, behind which the Indian encampment bore the brunt of the explosion. In a few brief seconds the Micmac wigwams lay in the pine trees flattened against the earth. There was no more complete devastation. It was entire city.

Many of the Indians were killed, many more horribly maimed; those few who survived left Dartmouth never to return. For the Indians of Dartmouth, the moon had set and darkness was to be forever.

Quebec Protects the Birds.

It is an encouraging sign when a great province takes hold with vigor upon the Parliament of Canada and the Legislatures of Ontario and Quebec formulate policies in the hours and consider the welfare of the birds of the air. The most move behalfs of these neighbors, was the passing of an act by the Legislature of Quebec, establishing Perce Rock, the bird ledges at Bonaventure Island and Bird Rocks, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, as sanctuaries for the seafowl that breed on that region. In 1912 the Federal Government set aside Point Pelee as a national park and bird sanctuary, and in 1917 the Ontario Government set apart two crown game preserves or bird sanctuaries, one located on Lake Wowonah, known as Pesamarah farm, and the other in the district, Essex County, surrounding the farm of Jack Miner, who has, perhaps, the largest private sanctuary in the world. Perce Rock, which forms one of the scenic features of the Bay of Chaleur, contains about six square miles of area, and is the home of a large colony of gannets, numbering 300 feet, and upon its ledges thousands of birds nest without fear of molestation. This rock is, it is believed, by the sole refuge of the herring gull on the coast of Gaspe. On Bird Rocks, a group of three, belong to Magdalene Islands, and are 30 miles off the coast of Gaspe. On Bonaventure Island, remains about seven acres, is situated the lighthouse, and here, it is said, the Solan geese and kittiwakes in great numbers have their nests.

Heavy Lumber Shipments.

For the first six months of this year shipments to the United States and eastern markets by the lumber mills situated in the interior districts of British Columbia totalled 1,000,000,000 feet, as against 5,000,000 feet during the corresponding period last year, states R. H. Poole, secretary of the Mountain Lumber Manufacturers' Association. During the earlier portion of the year large orders had been received from the prairie markets, and prospects for a time pointed to an excellent year on that account. Later, however, owing to the disappointing crop outlook in various localities, orders on hundreds of cars of lumber were cancelled. Despite this falling off in the prairie markets and owing to the exceptional shipments to the United States and eastern markets, the operating mills are pretty well supplied with business for the next two months at least.

Boat Tree.

What has been called Japan's most peculiar tree is the so-called boat tree at Kyoto. It is a very ancient pine tree, which grows in the shape of a temple. For more than eight centuries it has been trained to grow in a most remarkable shape, lower branches extending along the ground, then curving up in such a way as to suggest the shape of a boat; while the tree itself rises from the centre, recalling the position of the mast. Japanese say the Japanese have legends which they connect with this curious pine tree.

Man Who Wrote Famous Hymn

To be a man of culture and education, to live a lonely and self-sacrificing life, to occupy his time with the most menial tasks, to remain true during his life to his love for a girl who died when she was twenty-three, to write the best known piece of Canadian literature and to die in unmarked grave was the fate of Jonathan Scriven, the author of "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," of which millions of copies have been known to be published.

Mr. Scriven was born on September 10, 1819, in the parish of Seapatrick, County of Down, Ireland, and there passed Joseph Medlicott, the latter being his mother's maiden name. His father was a captain in the Royal Marines. His early education was entrusted to a Dr. Doncaster, in whose charge he remained until he was 15 years of age. In 1835 he entered Trinity College, Dublin, and after less than two years there he began a course at the Adelaide Military Seminary, in Surrey, England. Graduating in 1837 because his health did not promise to be equal to a military career, he returned to Trinity and obtained his degree in 1842.

Soon after he came to the shores of Canada the remainder of his years at Port Hope and at Rice Lake, ten miles away, on the shores of which lies his unmarked grave. At Port Hope the centenary of his birth was celebrated by a service in the Methodist Church on September 19, after which there was a pilgrimage to the grave at Rice Lake. It is proposed to beautify the spot, mark the grave and build a suitable monument to the great man who is remembered with so much reverence by the people who knew him. At Port Hope, where the cottage in which he lived for many years, is to be seen erected but a large electric sign he built displaying the words "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" within sight of three railroads, and a main thoroughfare, and that the cottage be purchased as a museum for the many things that are still in existence which were connected with the life of the preacher-poet.

Mr. Scriven moved to Port Hope as a tutor for the children of Robert L. Pengelley, a commander in the royal navy, who, for his services had been given land at Rice Lake upon which his son and grandchildren still live. Here Scriven fell in love with Miss Catherine Roche, a niece of Captain Pengelley, and the daughter of Andrew William Roche, R.N., but after an illness of three years, during which time she saw Scriven almost every day, she died of tuberculosis on August 6, 1846, when she was only twenty-three years old. Scriven never married.

The reason for coming to Canada is not known, but perhaps the health of his relatives behind had something to do with it and his attachment to Ireland life cannot be characterized than a desire to follow the letter the gospel command to go forth to all the world without script or purse and preach the gospel to every creature is still remembered about Port Hope as the man who threw his hat upon the table on market day and on circus day and who gave away to his pupils his dinner and his oratory, for he was a master of handsome appearance and of liberal education. It has been said that Scriven was a Plymouth Brother, but whatever his religion he associated with members of that sect, he was a Christian, an organization, he preached truth as he saw it.

About 1845 a farmer with whom he had been living died and Scriven went to live with a family by the name of Keefer, living on Percy Mount Brethren, and who lived at that time on a farm on the shores west of Rice LaLke. There he died and in the early fall in contradiction to the morbid story that he committed suicide, he died during his illness, while delirious, he wandered from his room and was found in a few minutes by the family in a drift, a few inches of the water of Rice Lake, where he had died.

At his own request he was buried beside the girl he had loved and in a small, private cemetery on the Pengelley estate on a hill overlooking the lake. One can see the grave of the girl and on the other, the grave of Jonathan Scriven, the hymn writer, remainder R.N., who died in 1875.

Scriven's hymn, "What a Friend We Have In Jesus," Scriven wrote for a mother's son, some of whom are well known and several essays and religious subjects which urge deep piety and the utmost simplicity of life.

"What a Friend We Have In Jesus."
All our sins and griefs to bear!
What a privilege to carry
Everything to God in prayer!
O what peace we often forfeit,
O what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Everything to God in prayer.

Have we trials and temptations?
Is there trouble anywhere?
We should never be discouraged;
Take it to the Lord in prayer;
Can we find a friend so faithful,
Who will all our sorrows share?
Jesus knows our every weakness;
Take it to the Lord in prayer.

Are we weak and heavy-laden,
Cumbered with a load of care?
Precious Saviour, still our refuge—
Take it to the Lord in prayer;
Do thy friends despise, forsake thee?
Take it to the Lord in prayer;
In His arms He'll take and shield thee;
Thou will find a solace there.

Speaks for Itself.

Pte. Joe Wood Won V.C. With His Life

DURING the strong enemy counter-attack a Lewis gun team, on the forward post in a communication trench leading to the enemy lines, was buried by a shell and the crew, with the exception of one man, killed.

Sergt. Hobson, though not a gunner, grasped the great importance of the post, rushed from the trench, dug out the gun and got it into action against the enemy who were now advancing down the trench and across the open.

A jam caused the gun to stop, Sergt. Hobson, though wounded, left the gun to correct the stoppage, rushed forward at the advancing enemy bombing them and clubbing rifle, single-handed, held them back until he himself was killed by a rifle shot. By this time, however, the Lewis gun was again in action and reinforcements shortly afterwards arriving, the enemy were beaten off.

The valor and devotion to duty displayed by this non-commissioned officer gave the gunner the time required to again get the gun into action, and saved a most serious situation.—Official Record.

The labyrinth of trenches between Hill 70 and the city of Lens was captured by the Canadians in the attack of August 15, 1917. That piece of ground had passed between Russ sections in the three years previous to. No Man's Land was a maze of trenches running in all directions. In places they led directly from the Canadians to the Germans' lines, and were divided only by blocks guaranteed by machine guns. The weather, which was unsettled and sultry on the 15th, by the 16th was clear and sunny and the rains of two weeks previous were quickly drying the shelly soil.

Nabob alley was one of the old communication lines leading across No Man's Land. By this time, on the morning of the 16th Sergt. Hobson, of the 20th Battalion, had bombed his way for about 70 yards. They he established a post and garrisoned it with Lewis guns. The conquered trench was held for three days by the Germans.

Midnight of August 17-18 passed. It was the dark of the moon and little could be seen of what was going on out on No Man's Land. At 1.45 o'clock the silence of the night was broken by the roar of enemy artillery. Every inch of the Canadian front line was deluged with shells. For half an hour the din and devastating fire continued. Every wire to the 20th Battalion headquarters was broken.

Then a lull came. The men in Nabob alley crouched in their trench while gas shells poured over them on to the village of St. Pierre behind them. Another pause and the artillery broke out again. Every gun that the Hun could bring up was trained on Hill 70. The ground was torn up and tons of earth and stones hurled into the air. Men were killed in groups. Practically every Lewis gun was smashed or buried beside its crew. The advanced posts were blotted into the earth. The Canadian lines were in confusion.

Then down the line the word was passed from lip to lip that the Hun was out in No Man's Land, coming towards Nabob alley. Sergt. Hobson peered into the darkness and saw the grey figures of the enemy coming at the double. They came down Nabob alley, when only one Lewis gun was now left. The gunner trained his fire on the wave of German grey, but while he was in the action a shell made a direct hit and buried crew and gun. Only one man was alive when Hobson ran up to the spot and started digging him out. He pulled him out of the debris, bruised and dazed.

"Pretty close call," the gunner said to his rescuer, but Hobson was already digging at the gun, while the Huns advanced down the trench.

"Let's get this out," said Hobson, and the two men began to dig with all their might. The Germans came closer in the dark. Hobson was struck by a stick bomb, but on he went with his work. The gun must be got out at all costs. At last they got it into position and the gunner opened on the enemy with telling effect. Two men were holding back the German advance. Then the gun jammed.

Grabbing a rifle, Hobson ran ahead.

"I'll keep them back. You fix the gun," he said and opened on the enemy. With bayonet and clubbed rifle he fought them off till a pile of their dead lay at his feet.

"All right," shouted the gunner to Hobson, and opened on the invaders. But at that moment a German got a direct aim and Hobson fell, killed instantly.

The gunner rode the enemy party dearly for the deed. With his Lewis gun he stemmed the advance until he was reinforced by another company and they turned the Germans back. But the hero who had saved the post in the first onrush lay dead—his rifle still tightly grasped in his hand. They found him when dawn was coming over the ridge.

Frederick Hobson was born in London, England, in 1874. Before coming to Canada he had been in the Imperial forces. He enlisted in the 15th Battalion at Toronto in October, 1914. On the morning of August 17, Hobson was acting sergeant-major, and it was in fulfilment of his responsibilities in that capacity that he made his last gallant defence of his battalion and won the Victoria Cross.—Carolyn Cornell in Toronto Star Weekly.

Silky Wool From Australia

No other material was ever used in these famous stockings for children.

There have been times when the Australian supply was light. Then, we were unable to produce enough Little Darling and Little Daisy Hosiery to go 'round. For we would not substitute other wool.

We thought it better not to vary the quality of Little Darling and Little Daisy Hosiery.

Mothers, we know, expect in these stockings the finest, softest and best knitted wool yarn. They expect unusual wear. It means much to them to clothe their children in such comfortable, healthful—and, at the same time, such economical—material.

LITTLE DARLING HOSIERY—for babies and tiny tots up to seven—has silken toe and heel.

LITTLE DAISY HOSIERY—for children up to twelve—has extra strength in heel and toe.

Many dainty shades and black.

Another Prince in America

THE visit of the Prince of Wales to the United States recalls the famous occasion when his grandfather, then Prince of Wales and later King Edward VII visited the republic.

The former Prince of Wales stood on American soil for the first time on September 11, 1860, at Niagara Falls, wishing to get his last view of them from the American side, but his official visit began three days later when he landed in Detroit. So densely were the streets packed that the prince, or Baron Renfrew, as he styled himself for the visit, had to enter his hotel by a side door; and one spectator remarked that there could have been no greater curiosity manifested if the distinguished visitor for had been George Washington come to life again.

From Detroit, the royal party went to Chicago, where some 50,000 citizens turned out to do the prince honor, and where about the same number sought to entertain him. So exhausted was the young man by the hospitality of the Chicago folks that on the train for St. Louis he had a temporary breakdown. A stop was made accordingly at Dwight's Station, where there was food shooting, and in the course of a short stay the prince bagged a number of quail and rabbits. His host, a Mr. Spencer, said of the guests, "The party drew crowds and what the village lacked in smoking pipes in the most democratic style." An unpleasant incident occurred at Dwight's Station, for one day the party were about to enter a farmhouse, when the owner appeared and said, "Not you, Newcastle! I have been a tenant of yours and have sworn that you shall not set foot on my land." So the journey was resumed in such a way as to avoid touching the property of this former Englishman.

From St. Louis the prince went to Cincinnati and attended a great ball, but it is recorded that the thrifty or forgetful Cincinnatians, having consented to provide a supper, the royal visitor left at 12.30. On this occasion, the prince having announced his desire to have the second dance with Miss Groesbeck, a beautiful young lady who had gone to the ball devoid of any jewels, her mother borrowed her own jewels and asked her daughter to wear them. The young lady declined, however, and danced with the prince arrayed only in her own beauty and her severely simple attire. From Cincinnati the prince went by way of Pittsburg and Harrisburg to Washington, taking up his quarters at the White House, where he remained for five days. He visited the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon, and many an editorial article was written on the text of the former heir to the British crown standing bareheaded at the foot of the tomb of the man who had protected the thirteen colonies from the Empire he was one day to reign over.

After he left Washington, President Buchanan wrote to Queen Victoria: "In our domestic circle it was all hearts. His free and ingenuous intercourse with myself proves both a kind heart and a right understanding." From Washington the prince went to Philadelphia, where he heard Adelina Patti sing, and was so delighted that he asked that she be presented to him, and then on to New York. He was met by Mayor Wood, and drove to his quarters in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, through a throng over half a million people. Here again there were magnificent balls and receptions arranged for him, and probably his nerve had a busier week of his life, what with listening to addresses, planting trees, visiting various institutions and seeing points of historic interest. The great ball held at the Academy of Music was the greatest social function in the history of New York society, and there were 3,000 invitations. So great was the crush that the flooring gave way, and two people were slightly hurt.

A rather untoward incident occurred when the prince was driving through Madison Square, a day or so later. Mr. Richard Storrs Willis, Edward Mooncat, rushed to the side of the royal carriage and shouted, "Who are you? I can whip you, anyway. You will never be King of England if you do a hundred years." He later explained to a magistrate that he had been over from a steamboat on which he worked "to see what sort of boy the Americans were making fools of themselves over." Asked when the prince was leaving New York for Albany, an Irishman yelled, "An' sure an' he's not going at all, never come back!" as an insult that so enraged a gentlemanly bystander, who was standing nearby, that he "knocked him for a row." Fearing Joseph Allaso, the Prince of Wales vacated Boston, where he met Longfellow, Holmes, Emerson and other famous Americans. At Bunker Hill he exchanged autographs with Edith Farnham, sole survivor of the famous battle, and who remarked that "He wished to show the boy that he bore no ill will for old times." The party left Portland on the homeward voyage, but encountered such rough weather that the liners ran several days overdue before she made port, and indeed during the excitement with which the beloved prince was welcomed back.

Hot Weather.

"Call this hot weather," said a visitor to Canada. "Why, I've seen it so down south that the pigs just born popped right on the stalks." "Whew!" exclaimed the host. "And that's why the juice of the cane in the next field turned to molasses, ran through the fence, mixed up with the popcorn and formed the finest combination of popcorn and molasses that ever crossed your lips."

"MOUNTAIN OF GOLD" A MYTH

It Would Lessen the Value of Gold Standard

The nearest approach, literally, to a "mountain of gold" in Mount Morgan, in Australia, and the ore mining (to-day there as they have for years past) is very rich. The last year's boom ($32,000,000). This so-called mountain of gold has yielded, on an average, half an ounce of pure gold to the ton.

This fact has led many persons to ask seriously, "What would happen if a mountain of pure gold existed?" For some men have dreamed and written of days of yore, when such "mountains of gold" were just what would happen if one were found in such a question with the discovery of such a gigantic nugget of the precious yellow stuff.

That it would lessen the value of the gold standard goes without saying, and yet some other rare metal or substance would undoubtedly be found sufficiently scarce to take its place in coinage if the should happen. Interesting as is the speculative question, mining experts have talked it over, intermittently, for years, and they say, who are familiar with gold mining, and more especially, the big treasure of Mount Morgan, that no strain our imagination to conceive of one huge mass of ore, a mass of gold big enough to upset interstational monetary standards. Many a prospector trying his boom at a mine has dreamed that he struck a concretized cup of coffee must have seen visions of a golden mountain or of a golden nugget as large as the creation as if it would never stop. Every miner has heard of the fabulous mineral discoveries, literally "struck" upon the head, and when the irresponsible scribe of Mount Morgan has exhausted his vocabulary in describing the "find" he has about a "mountain of gold."

Sir Hugh Muntz, the famous Australian digging was at its height in 1913, the keenest enterprise, but he heard that gold was found in quartz veins. Muntz, with the pervasive mineral, supposed it was there, and hence proceeded to gather the gold from the quartz. The "find" was vouched for by F. J. Dunn, the Australian geologist, who as a boy went to the diggings at that time.

Muntz, the stalwart Australian pioneer from the farm, and we may assume that and we do at the perfect birthday of the Australian paper, but it is doubtful whether he had the perspicacity generally known as the man in the street could give adequate reasons for the improbability of such a golden discovery.

For instance, what is the biggest mass of native copper ever found? Probably, it was the big Ontonagon location. It was in 1857, in the Ontonagon district of Michigan that gold there was discovered a mass of copper 46 feet long, with a maximum thickness of 8½ feet. The mass was 11½ feet, and the mean thickness four feet. Its total weight roughly recorded was 420 tons.

No such mass of gold as this, of course, has ever been found. Yet gold in fair quantities has been won from the earth since it has been known. It has yielded $81,594,700 in 1851 alone, and the shallow diggings of California gave $2,000,000 in 1851. In the Klondyke more recently one claim yielded $416,000 in 222 days and took out $756,000 from a single season's work.

Much of this gold was in coarse nuggets and nodules, and yet the largest nugget ever found was picked up near Dunolly, Victoria, Australia, in 1858. It weighed 184 pounds. Another weighing 134 pounds and yielding 2,000 ounces of gold, was nearly $40,000. There have been many nuggets found in the West far from masses such as the huge copper nugget above described, and the "mountain" of gold. The nearest approach to the gold mountain possibility seems to be Mount Morgan, in Queensland, Australia, a hill about 500 feet high, the crest of which was a "goosan" containing several ounces of gold to the ton.

This has been excavated in succession of terraces, the lowest terrace to the "quarries" of gold mentioned, by which name the workings are now far below the foot of the hill. However, they have yielded a quantity of gold so great as to render Mount Morgan unique in the annals of mining. From the discovery in 1885, according to the official statistics, the mine or rather pout has yielded in excess of 2,580,000 ounces of gold, worth $77,500,000, besides 2,000 tons of copper. The coming, during the year has distributed more than $37,500,000.

On Ice Floe Five Months.

Scientific data of considerable value were obtained by a party of seven men who returned to civilization recently after spending about five months on a floe drifting ice from the Arctic Ocean, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. Special attention was given to the study of currents in Beaufort Sea, that part of the Arctic which lies between the coast of Alaska and Canada as far as Banks Land, and numerous soundings were made in the cold waters. The floe on which the party made camp was made was seven miles wide and fifteen miles long. Many seals, birds and polar bears and bird nests made their homes on the floating island.

St. Catharines' Population.

The population of St. Catharines, Ont., is nineteen thousand, one hundred and ninety-five, an increase of six over last year. The large number of foreigners who went back to their native lands during the war, is given as the reason for the small increase, the census says. The assessment of the city is sixteen millions and forty-four thousand, an increase of a little over half a million. The tax rate remains the same, two hundred and ninety thousand.

A Sad Case.

The lieutenant was lonesome for a familiar face. Seeing a chap who looked like a friend out, they went to a liver groceries at his home, he stopped him and asked: "Do you know who I am?" "No, sir; don't you!"

Strange Legends of White Rates

THERE has for some centuries existed in the minds of many civilized peoples a curious fascination with reference to the idea that in various parts of the tropics amid the dark skinned races there flourish typical specimens of the white human race, strong resemblance to the civilized branches of the Caucasian race.

The early adventurers in Central and South America brought home many tales of extraordinary cities beyond the mountains, and vague stories afloat in South Africa several years ago furnished Rider Haggard with a theme for one of his novels. Legends like these are met in almost all the less explored regions of the world, and they have always certain features in common. The idea of a white people almost invariably inhabit a mountainous region in a vague interior, always "just beyond"; they hold aloof from the surrounding races; they are seldom seen, and yet are definitely stated to be more civilized and intellectual than the darker masses whom they rule.

Who they are and whence they came is always left vague, which is afford no explanation. Once it was thought that forgotten white colonies might have built up unknown kingdoms in the wild places of the earth, but when Spanish explorers' theories vanish as rapidly as do the fabulous cities themselves and the ultimate explanation is almost promised. There is a hint in the legends that even in the beginning of the twentieth century the mystery of the existence of genuine white races is not altogether scouted as. Some years ago an Irish British officer engaged in the operations against the Moros in the Philippines collected apparently substantial evidence relating to a mysterious white tribe in the Island of Mindanao. The mountainous district in the centre of the island has never been explored and even the coast is not well known.

The Moros, who have their own stories are told of the fierce white warriors in the far inland tribes in the forest clad mountains of the interior. Five hundred years ago there was among a strange fair complexioned girl who led toward the hills as soon as she was old enough to walk, and a women of a light complexioned race were reported to have been seen by adventuresome natives who were bold enough to engage in the Moro-Australasian district. The American officer was impressed that he determined to conduct an exploring expedition across the centre of the island. But mysterious white folk had vanished, for the world has as learned nothing of his search, beyond crowned with success.

Arabia, however, can with more reason boast of a white tribe. For years stories of such a race have been told in the vicinity of Aden, and an American missionary stationed at Muscat almost sold ago to the "coffee house babble in Eastern Oman concerning a mysterious race of light complexioned people who live in the mountains of the interior. Some strangers and speak a language all their own. Various rumors have been propounded to explain the fact, but probably the explanation is to be found in the narrative of a journey made to Oman in 1876 by Col. S. B. Miles, R.A. Writing, Col. Miles in the course of his travels came across a town called Sherguh, in the heart of the Green Mountains. This strange place was perched like an eagle's nest on the side of a precipice, and was inhabited by people of light complexion, unlike those of the tribes in the interior. They rarely descended to the plains and refused to mix with or inter-marry with the Arabs. Col. Miles found they were descendants of a portion of an Arabian army that invaded Oman in the 15th century. The legend of the town and the curious behavior of its people gave rise to elaborated stories in the bazaars on the distant coast, and in the case of the latter the fable may be regarded as fairly accurate.

Unfortunately for the romance of the world, it seems practically impossible that stories of the character to have the origin novelists would like to believe. The world is relatively small to-day. The trail of the explorer is over every land. Even the map to Tibet. Forbidden lands are entered, hidden cities exist only in the imagination of the traveller. In a period when trains run to Bokhara and Samarkand, a period when the tourist appears at Khartoum, there is no room for a mysterious white race. Even the centuries ago no longer allowed to have its mysteries. The photographer sits on the ruins of Persepolis, and the Roman emperors have passed away.

One may no longer believe in the existence of a strange white people in Africa. Rider Haggard's splendid race is probably only the Brima, originally discovered by Speke in Southwestern Uganda, or the Sir Harry Johnston claims to have discovered in them the origin of the myth of the mysterious white race legends found in the dark continent. He was impressed in nothing more thrilling than a tour of inspection of Ankole when he came across them. They are of a very light complexion and are the aristocrats of this region. Sir Harry holds that they are obviously descendants from Greek, Gala, Somali or other Hamitic stock, and adds that some of them are more like Egyptians than is the case with Galas and Somalis. Romance disappears before the tread of the explorer. The dark continent is dark no more.

The Siamese, like the Chinese, were also believed to be white. The women sometimes have them tipped with silver.

Note this diagram picture of a corn. Note its conical shape—the cause of the pain it presents. And observe makes it hurt. The point of the corn is pushed into the nerves. Applying a Blue-jay plaster instantly removes the pain. Note the felt ring (C) in the picture below. The ring gives barefoot comfort in the tightest shoe.

But that is temporary. One should not continue a ring. The corn should be quickly ended.

The bit of B&B wax in the centre of the ring does that (marked B in illustration below). In two days, usually, the whole corn disappears. It stops the pain, then ends the corn. And it wraps the corn so the action is undisturbed.

Then the action of the B&B wax is centered on the corn. Held there by the rubber coated adhesive tape (C) which wraps conformably around the toe. Healthy tissue is not affected.

These are the reasons why millions of people have adopted the Blue-jay method. Keeping at ease from when this easy way can end them. Treating them in cruder ways is inexcusable.

Get Soiled First

EVERYONE knows that the cuffs are the most exposed portions of the shirt. They get soiled first.

If you turn the cuffs you can wear the shirt a day or two longer before sending it to the laundry.

But if you turn an ordinary cuff it bulges and looks unsightly. You wouldn't be seen with it.

The new "Double Wear Cuff" is different. It folds just as neat and flat when turned in as when turned out. Your friends cannot tell which side is turned out.

One trip to the laundry is harder on a shirt than two days' wear. Every time you turn your cuffs you save laundry money and get more wear out of the shirt. Get the habit —turn your cuffs—it pays.

More and better shaves

Did you ever see a barber start to shave a customer without stropping his razor first? Never! Isn't this fact sufficient?

Stropping, you see; is needed to reform the saw-like edge that results from shaving; to keep the blade free from rust; and to give you for each morning's shave a keen-edged blade. The self-stropping feature of the AutoStrop Razor does all this and more—that makes shaving comfort possible.

Everywhere—razor, strop and 12 blades; complete, in an attractive case, $5.00.

STORING FOR WINTER

Valuable Hints on Canning Fruits and Vegetables.

Vegetables to Be Stored for Winter In Cellars Must Be Sound and Handled Without Bruising—Green Peas, Beans and Corn May Be Successfully Preserved by Placing In Cans and Heating Three Times.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE storing of roots, tubers, cabbage and celery it is a comparatively simple matter if the materials are sound to begin with. Although the decay-producing bacteria, yeasts and molds are always on these they cannot do any injury until the materials are first damaged, in some way as by bruising, beating or freezing. After such injury has been done the decay bacteria and molds are able to feed on the damaged tissue and as a result of this action, decay or rot takes place and gradually spreads until all is spoiled.

Therefore, in storing roots, tubers, cabbage or celery, it is necessary,—

1st. To have only sound, healthy specimens.

2nd. To handle with care so as not to bruise or otherwise damage the tissues.

3rd. Store in a cool, well-ventilated place where there will be no danger of either overheating or freezing.

Overheating or freezing will usually kill the living tissue of which the roots are composed, after which they will readily decay as a result of the rapid multiplication of bacteria and molds in the dead tissues.

In the preservation of such vegetables as green peas, beans, asparagus and green corn, different measures are necessary. These are green and juicy and if stored in the fresh condition they will either wilt or ferment and rot. This fermentation and rotting is due to the development in the mass of the bacteria which are present on the vegetables. There will be sufficient moisture present in the mass to enable the bacteria to multiply and feed on the material and thus hasten the rot.

So in order to preserve such vegetables in the fresh condition the bacteria present have to be all killed and all other bacteria prevented from getting on the material until it is to be used. To get satisfactory results from canning vegetables it is necessary to have—

1st. Good sound, healthy vegetables.

2nd. Good clean sealers with tight-fitting tops and good rubbers.

3rd. Wash the vegetables and fill into the sealers.

4th. Cover with water salted to taste.

5th. Put on the tops and leave slightly loose.

6th. Place sealers in a steamer or boiler half filled with cold water and heat to the boiling point for half an hour.

7th. Remove sealers from boiler or steamer and tighten down the tops.

8th. After 24 hours loosen the tops and return to the boiler or steamer and give another half hour's boiling.

9th. Repeat this process after another 24 hours. Then tighten down the tops and place away.

In the storing of such fruits as apples and pears, which can be stored without canning, we have to prevent the development of molds and yeasts. These are always present on the surface of the fruit. Bacteria do not damage fruits as they do vegetables or meats on account of the sugar and acid nature of the fruits, which is not satisfactory for bacterial development but is just what is needed for molds and yeasts. But even molds and yeasts will not develop on sound apples and pears that are properly stored. If, however, the fruit is damaged in the picking, handling or packing, then the bruised spots enable the mold spores or yeast cells that are on the surface to germinate and grow and multiply, and when once they get a start they will continue to spread even through the sound healthy tissue and from fruit to fruit until the whole pack may be spoiled.

The essentials in the storing of such fruits as apples and pears it is essential,—

1st. To have only sound specimens.

2nd. To pack carefully without bruising.

3rd. To store in a cool, well-ventilated place, where they will be neither overheated or frozen.

Such fruits as strawberries, raspberries, plums, peaches, currants, blueberries, etc., which are soft, cannot be kept any length of time without fermenting or moulding unless they are canned.

These fruits may be cooked in a fruit-testing sugar added to taste, and filled hot direct from the kettle into sterilized sealers removed direct from scalding water. The covers, rings and rubbers should be put on at once direct from scalding water and screwed down tightly.

Another way to preserve such fruits is by the cold pack method. In this method the fruits are not cooked before putting into the sealer. Sound fruit not overripe should be used. This is picked over and filled directly into clean sealers. Stone fruit should be pitted.

A syrup of sugar and water sweetened to taste is then filled into sealers so as to completely cover the fruit. The tops, rubbers and rings are put on, but not screwed down tightly. The sealers are then placed in a boiler containing cold water and this is brought to a boil and kept boiling for half an hour. The sealers are then removed and the tops screwed down tightly at once. When cooled, store away.—Prof. D. H. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

BROKE SPIRIT OF MEN.

Canadian Soldier Got Into American Prison Camp by Mistake.

One of the great scandals of the American army has been connected with the treatment of the men in the prison camps and among the worst offenders is an officer named "Hard-boiled" Smith. It will interest Canadians to know that one man from this country fell into Smith's hands and was given reason to feel thankful for his Canadian citizenship.

Appearing before a special board of inquiry, which is taking data for the Congressional Committee at Washington, who is to hear the direful stories later, Charles A. Mannering, of Robert street, Toronto, told his own story of the abusive and brutal attitude of "Hard-boiled" Smith at prison farm No. 2, near Paris, where Smith was in charge. Mannering was originally in the Canadian army, and transferred in 1917. He completely lost control of himself toward the end of his recital, so intense was his feelings.

Speaking of his initial arrival in camp Mannering stated:

"They searched me and took out my brother's picture, tore it up and threw it into a waste basket. I said, 'That's my brother's picture,' and they said, 'You can buy a dam'n picture for a couple of francs and it will look just as good.'" Mannering asserted.

"I saw them search another machine gunner and take off his revolver," he writing. "A marine pulled it at the man's heart and pulled the trigger, saying, 'If there are any bullets in it you are going to get the first one.' Fortunately, it was unloaded.

"After I was searched a young marine came up to me and smashed me in the face and said, 'Get into that room on the double.' The smash made my nose bleed, and I pulled down my hands to wipe it, whereupon he cracked me with his club. I rushed into the room and stopped behind the door. One of the prisoners grabbed me and pulled me further into the room. 'Never stop on the deadline if you want to keep the room alive,' he said.

"I saw men standing at attention for three hours at a time and every time their muscles gave out under the strain and they sagged, they were struck with a club.

"I saw them drag two sergeants out of the room and make them do torturing exercises for forty minutes. When they dropped they were beaten with clubs. One was clubbed so strenuously that they could not bring him to. They dragged him away and we never saw him again. The boy said, he died.

"We had to sit on the concrete floor all day without resting against any support. If a man leaned back against the wall and the guards saw him, it meant either the hospital or the grave.

"They put two colored men there and when a guard wanted to see how strong he was he rained a load of them into the corridor and knocked him down. This kept the two colored men busy to scrub solid concrete floors intended only to be swept with a stiff scrubbing brush and made the flesh raw and bleeding.

"I asked permission to explain my situation and told Smith I was a wounded man there by mistake. Smith ignored my explanation, and, with the other men, I was deprived of blanket, put on bare floor, and quartered for the night in the riding stable of a Frenchman. The bed was the cobblestone floor of a stall, and no food was given to the men that night. The weather was cold and raining. The next morning the men who had not arrived at the prison camp were lined up. 'Hard-boiled' Smith strutted before us, up and down the line, looking us over. Then he started to yell at us. 'I'm Hard-boiled Smith. Do you get me. I'm boss of this place. Don't forget that. You birds are going to soldier here and you never soldiered before. And you can't skip out. There are only two ways to leave this place. One is to go out in a long wooden box, feet first, and the other way is straight to the front. Those to be blown to bell by the Boche. Yesterday a man thought he knew a different way to get out of here. He went out in a wooden box for yourself," and he pointed to the coffin lying under an old army blanket.

"Shortly I got to see the surgeon. He was all right—the only human I found in that camp. He saw I was wounded, heard my story and put me out of there as soon as he could. I've forgotten his name, but I shall never me right. I was returned to Paris, sent to the fat foot camp at Stanhan, where a medical board placed me in Class D, and I was travelled back to the States, where I got my honorable discharge.

"Hard-boiled" Smith himself is a little man, short and wiry, and as tough as any man I ever saw. All of the men he had with him at the camp to run things were of his type. There was not a guard there that I could find who had been up at the front, or who knew what the game of life is. They were deserters, slackers, men thrown out of different regiments because they were no good. These were the men 'Hard-boiled' had doing his dirty work. It was not an army prison camp, but 'Hard-boiled' Smith's camp. I sure was glad to get out of that place."

A Difficult Question.

One day I was getting dinner in my tent and the usual company of natives watching the performance, when there came along a couple of men who had just landed and who, evidently, had never seen an Eskimo before. I overheard their conversation, relates Rev. S. Hall Young in his book, "Adventures in Alaska." "Say, Jim," said one, "just look there. Did you ever see the like?" (A pause.) "Say, do you think them things has souls?" "We-e-ll," drawled Jim, "I reckon they must have. They're human bein's. But I'll tell you this: If they do, they've all got to go to heaven, sure; for the devil's never have them around."

She Did Her Bit.

Miss Margaret Bell Saunders, the Toronto newspaper woman who did such varied war service abroad, has arrived in Canada on the Scandinavian. Few Canadian women have had a more varied experience this past five years. Sailing for England in the early summer of 1914 for a holiday on the continent with Madame Innis-Taylor, both were in England when the crisis came. As Madame Innis-Taylor had studied in Belgium and knew the language, she joined Mrs. Agar Adamson in her work for the Belgians. Miss Saunders joined her, and for months both worked in a hut at Furnes. Here a bomb injured Miss Saunders so severely that she was removed to the famous hospital at La Panne, where the Belgian Queen paid her a visit.

After a convalescence in England Miss Saunders worked on the land, and helped war efforts, too, with her pen.

Not So Eager.

"So you want to be my son-in-law do you?" asked the old man, with as much farcasm as he could summon.

"Well," said the young man, "I don't particularly want to, I suppose I shall have to be, if I marry your daughter."

BRAVES MAKE DEMANDS

INTERESTING DISPUTE AMONG SIX NATION INDIANS.

Men Who Fought For Their Country During the War Are Opposed to the Indians' Council as Now Constituted and Claim a Voice In the Government of the Red Men on the Reserve Near Brantford.

WHILE the tomahawk has long since been buried, and no longer the braves go out clad in buckskin and marked with feathers the fighting spirit of the Indian has not departed. Proof of this, it was necessary, was vouchsafed by the Indians throughout the Dominion during the past five years. In this the Six Nations, inhabiting the reserve near Brantford—what remains of the tract of land, six miles on each side of the Ouse or Grand river, given to them by the British Crown, for their services to the royalist cause during the United States Revolutionary war,—were no exception. Their record is even better than that of the remainder of Brant county, in which a part of the reserve, and their council seat, Ohsweken, are located, and Brant, including the city of Brantford, lays claim to having furnished more men in proportion to its population than any other part of Canada.

Official records show that 295 of the braves of the Six Nations donned khaki. Of these 27 were killed in action, six died of sickness contracted while on active service, one was reported missing, 55 were wounded, and but one was taken prisoner. This is a record which can be considered with that of any other class or community without bringing a blush of shame to the cheeks of lovers of the Indians.

It is more than passing interest to note, that the first Brant county born man to fall in action, was Lieut. Cameron D. Brant, a direct descendant, on both sides of the house, of that noted warrior chief and loyal British Thayendanegea, Chief Joseph Brant, whose statue adorns Victoria Park, Brantford, and whose tomb is beside His Majesty's Chapel Royal of the Mohawks, but outside the city limits, and a spot frequented by many tourists. He fell in the charge of the Fourth Battalion, when that battalion gained its name of "Mad Fourth," when they charged the hedge at Ypres in the second battle of that name.

But the Six Nations Indians who fought for democracy abroad are now ready to fight for democracy at home. For many years past the warriors have protested against the Government by "petitionat" which is to-day in force among the Six Nations.

The system which is denounced as "petticoat government" is based upon the tribal law that the chiefs shall be named only from among the immediate family of a deceased chief, and by the women of that family. Thus, if a chief dies, the women of the chief's family meet and decide upon the succession, which goes through the distaff side. The chiefs in the aggregate form the Council of Chiefs, which rules the nations to this day, with practically all the old insignia and customs retained.

The position on the reserve to-day is what might be termed as critical, in that the war has brought to a focus the fight on the part of the warriors, for a share in the government of the nations. Conscription at first was ruled from Ottawa to have applied to them, but later this ruling was withdrawn, and the M.S.A. at no time was enforced. The warriors went voluntarily and gladly.

But the warriors claim that the Six Nations Indians' Council did not do its part. They point out that when the question of sending an Indian contingent came up through the office of Lieut.-Col. Hamilton Merritt, of Toronto, an honorary chief and a lifelong friend of the Six Nations, to provide $25,000 for the complete equipment of two companies of Six Nations' Indians, the Six Nations Council refused the offer, on the ground that they, the war chiefs or sachems, had no right to make war, but that this should be taken up by a war council. Later in the 114th Battalion, Brock's Rangers, the Indians had a place, but unfortunately owing to the exigencies of war, this battalion was broken up and many of the men sent to forestry and construction corps, no body of Indians going to the front as a unit. The warriors also point to the fact that the Six Nations' Council refused to assist the Patriotic Fund, and that at one time the Indian soldiers' dependents were cut off, and remained without that assistance until the Haldimand County Patriotic Fund came to the rescue. As further evidence of the need for a change of government they point to the fact that the Six Nations' Council protested against conscription, and also protested against registration to such an extent that they engaged legal talent to fight for those Indians who refused to be registered, though they claim that a huge majority was in favor of registration.

It might be interesting to point out that the basis of the decision of the Indian chiefs against conscription was that by treaty the Six Nations were not subjects of Canada, nor of the British Crown, but were allies of the British Crown. They claimed that under the treaty—and the treaty is still extant and bears the claim—the King across the water could call on his allies of the Six Nations' Indians for help, in which case they must, as treaty bound, respond with all available men. Such call must come from the King himself, however, and not through the Canadian Government, which had no power over them. In like it is held the chiefs were legally correct, but the warriors maintain that despite this, the attitude of the nation was proof that the attitude of the chiefs was not that of the warriors.

A Realization.

"All right," replied Three Finger Sam. "The boys are beginnin' to realize that a feller can't git drunk so fast as interestin' when he's sober as a heap sure reliable."

The Real Issue!

Defeat of the Ontario Temperance Act Means Return of the License System

The magician directs his audience to fix its gaze intently upon something else in order that his dexterous fingers may the more easily practise to deceive.

THE APOLOGISTS for the Liquor Traffic loudly protest that they are "absolutely opposed to the return of the old license system." At the same time they ask you to vote "Yes" to question No. 1 which, if carried by the affirmative, means a return to the Liquor License Act.

They have deliberately stated in their advertising that "the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act does not mean a return to the general sale of spirituous liquors."

Don't be fooled by this camouflage.

As the terms of the old License Act permit the general sale of spirituous liquors, it naturally follows that this statement is a transparent effort at camouflage.

The Bars Must Not Return!

The Temperance Referendum Act, 1919, specifically provides for the return of the old license system. What could be clearer or more to the point than the language of the statute? It plainly states that if there is a majority voting "Yes" on the first question that—

"The Ontario Temperance Act shall be repealed.... and the Liquor License Act....shall have effect until altered or modified by lawful authority as if the Ontario Temperance Act had not been passed." (See any copy of the Act for full text).

In a recent speech, Premier Hearst, the framer of the Act, interpreted question No. 1 as follows:—

"If Question 1 on the referendum ballot is marked 'Yes' by a majority of the voters, Ontario will return to the wide-open bar and liquor store as it was before 1916. If anyone is quoting me as saying anything different, then he is quoting me wrongly."

What will be the Situation after the Referendum?

—If a majority vote "Yes" on question No. 1.

The Ontario Temperance Act will be repealed.

On the day that this Act ceases to exist, the Liquor License Act comes into force.

The Traffic will again be licensed to sell all kinds of intoxicating liquors, as it was before Sept. 16, 1916.

The bars will come back.

The saloons will flourish.

Liquor stores will re-open.

The old "booze" conditions will return. It will be a black day for Ontario.

—If a majority vote "No" on question No. 1.

The Ontario Temperance Act will continue in force.

The danger of resurrecting the old Liquor License Act will have passed once and for all.

The Ontario situation will continue as it exists to-day—except in so far as it may be modified by Dominion legislation, or by an amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act in case a majority vote "Yes" for questions Nos. 2, 3 or 4.

The way to prevent any of these amendments from introducing intoxicating beer or spirituous liquors into Ontario is to vote "No" on every question.

What Will Happen If Majority Vote "No" on Question No. 1, and "Yes" on others?

(a) If a majority vote "Yes" on question 2—then the Ontario Temperance Act will be amended and 5.46% beer (proof spirits) will be sold through Government Agencies.

(b) If a majority vote "Yes" on question 3—Then 5.46% beer (proof spirits) will be sold in standard hotels even in localities formerly under local option where a majority vote favors such sale.

(c) If a majority vote "Yes" on question 4—Then we will have all kinds of liquor sold by Government Agencies.

Don't be fooled! Don't let your attention be distracted from the true issue by the arts of camouflage! Don't be misled into believing that the defeat of the Ontario Temperance Act will merely mean the so-called "light" beer for Ontario. Remember that it actually means bringing back the evil conditions ensuing from the return to the old Liquor License Act. Mark your ballot with

More Farms-Good Times

How It Affects You

Among our returned soldiers there are thousands of practical farmers. Still other thousands are studying farming under Canada's supervision, by hiring out to farmers, and by taking courses in agricultural colleges. These men want to go on the land, but they have no capital. So, through the medium of the Soldiers' Land Settlement Act, Canada says to them "If you are fully qualified to farm, I will lend you money to purchase land, stock and implements. You may pay it back within a stated time, and for the loan of it, I will charge you only a moderate rate of interest."

Canada makes this offer, not only because men who have fought deserve well of their country, but because it is of prime importance that more land should be cultivated.

The love of outdoor life and the resourcefulness of our soldier citizens are just the qualities to make them successful farmers, and upholders of the best Canadian tradition.

As evidence of the value of the Land Settlement Act, the following figures were available on August 15:—

Number of applications from soldiers	29,495
Number of applications investigated and approved (not all placed)	22,281
Number of soldiers actually farming this year	9,043
Average amount of loan to each soldier	$2,960
Total amount of loans	$26,767,304
Average size of farm	160 acres
Total amount of homestead lands—that is, virgin soil placed under cultivation	1,000,000 acres

This million acres was divided among 3,768 soldiers, 160 acres each being the original allotment; but 2,512 soldiers availed themselves of the privilege open to all soldier-homesteaders to obtain an additional 160 acres, making their allotment 320 acres each.

In addition to a million acres of virgin soil already placed under cultivation, more than 6,000 other farms are now being worked, many of which would have been less productive if returned soldiers had not taken them over.

It is just as true to-day as it was before the war that big crops favorably marketed mean general prosperity for Canada.

The more wheat and farm products Canada grows and sells, the more money will be spread through all classes of the community. Not only the farmer, but the merchant, the manufacturer, the industrial wage earner and the professional man will benefit.

Here is where YOU come in.

$24,000,000 of the forthcoming Victory Loan will be used to make loans to soldier farmers.

By purchasing Victory Bonds you will help the soldier who is starting life anew on the farm as well as sharing in this national investment in farm development. You will not only get good interest on your money with the best security, but you will participate in the increased general prosperity which greater farm production brings.

Whether it is one of the many [illegible] of rainfall responsible for the growth of plants, the functions are derived from external sources, and directly or indirectly for the soil and it helps to maintain the supply in a form suitable for plant use. The water is taken up by the roots, passes through the plant, and finally is evaporated from the leaves and stems, the process being known as transpiration.

The amount of water required for crops is surprising. It is estimated that a [illegible] require from 240 to 600 pounds (or [illegible] pounds of dry matter produced, while clovers require [illegible] are about double or three times. Sensational Discovery of Misleading Tactics by Referendum Committee

House-to-House Canvass, Distorting the Issue, Confusing and Misleading the Women Voters

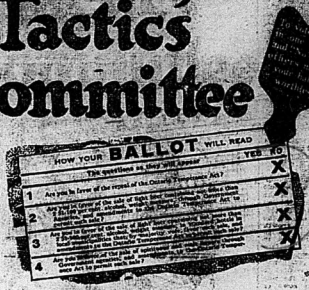
EVIDENCE is accumulating of a widespread campaign of distortion and confusion by the Referendum Committee in an effort to stampede and dragoon the women voters to vote according to the wishes of the Referendum Committee.

Canvassers have been going from door to door all over the Province spreading two absolute untruths—confusing and misleading the innocent—utterly nullifying the effort of the Government to obtain an honest, straightforward, well-advised vote of the people. Independently-minded women who disagreed with them were subjected to tirades of abuse.

It is one of the greatest scandals in the political history of Ontario—a sensational development in the campaign—a grave reflection on, and indictment of, the honesty of purpose of the entire Referendum Committee.

FIRST.—Flamingly colored and sensational circulars have been sent broadcast over the Province in which it is claimed that—in the words of the advertising as shown in the copy reproduced to the right—"To vote 'Yes' in one column and 'No' in the others makes your ballot worthless." Further, self-constituted advisors to the electorate have gone from house to house solemnly making the same declaration—that if you vote "Yes" in one column and "No" in the others, your ballot will be spoiled. That statement by the Referendum Committee is an absolute untruth, and has been publicly branded as such in the columns of the "Mail and Empire," October 4th, by Sir William Hearst, the Premier of the Province. The Premier's statement is reproduced to the right.

SECOND.—These demagogues and representatives of the Referendum Committee have distributed wholesale a distorted ballot in which it is claimed the man or woman who votes "Yes" to Questions 2 and 3 votes for intoxicating beer. That is an absolute untruth. The beer for which you will vote on October 20th, the Beer of the Ballot, is not intoxicating, has been proven non-intoxicating by scientific experiments and thorough research by a board of fourteen qualified experts.



The Citizens' Liberty League hereby calls upon the Referendum Committee to make a public explanation, retraction and apology that will set the people right—or stand condemned of trickery unworthy of public men and women.

Vote "Yes" to all four questions and support the broad-minded men and women of the Citizens' Liberty League in their efforts to obtain sane, moderate temperance legislation.

Vote "YES" to All Four Questions

Mark your ballot with an X. Any other marking will spoil it. Remember also—every voter must vote on every question or his ballot will be spoiled.

A HAPPY HUNTING GROUND

The summer sun beat down on the heaving cradle of the deep, and little Bill lay dozing on the long, lazy swells. Forty miles away the dim outlines of the mountains of Vancouver Island drew a faint fret-work against the horizon. Closer the bold point of Point Grey loomed high, and closer still the rugged entrance to Howe Sound met in endless battle with the charging rollers from the Gulf of Georgia. Little Bill's mother was somewhere in the depths looking for anything in the line of fish, but preferably salmon.

A smudgy smear appeared on the skyline. It drew rapidly nearer. Little Bill saw it not. Pushing herself along at the rate of eighteen knots the fast C. P. R. steamer Princess Patricia raced for harbor, keeping a railroad schedule, and piling a huge wave from each side of her sharp bows. She came close to Bill, who had not yet been christened, the roar of machinery, the rumbling rush of the wash, startled him, and as he looked he was turned over and over in the big wave from the steamship. Little Bill forgot home and mother and all things but escape. Making his little flippers fly he drove himself toward the safety of a cove on Bowen Island, where, in the placid reaches, he rested again, feeling much more comfortable.

This is a true story. Bill is a young hair-seal. There are many thousands of his kind in the coast waters of British Columbia. They do no harm, excepting perhaps that of eating a few million salmon each season and destroying a few thousand yards of salmon nets that entangle them. The only other possible annoyance they might prove to create is that of following trolling fishermen and taking the fish off the hooks when the fisherman thinks he has caught one sure. Otherwise they are fat, lazy, comfortable, intelligent and kindly. They respond quickly to human attention. And the strange thing is that the human appeal is not made through the stomach. Young seals will make friends with men who never fed them a thing to entice them to closer relationship.

For instance there is the illustration of Bill. He rested in the warm cove at Bowen Island. He heard a seductive whistling sound, and he raised his head to look. There, not a hundred yards away he saw some two-legged creatures playing about in the water, and one who was sitting on a floating log was making the attractive noises with his lips. Bill slipped beneath the surface.

Picture the astonishment of the boys on the raft. Suddenly in their midst there came a little spotted seal that swam gaily through them and drew up against the raft, asking as clearly as anything could, to be invited into the revels. One boy reached down, placed his hands behind the tiny flippers and lifted Bill out. They petted him and scratched him, dove and swam about with him. He seemed to enjoy himself fully as much as they. The day drew to a close and the lads went homeward, leaving their deep-sea playfellow alone. Next morning when they came to swim they whistled again. Close beside the raft a sleek little head like that of a wet spaniel raised itself, and a small flippers wriggled joyously. The daily play was on again. It was then he was christened Bill, and learned to know the name. This happened weeks ago and still Bill plays tirelessly and in utter confidence. He rustles his own food, he asks nothing but friendship and companionship. Somewhere on the sandbars of the Fraser river his mother sleeps of nights, gorged with pink salmon, and perhaps dreams of her wandering lad. But Bill, apparently, dreams of nothing but the coming day, and his friends in woollen tights.—I. W. E.

Two Candidates in W. Hastings Labor Candidate Out

NOMINATION PAPERS OF LABOR CANDIDATE CALLAWAY DID NOT COMPLY WITH LAW AND WERE NOT ACCEPTED—NOMINATIONS HERE AND ELSEWHERE.

There was every indication up to the hour of nomination yesterday, that three candidates would be in the field for West Hastings at the approaching Provincial election, but there will be only two. At conventions held by the Conservatives, Liberals and Labor candidates were selected, but when the nomination papers of Mr. J. W. Galloway of Trenton, the Labor candidate, were handed in it was found to be irregular, and this was stated by Mr. Matthews returning officer. There were over 200 names on the paper, but only 53 bore the name of the party's nominee, whereas at least 100 names had to be witnessed. The returning officer stated that he regretted that Mr. Galloway's nomination paper was irregular, and he could not accept it.

Mr. Ireland's paper contained 116 names and Col O'Flynn's 115. These two names will appear on the ballot papers.

Speech Making

At 2 o'clock, nomination having been closed, speech making was the order of the day. The City Hall was filled and a number present were ladies. Mr. Matthews presided over the gathering.

Victory Loan

Mr. W. B. Deacon spoke briefly in regard to the Victory Loan for 1919. Canada, he said, came out of the war in fying colors, but with many thousands wounded soldiers who must be looked after. A gratuity was also promised the returned soldiers, and this amounts to $120,000,000. The Dominion Government wants between $500,000,0000 and $600,000,000, and this is to be raised by another Victory Loan. Our Government has also extended credit to countries which were devastated by the war. He felt confident that Belleville and West Hastings County would do as it done in the previous campaigns, subscribe liberally to this loan.

W. H. Ireland

Mr. W. H. Ireland, Conservative candidate, was the first speaker and received a flattering reception, and stated he was pleased to see so many present, and especially the ladies. He asked the support of electors, and if elected would work for the best interest of the municipality of West Hastings. Some ladies were of the opinion that they could only vote on the referendum, but this was not the case. All were entitled to vote for a candidate as well. He stood loyally behind his leader, Sir Wm. Hearst on his question of the referendum, and all legislation that would be introduced which would be for the benefit of the Province. He, (the speaker) had nothing against his opponent, but he was following a wrong leader. It had been said by some that the Chemical plant sale at Trenton was an election dodge, but this was not a fact, as it was a bona fide transaction. (Laughter).

Col. O'Flynn

Col. O'Flynn first touched the temperance question by stating the referendum was an important measure. As a private citizen he was voting four no's to the questions, and if elected he would do his utmost to see that the will of the people is carried out. He was prepared to vote in the House for an 8 hour day's work, and a minimum wage regulated by a commission: also a rigid inspection of all factories. He was against collective bargaining. He was in favor of a mother's pension, to widows who had been deprived of the means of livelihood. Unemployment should also be recognized. He was also in favor of a Provincial Industrial Commission, so that all disputes might be settled in a satisfactory manner. He was an advocate of public ownership. He was prepared to support the Hydro Electric Power proposition, and was an admirer of Sir Adam Beck. He would like to see the farmers get electric light as cheap as it is possible for them to get it. Col. O'Flynn thought nickel should be refused in Ontario. As a returned man he would do all he could for the returned man so that he can be assisted by a loan especially for the city returned man. The men who fought overseas should be placed in positions if he is capable of fulfilling same, and there would be many vacant positions. A spirit of co-operation should exist between the producer and the consumer. In speaking of the highways the speaker said he was in favor of having good highways. He was in favor of a good road between Belleville and Picton, and making the bay bridge free. He wanted a non partisan election law, and this would remove any temptation. He would favor some legislation being enacted whereby a man's record must be well placed in jail could earn something for his wife.

C. Ketcheson

Mr. Charles Ketcheson of Sidney, in his opening remarks, stated that the Province of Ontario was peopled by patriotic citizens. Our boys did gallant service during the war and the women did yeoman service. The Hearst government fulfilled all its promises and had never broken any of its pledges. The Provincial Government had assisted the farmers of this Province. Labor was a deserving quality in any country. He (the speaker) was in favor of an eight hour day for labor, this to include the farmer, who usually works about 14 hours a day. He did not believe in the many party issues, but was of the opinion that Conservative and Reform was party enough. The opposition had not been able to prove anything against the Provincial Government of this Province. The department of Agriculture was doing much for the farmers. As to the speaker was in hearty support of the Hydro Electric Power Commission and the benefits that it gave to the users of electricity. Good roads mean much and especially to the farmer. The Provincial Government had done much to assist in good road building, which meant much to the people of this county. In 1918 West Hastings only expended about $10,000 in good roads whereas today some $50,000 is expended.

The educational policy of the Hearst Government was of great benefit to the people of the Province. What the Provincial Government might have done if it had continued in power it was hard to say, but it was educating people to many good ballot boxes. (Laughter.) The speaker said that the high cost of living was due largely to the fact that farmers do not produce as much as they desire owing to the lack of labor. If more help could be had the high cost of living would be solved. He (the speaker) made an effort to be the Conservative candidate at the election, but the majority at the convention thought otherwise. He would ask all to do what they could to elect Mr. W. H. Ireland as he was a supporter of the Hearst Government, a progressive government.

J. Wearing

J. Wearing, a barrister of Peterboro', spoke at some length in Col. O'Flynn's interest, attacking the Hearst policy, but forgot to mention any of the misdeeds perpetrated by the Liberals while in power in Ontario. He accused the Hearst cabinet as being sleepers and not attentive to the Province's welfare.

E. G. Porter

Mr. Porter, K.C., M.P., made a telling reply when he spoke in support of the candidature of Mr. W. H. Ireland. It was a fact that the members of the Hearst cabinet could enjoy a night's sleep now as they were not compelled to sit up and watch Sullivan and others stealing timber limits and water powers as they used to do. He would happen this Province would be to elect Dewart. It was a fact that everything was in favor of Hearst as he would happen this Province would be to elect Dewart. It was a fact that everything was in favor of Hearst as he would happen this Province would be to elect Dewart. It was a fact that Hearst's policy of prosperity was by far the best policy of Sir Wm. Hearst who would no doubt, be sustained as the Premier. It was the duty of the electors to support Mr. Ireland who would sit on the Government benches rather than the Liberal candidate who if elected would sit in the Opposition benches. Mr. Porter then minutely went into the committee of labor and agriculture and showed what the Hearst Government had done for these. That Government had passed through trying times, but it emerged with a record that was clean and pure. It was Sir Wm. Hearst who gave the workers the legislation we now have and he will carry out the will of the people on the referendum to be voted upon. What is Hardy Dewart? He is the rising hope of the liquor interest of this Province. Any man who is a temperance man and says he is a supporter of Dewart has to turn some kind of an acrobatic stunt. In conclusion Mr. Porter urged upon all to support Mr. Ireland if they desired this Province to be governed as it should be governed.

Mr. Galloway, the prospective labor candidate, spoke a few words regretting that by an error he was debarred from the contest.

The meeting closed with cheers for the King and candidates.

ONTARIO'S WAR PREMIER GIVEN GREAT WELCOME

Sir William Hearst Enthusiastically Welcomed To Belleville

IMMENSE GATHERING AT BELLEVILLE ARMOURIES ENTHUSIASTICALLY WELCOMED THE PREMIER OF ONTARIO, SIR WILLIAM HEARST—MANY LADIES PRESENT SHOWED IN UNMISTAKABLE MANNER THEIR APPRECIATION OF ONTARIO'S WAR PREMIER, AND THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF HIS GOVERNMENT— MAGNIFICENT SPEECH BY THE PREMIER—SPLENDID RECEPTION OF THE CANDIDATE, MR. W. H. IRELAND—UNBOUNDED ENTHUSIASM.

Cheers, loud, persistent and prolonged, rang through the Armouries and resounded through the streets of Belleville Saturday evening in the warm-hearted, enthusiastic and appreciative welcome accorded to Sir William Hearst, Premier of Ontario, by the vast throng of citizens of Belleville and vicinity which crowded the large building to its utmost capacity, every seat being occupied and many being obliged to stand. The enthusiasm was so spontaneous and loudly expressive that even the massive building shook with the force of many voices raised in honor of Ontario's war Premier, the man bold enough to be honest and set high ideals before party politics in the public life of the nation and province, the man who risked even heath itself to work early and late in the cause of the soldiers, against the advice of his physician, in order that Ontario might have a war administration which would be worthy of the magnificent war record of Ontario's soldier sons, with the result that the brightest gem in Canada's glorious war record is this good old province of Ontario, its heroic soldiers, its war Premier and the Government behind him.

It was a scene never to be forgotten when Sir William Hearst rose to speak and the pent-up enthusiasm of the large audience broke all bounds and men and women rose to their feet with one accord, cheered until they were hoarse and waved hands and handkerchiefs in an unmistakable tribute of honor, respect and appreciation to a worthy leader who is ever inch a leader.

If any evidence were needed of the probable verdict of these loyal constituencies, famed for their United Empire Loyalist ancestry, at the polls on October 20, that evidence was furnished by the appreciative welcome accorded the Premier of Ontario, Sir William Hearst, by the large crowd of citizens assembled to do him honor in the Belleville Armouries Saturday evening.

What made the outstanding success of the meeting Saturday evening even more remarkable were the many adverse conditions. The Premier was just closing a strenuous week of exhausting meetings, travelling from place to place throughout Eastern Ontario, and was naturally tired and anxious to get home for the Sunday rest before entering upon the last week of the campaign with its work and worry. The weather was cold and the atmosphere in the armouries was not conducive to comfort or enthusiasm. The program was long and it was late before the Premier started to speak. Then again, it was Saturday night, when shopping and recreation has more attraction as a rule than public meetings. Despite all handicaps, however, the meeting was a magnificent success from start to finish and few left the hall until the close.

MANY LADIES PRESENT.

The large number of ladies present was a remarkable feature, showing the deep interest being taken in public affairs by the fair sex now that they can enjoy the full franchise upon an equality with men as the result of the progressive legislation of the Hearst Government. Mothers even brought their infants in arms rather than miss the opportunity of seeing and hearing the Premier of Ontario; who is such an outstanding and honored figure in public life today.

It is worthy of note that the addresses were listened to with close attention by all and that there was not one interruption or expression of dissent during the entire program of speeches. The enthusiasm of the audience was manifested by frequent and hearty applause.

When the Premier first entered the hall and was escorted to the platform by a group of prominent men, including the candidate, Mr. W. H. Ireland, E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P., Mr H. W. Ackerman, Mr. Sandy Grant, and others, the first tribute of appreciation was given in enthusiastic cheering and hand-clapping, to which the Premier smilingly bowed his acknowledgments. This tribute, warm and whole-hearted as it was, however, was overshadowed later when Sir William Hearst rose to speak and was prevented from doing so for some time by the large audience which rose to its feet and voiced a thunderous welcome in cheers and hand waving continuous and prolonged.

The Premier was visibly affected by the warmth and unmistakable sincerity of his welcome, which seemed to effectually dispel the fatigue of mind and body occasioned by his hard week of speaking in many places, and he voiced his appreciation in words eloquent and inspiring, followed by an address of an hour and a half's duration, which for eloquence, purity of diction, plain statement of facts and unanswerable argument was a magnificent presentation of the necessity of a mandate of the electors for a continuation of progressive and honest government.

No issue was evaded or clouded by generalities, the Premier stood four-square on every question and voiced his convictions and those of the Government in a manly, straightforward fashion.

ON THE PLATFORM.

The large platform upon which many seats had been provided was crowded with admirers of the policy and performances of Sir William Hearst and his Government, and it was notable that among them were some who are nominally Liberals, but in this election prefer the leadership of Sir William Hearst. Among those on the platform were: Messrs. E. G. Porter, K.C., M.P. for West Hastings, W. H. Ireland, Conservative candidate for West Hastings, Sandy Grant, Conservative candi-

Hearst Gov't Takes Big Lead At Official Nominations

FOUR SUPPORTERS OF SIR WM. HEARST ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION, INCLUDING TWO CABINET MINISTERS—DEWART ONLY SUCCEEDED IN GETTING 69 CANDIDATES —105 HEARST CANDIDATES — LIBERALS SURRENDER THREE SEATS HELD IN LAST HOUSE.

Conservatives elected by acclamation—Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody, Minister of Education, North-East Toronto; Brig.-Gen. Hon. A. E. Ross, Kingston; W. D. Black, Addington; Robert J. Cooke, North Hastings.

Conservatives nominated	105
Liberals nominated	69
United Farmers nominated	70
Laborites nominated	29

Conservatives are running in all but five ridings. In East Hamilton Conservative support is going to Lieut. Samuel Landers, the Soldier-Labor candidate. In Centre Huron, William Proudfoot, former Liberal leader, now an independent, is left a clear field in his fight with the machine Liberals and the U. F. O. In East Kent the U. F. O. nominee, hitherto a well-known Conservative, will have Conservative support. In Glengarry and North Bruce the Conservatives are also leaving the fight to the Liberals and the U. F. O.

In addition to the 23 straight Laborites nominated, the Independent Labor party has endorsed U.F.O. candidates in many ridings.

The Hearst Government will go to the country Monday next with four of its supporters already elected by acclamation, and with candidates in all but five of the ridings for which members have to be chosen. Nominations were held throughout the Province yesterday, and though there were surprises in a few ridings, in the main the candidates nominated by the various conventions held Friday and Saturday were for the final week of the campaign. The fact that the Government has four acclamations to its credit was unexpected. It was taken for granted that Hon. Dr. Cody and the new Minister, Brig.-General Ross, would not have opposition, but within the past two or three days it was reported that the Liberals and farmers would not attempt to displace Black in Addington. The walk-over for Bob Cooke, the North Hastings member, was a surprise to many.

As the parties stand at the beginning of the last week of the campaign the Government has an immense superiority. It is fighting in 105 out of the 110 constituencies, whereas the Liberals and the U. F. O. are trying their luck in less than two-thirds of the total—the farmers, according to the count last night having one more candidate in the field than the Liberals. The Independent Labor party has over a score of straight candidates, all in the cities or the larger industrial towns. The Labor men are fighting more generally than this record indicates, however, since in quite a number of ridings the candidates running as "U.F.O." are running with labor support. In only two or three ridings are these "joint" candidates labor men, and where the U. F. O. is supported by a labor man the support is nominal rather than real, as in the case of Scott in North Oxford, who, though endorsed by the U. F. O. executive, is being ignored by the rank and file.

At the village of Plainfield nomination of candidates for East Hastings was held, presided over by Returning Officer Mr. Geo. Stokoe. Messrs. Sandy Grant, Conservative, and H. K. Denyes, U.F.O., were the only candidates named. Mr. Tucker, county organizer of the U.F.O., spoke for Mr. Denyes, and Messrs. T. A. McFarlane and W. E. Tummon for Mr. Grant, representative for Mr. Hastings in the Ins. The hall was filled to ——flowing with electors.

North Hastings.

Mr. R. J. Cook, the popular representative of North Hastings in the Provincial Legislature, was ——ny elected by acclamation to represent that riding. The nomination meeting was held at Madoc and was well attended.

PRINCE EDWARD CO.

In Prince Edward County, the candidates are R. A. Normas, Conservative; and Nelson Parliament, Liberal.

Parliament is the sitting member having been elected in a three-cornered contest against two Conservative candidates.

Cardinal Mercier Arrives in Toronto

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—Cardinal Mercier, the heroic Belgian prelate, visited Canada for the 1st time today when he arrived here this morning from the United States. A large gathering of civic and ecclesiastical dignitaries met his Eminence at the station, and following a short visit to the residence of Archbishop McNeil he was tendered a civic reception at the City Hall and luncheon with members of the Empire Club. This afternoon he was given the degree of L. L. D. at Toronto University. His Eminence expressed deepest gratitude for the help of the Canadian people to Belgium in her distress and the highest admiration for the valor of the Canadian troops.

Bound For Belleville Coal Schooner Sinks

SCHOONER BERTHA CALKINS, OF PICTON, WITH CARGO OF COAL FOR BELLEVILLE, SINKS AT "THE GAP" IN HEAVY BLOW — CREW REACHED SHORE SAFELY.

In a big blow Sunday night the schooner Bertha Calkins, of Picton, Capt. Van Dusen, Master, sprang a leak and sank in twenty-five feet of water, fortunately without any loss of life.

The schooner left Oswego with a cargo of 450 tons of coal for the Schuster Company of Belleville, and ran into heavy weather on the lake, the strain no doubt opening a seam. Capt Van Dusen successfully navigated his craft to a point near the shore between "The Gap" and Play-er's Cove, and the crew easily reached shore in the ship's boats.

No difficulty is anticipated in raising the sunken schooner and bringing ship and cargo to Belleville.

To The Electors of West Hastings

Having been honored with the Liberal-Conservative nomination for the constituency of West Hastings, and as it will be impossible for me in the brief time before polling day to call upon every elector, I take this means of soliciting your vote and influence. The record of the Government of Sir William Hearst is one of honest integrity, economy and progressive rule, and is too well known and appreciated to need extended comment here. If honored with the endorsement of the electors at the polls, will do all in my power to assist in carrying out the progressive policy of my leader, Sir Wm. Hearst.

WOMEN AND THE BALLOT

Paragraphs of Interest for Women Voters

Some women voters have the mistaken idea that they can only vote on the referendum. As the Hearst Government extended the full franchise to women they can vote for the Legislative candidate as well.

The women who vote to keep the bar abolished should vote for the man who abolished the bar, Sir William H. Hearst, represented up the ballot in West Hastings by W. H. Ireland.

A vote for W. H. Ireland is a vote against Hartley Dewart.

All women on the voters' list can vote for the candidate as well as the referendum. Be sure you get both ballots.

Mothers' pensions will be provided by the Hearst Government. Women who mark their ballot for W. H. Ireland will be voting for the certainty of mothers' pensions.

Some women electors think they can only vote on the referendum. If they can vote on the referendum they can vote for the candidate.

Thanks to the Conservative Government in Ontario the ballot is absolutely secret. No one can tell how an elector votes. In the bad old days of the Rose Government machine the ballot could be traced, but that was before the days of the honest Hearst Government.

The Hearst Government gave the women of Ontario the ballot and gave them the right to become members of the Legislature, municipal councils and school boards upon an equal basis with men. Can the women consistently vote against the Government which placed the ballot in their hands? A vote for W. H. Hearst is a vote for W. H. Hearst, whose Government gave the women the ballot.

Sure Way To Get Rid Of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is, to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Called By Death

THOMAS FLANNERY.

On October 14, at 101 College St., there passed away an employee of the C. P. R., Mr. Thos. Flannery. He was fifty-two years of age, and was born in Thurlow, but had resided in Belleville for a number of years, and was a member of St. Michael's church. He leaves a widow and two sisters, Mrs. Turney of Trenton, and Mrs. J. Morphy, Toronto.

WILMEN BILLS

There passed away on Sunday Oct. 12th, on the 5th Concession of Thurlow, after an illness of several years, Mr. Wilmen Bills, son of the late Nelson Bills. He was born in Thurlow in 1857, and resided there all his life. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, one son Herbert, of Thurlow, one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Glass of Marmora, one brother, Everette Bills, and one sister, Mrs. C. P. Hinchcliffe. Mr. Bills in religion was a Methodist and was a member of the A. O. U. W. and Moira Lodge A. F. and A. M. The funeral took place this afternoon to Zions Hill.

JOHN K. F. SIMMONS

Mr. John K. F. Simmons passed away this morning at 34 Hillside street, after being seriously ill about a week. He was born in the 5th Concession of Thurlow some seventy-six years ago, where he resided until two years ago when he moved to the city. He was a member of the Methodist Church. Besides his widow he leaves to mourn his loss one son, Warner Simmons, 2nd concession of Sidney, and two daughters, Miss Franklin at home, and Mrs. Blake Pitman of Thurlow.

STEVEN D. CRANDALL

Died in Belleville on Sunday October 12th, 1919, Mr. Steven D. Crandall. He was eighty-one years of age and was a widower, his wife dying some four years ago. He was born in Prince Edward County and lived practically all his life i nthat county until about three years ago, when he moved to the city, where he has since resided with his son, at 21 Coleman street. He leaves to mourn his loss three sons, Lorne of Belleville, and Blake of Woodstock, and one daughter in Colorado.

The funeral took place from the residence of his son, 216 Coleman Street, on Monday, October 13th. A short service was held at the house, after which the remains were taken to Picton by motor, by the Belleville undertaking firm, for interment. The bearers were Messrs. A. Keller, H. Brown, J. A. Carson, W. Post, Leslie Brickman and M. Martin.

JOHANNA O'CONNOR

Mrs. Johanna O'Connor died at her late residence, 54 Moira street, on Saturday, October 11th. She was sixty-two years old and was born in Murray township, where she resided until moving to Belleville some three years ago. She is the daughter of the late Edmund Regan and wife of the late Patrick O'Connor, and was a devout member of St. Michael's Church. She leave, to mourn her loss, three daughters, Mrs. Mary Leahy, Bay City, Mich Mrs. D. Davidson, Detroit, and Miss Maude at home; three sons, Michael Regan, Bay City, Mich., John and Hugh of Michigan.

The funeral took place yesterday to St. Michael's Church with interment at St. James Cemetery. The bearers were J. Lee, F. Hynes, H. Walsh, H. Freeman, A. Farrell and J. Frawley.

English is to be taught for the future in Belgian schools instead of German.

Music and Drama

"HEARTS OF THE WORLD."

D. W. Griffith's stupendous picture, "Hearts of the World," which is coming to the Belleville Opera House for one week, commencing Monday, October 20th, is the greatest of films and demonstrated thought David W. Griffith devoted to the production of "Hearts of the World," which is being shown again at Griffith's this time at popular prices and which has been acclaimed his supreme triumph of direction. His background was the war-front in France. His characters were human in the midst of an awful tragedy, yet he interminged in all the moods of pre-attack—drama, war—humanness, and acceptance fight, a wonderful love story that no heart can resist. Nobody knows how much it cost for D. W. Griffith to film his supreme triumph, "Hearts of the World," now playing at Griffith's and nobody seems to care. Mr. Griffith himself, doesn't know. All he feels about it is that the greatest ambition of his life is realized, which is more to him than money. A two-act Mack Sennett comedy, and a two-act comedy with Joe Martin, the famous monkey completes the picture play portion of the program. Three excellent vaudeville offerings are also being offered on the program, Mlle. Zita in a new and beautiful posing offering, Lucille Karlki, in catchy songs at the piano, and DeVan Dell and Lee, a singing and dancing novelty specialty. The bill which is large in easily one of the best the management has offered for several months. It is being repeated again to-night and Wednesday night.

"KULTUR" PULSATING DRAMA

Woman's ability to make an, unmake the career, of men and to rule destinies of Nations is no longer a mystery to the big crowds who saw Gladys Brockwell in "Kultur," at the Palace yesterday. As the woman who started the World's War," this splendid emotional actress gave a fascinating portrayal of the beautiful favorite of the late Emperor Franz Josef of Austria. Because the Archduke Franz Ferdinand was jealous of her power over the Kaiser Wilhelm and that she gave her banished from Vienna, she persuaded the Serbian Danilo to kill him and gave Austria an excuse for war. Then followed many exciting scenes in the capitals of the Central powers mixed with backstairs intrigue and plots and counterplots and journey secret agents. "Kultur," will remain at the Palace for three performances yet, to-night and Wednesday afternoon and night. Those who enjoy a drama filled to the gunnels with "Punch," with thrills and breathless action will find it one of the best attractions that has been shown on a local silver sheet for some time. A funny Luke comedy, "Under the Fire," and a splendid interesting chapter of "The Perils of Thunder Mountain," are also being shown on the same program.

"MY SOLDIER GIRL"

Presented by a big company, this brilliant musical spectacle, "My Soldier Girl," coming to Griffin's Opera House next Friday, matinee and night offers nearly three hours of the high novel ideas ever presented to the theatre going public in the past decade. A smashing hit from the first performance playing to capacity houses night after night goes to prove that this clever offer some something different. The locale of this unusual play opens with a scene at Colonel Stone's home, Miami, Fla., during a lawn fete given by the Colonel in honor of his "overseas" friends. The second act shows a gorgeous Follies production in preparation and no more elaborate stage settings have been presented by any offering. The success of this remarkable play has been phenomenal. Some idea of this may be had from the fact that it was the book, other features declare that it's the combination of clever comedy, scenery and the excellent cast and big chorus that makes "My Soldier Girl" the most talked of musical show of the season. There are a score or more of tuneful melodies among which "My Soldier Girl," "Just For You," "Jasper's Ragtime Band," "The Dixie Wedding Tune," and "Wrap Me in Bundle of Love," are the real favorites.

FARMER STRUCK OIL

DRILLING FOR WELL

London, Ont., Oct. 14.—While drilling for water on the farm near Pond Mills, which is between this city and St. Thomas, Leslie Mitchell noticed a strong odor of oil. This occurred at 70 feet and the deeper he went the stronger the smell. A sample was brought to London and proved to be crude petroleum of the best quality.

Drilling was continued and has now reached a depth of 85 feet. Mr. Mitchell is confident that he has struck oil, and although several local financiers have approached him with offers for a lease he has so far not closed a deal and does not intend to do so until the offers are raised to a reasonable figure.

At one time London was the refining centre of Canada and hopes are now being entertained that the city will regain that position, and instead of

Sentenced For Mutiny Soldier Is Re pricved

Gunner McDonnell, Facing Life Term, to Get Liberty.

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—Mayor Church has received word from Col. Osborne, Military Secretary to the Minister of Militia, that Gunner Charles McDonnell, who was given a life sentence for mutiny, has been pardoned and will arrive Sunday in November. Gunner McDonnell's wife resides in Toronto.

On December 14, 1918, some 40 Canadians and a number of Australians and New Zealand troops were placed under arrest following an uprising. Gunner McDonnell, it was alleged, was one of the ringleaders and was sentenced to prison for five years. Later, at Calais, further trouble developed when he agreed not to go on parade "if the other fellows wouldn't," and his sentence was increased. He is at present in Portland Prison, England.

THOSE "NEW LITTLE GIRLS"

Their Grandmas Were Started Old Fashioned Women on a Pessimistic Train of Thought.

The Woman Who Sees had just bought a new veil and had hurried into the dressing room of the shop to adjust it, says the New York Sun. Crowds of women were edging their way to the mirrors to preen themselves. She managed to squirm into a space just vacated by a gorgeous creature in purple velvet. As she glanced into the mirror she noticed two youngsters standing beside her. They were both sweet-looking little things. Not a day over fourteen, she murmured to herself, and then stared with wonder. The elder of the two pulled out a tiny vanity case and proceeded to powder the tip of her pert little nose. She next arranged a curl over her shoulder to its very best advantage, while her companion stood back admiringly. Then she pressed her eyebrow with the tips of her fingers and smiled complacently. She was pretty and she knew it.

"Are you going to the frat meeting Monday evening, Dot?" queried her companion. Dot raised an eyebrow and drawled nonchalantly, "Perhaps, dearie; it depends entirely on the mood I'm in." That was the straw that broke the camel's back. The woman gave a convulsive gasp and literally bolted. Moods! She was amused and yet it was pitiful. She is not an advocate of corporal punishment, but she would have enjoyed spanking those youngsters. What kind of women will they make? The woman is puzzled.

CAESAR'S WORK IN GERMANY

Record of Famous Roman Conqueror When He Drove the Teutons Out of Flanders.

Both the American army of occupation and the German people are agitous to know just how long the khaki-clad visitors are to remain. Since no intimation comes from those in authority both of them might recall that one Julius Caesar drove the Teutons out of Flanders. In fact, he mentions a victory at Mont Aaxois, says Kansas City Star. He, too, followed them right up to the Rhine, built a bridge in ten days, crossed over and took possession of the valley on the "right bank," spent his legions to police the "treacherous inhabitants." That was in 55, 54, and the Roman army remained 400 years. All that time flotillas of galleys were cruising up and down the Rhine. The army of occupation put the Germans to building bridges, aqueducts and castles under the direction, and the ruins of these great works now can still be seen in the valley of the Moselle. The presence of the Romans was a blessing to the Germans, however, for they pursued a kind policy toward them, after having collected a tribute of 40,000,000 sesterces or approximately $1,500,000. Their treachery, taught them to read, to take a bath and to shave.

"Earthquake Proof" Hotels.

A chain of "earthquake proof" hotels, sufficiently magnificent to win the approval of fastidious South Americans, is to be constructed immediately by the United Hotels company, which already operates many hostelries on this half of the continent. Sites in seven countries—Chili, Peru, Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia and Colombia—have been selected, and the first hotel—palatial, to judge from the architect's drawing—will be built at Lima, at a cost of $2,000,000. This is one of the largest projects ever undertaken by a hotel syndicate, and both the United States government and the South American governments interested will afford co-operation. The hotel at Lima will be one of re-enforced concrete, erected on enormous concrete foundations, expable, the company believes, of offering good resistance to the disturbances of the earth's surface to be expected in those regions.—New York Evening Post.

Walk for Health.

Girls and women who walk to and from their places of employment do not, as a rule, suffer from headaches or other kindred ills. Indeed, excellent authority assures us that walking will do more to keep the average person in good physical shape than all the high priced tonics on the market. Of course, where one has to ride several miles to reach place or workroom, going "afoot" is out of the question, but the young woman who lives within reasonable distance of the place of employment should give street cars and trains a wide berth.

Antiprohibitionist.

In Little Marie's house the advantages and disadvantages of the "wet" and "dry" have been discussed with much fervor.

When, during Sunday morning service, Marie demanded a drink and her mother informed her quietly, but firmly, that she could not have one, Marie inquired anxiously in a stage whisper:

"Can't I never have another drink now that the country's gone dry?"

Will A Miracle Happen at Chicago? Can Poisoned Kiddies Recover

DOCTOR SAYS IT'S A MYSTERY TO HIM, BUT MUST BE DIRECT ANSWER TO THE PRAYERS THAT HAVE GONE UP FROM ALL OVER.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14—Ik was cold outside Columbus Hospital Sunday, but none of the chill penetrated to the little white room where Shirley and Edna Luipart lay, for a miracle had been performed there, and the two little girls that were poisoned by their insane mother 14 days ago with bichloride of mercury, that deadly, insidious drug which destroys first the kidneys and then the tissues, and for whom all hope was abandoned Friday night by Dr. Thomas Carter, expert toxicologist, now have a chance for life.

AS BY A MIRACLE

"It can now be stated with reasonable assurance that Shirley, the elder girl, is out of danger," said Dr. Carter Sunday evening. "The thing is a mystery, a miracle. It is a direct answer to the prayers that have gone up from all over the country for the restoration of these two innocent children.

"Edna is also responding exceptionally well to treatment, and will be well within a few days. She has passed the crisis, I believe, and each hour seems to be gaining strength. If we are able to prevent a hemorrhage during the next 24 hours she will have better than an even chance to live."

The general atmosphere around the hospital Sunday reflected the growing spirit of optimism. The haggard look on the father's face gave way to a wan smile, and he replied to the hundreds of inquirers with interest.

A continuous stream of Sunday visitors, passed the hospital during the day, gazing up with wraps interest at the room where the two girls had been reprieved from death.

MOTHER DECLARED INSANE

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 14.—Mrs. Hazel Luikart of Royal Oak, whose two little children, Shirley and Edna are still fighting for life in Columbus Hospital, Chicago, from the effects of poison she administered to them forgiveen days ago, was Saturday afternoon committed to the State Asylum for the Criminally Insane at Ionia.

Following the examination Dr. Morris declared that Mrs. Luikart showed symptoms of paranoia but that no signs of paresis were detected, though they might develop at any time.

SIR WILLIAM HEARST APPRECIATED.

The magnificent welcome accorded by the citizens of Belleville and vicinity to the Premier of Ontario, Sir William H. Hearst, must have convinced the gentleman that faithful public service is appreciated by the great warm-hearted public despite carping criticism of political partisans who are prone to withhold the meed of earned praise to public men of an opposite political faith until the grave has closed over the tired body worn out in earnest, conscientious consecration to the service of the nation. Sir William Hearst has rendered outstanding service to the British Empire, the Canadian nation and the Province of Ontario, in a leadership strong, true and steadfast, animated by the highest and best of ideals. Under his leadership Ontario has gained a name and fame the world over for progressive achievement. Now he comes to the people with a record clean and unblemished for the verdict which can only be recorded by the ballot.

The sincere tribute of appreciation rendered by the large gathering at the Armouries Saturday evening, representative of all shades of political belief and the many new voters who took political part for the first time, not crystallized as yet proves that the ballots of Ontario will also record the appreciation of Ontario electors in a mandate for a continuance of clean, honest and progressive government.

ANNIVERSARY OF TRENTON EXPLOSION.

One year ago today, October 14, 1918, the great explosion, or series of explosions occurred at Trenton, resulting in the partial destruction of the great munition plant at that place operated by the British Chemical Company for the British Government. Fortunately there were no lives lost and not one person was seriously injured. The damage sustained to the plant was over one million dollars while injury to buildings in the town of Trenton, shattered glass, etc., amounted to some thousands of dollars more. The explosion resulted in operations being closed at the plant, throwing about two thousand men out of employment, many of whom left town to secure employment elsewhere. Trenton was suddenly forced to face new and trying conditions in a business way, but was not cast down or discouraged and now arrangements have practically been completed for another large plant there which will operate the former business premises of the British Chemical Plant. In other ways Trenton has also progressed since the great disaster, due to the energy and progressiveness of its public men, one of the most energetic and progressive of whom is Mayor W. H. Ireland.

A LITTLE CANADIAN OR A GREAT CANADIAN.

A nation is great or weak in proportion to the greatness or weakness of its leaders. Lack of sane, intelligent, moral leadership shattered the greatness of Germany and made bankrupt that powerful and progressive nation, morally, financially and industrially. Canada can only sustain its present greatness and become even a greater nation in proportion to the greatness of its leaders and the support given them by the whole people. Ontario as the greatest province in a great nation will progress only in proportion to the honesty, progressiveness and ability of its leaders.

This election contest is a contest between leaders, with the candidates practically acting as counters.

Consider the leaders in the present contest.

Sir William Hearst, who has always stood four-square on every question, honest and true, frank and straightforward, whose every effort during the war was to do everything possible for the soldiers and who fought for the sending of speedy reinforcements to Canada's soldier heroes overseas in the hour of their greatest need, whose every effort during the war was to do everything possible for the soldiers.

Mr. Arthur Dewart, the evasive, shifty politician, busy snuffer out of scandal where scandal exists, whose chief claim to public attention is the making of hysterical charges which he is unable to prove or show any substantial foundation for; Dewart, the only English-speaking man of any prominence in the public life of Ontario to volunteer to join the coast-to-coast tour of Little-Canadians urging the people to substitute ballots for bullets in fighting the Hun, to answer the urgent call for reinforcements that have boys overseas by any election to ascertain whether real red-blooded Canadians really wanted to go the limit to win the war and save Canada from the Hun.

Dewart got his answer then in thunderous tones from a Canada at war with a powerful and unscrupulous foe and with nothing but contempt for shifty politicians unwilling to risk political fortunes for the salvation of the nation.

DEWART, whose autobiography published in 1912, credits him with being in favor of a Canada independent from the British Empire, who fought against sending speedy reinforcements to Canada's soldiers—this is the man chosen as leader by the little-Canadian wing striving to control the Liberal party, who seeks to be leader of this great province.

HEARST, the soldiers' friend, first last and all the time, the public man brave enough to be honest and stake his existence in public life upon the expression and carrying out of his convictions as to what will best promote the welfare of the citizens of Ontario, with a record of wise, progressive and businesslike government, is before the electors for endorsation. What will your answer, as a true Canadian, be on October 20th?

This is a contest for leadership. Candidates are counters.

A vote for W. H. Ireland will be a vote for W H. Hearst, a leader of whom all may be proud.

CRISP COMMENT

"Anybody who believes that man is foolish," says Rev. Solomon Jacobs, Chief Rabbi, of Toronto, in referring to Hartley Dewart, the "so-called" Liberal leader, noted for hectic and hysterical charges which he is never able to substantiate.

The little-Canadians who hoisted Hartley Dewart into the leadership of the Liberal party in Ontario will attain their real triumph if Dewart is by any combination of unfortunate chances returned as Premier of Ontario. This will be a signal of success to what the knives of political vengeance even more keenly against the patriotic Liberals who placed country before party. Wreck the wreckers by voting for Hearst candidates.

× × ×

With the Liberal Toronto Globe frantically calling upon Leader Dewart to declare himself on prohibition, and the Liberal Toronto Star advising its readers to vote in support of Premier Hearst, Mr. Dewart is in need of sympathy in his home town.—Hamilton Herald (Independent).

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Belleville, Oct. 11, 1919

To the Editor of The Intelligencer

Sir,—As the City Council has made themselves a Committee to inquire into the High Cost of Living, I wish to draw their attention to the fact that the poor people in particular are very much imposed on. Common sense and reason teaches us that highest prices should be paid by the rich and that the rate of prices, ought to be fixed on income so that people who are pulling out of the people would have to pay the biggest price. But it is very regrettable to say it is just the other way. It is the poor people that are imposed on and paying the largest prices. The liberty of discounting our earnings and money by raising the price of food stuff just when they like is far more liberty but when the price of tomatoes or potatoes at 75c a bushel and the dealer charges 15c for half a peck which makes the poor pay in half pecks $1.20 is the liberty of robbing the poor a little too much.

This kind of greed is practiced by nearly all the dealers and ought to be stopped with an iron hand Prohibition will help the poor and when wheaties and beer and tea, always an indebted ment will be gone forever, we must not allow other substitute, through profiteering and greed to take its place.

Yours truly,

THOS. SULLIVAN.

NEW VALUABLE FOOD PLANTS

Recently Brought From Peru by Members of the National Geographic Expedition.

A new and important breakfast food plant has been fetched from Peru by the Yale geographic expedition. It yields a product claimed to be fully equal to oatmeal. The plant in question is a cultivated pig-weed, and excitedly will the discoverer describe grain producing crops of the Incas.

"Quinoa" is the native name for the manufacture or "chicha," a native beer. From a valley high up in the Peruvian Andes the explorer has brought a new and remarkable wild relative of the tomato. It has an apple-like flavor, and the fruit is "husked." The plant, found in company with cacti and other such water-starved vegetable species. The plant is a vine which, as it appears may be trained over trellises. It may be crossed with our own tomatoes for the production of varieties with special edible virtues. Another remarkable discovery was a kind of tomato that grows on a tree. It is only a little tree, four or five feet high, with somewhat drooping spread horizontally, giving it a flat-topped effect. The tomatoes are egg shaped, and borne in pendant clusters from near the ends of the branches. The explorer recommends the plant for introduction into the United States, was the "lucuma," which can hardly be called an discovery, for so much as it has long been a popular fruit in Peru. It has rich, nearly solid flesh, somewhat resembling and flavor a cooked sweet potato, and is largely consumed by Indians in Florida or in southern California.

HAD REGULAR SINGING TIME

What a pleasure it would be to know the woods and the wood folk as Thoreau did. In "Walden," he tells us very regularly at half-past seven, one part of the summer, after the evening train had gone by, the whippoorwill chanted their vespers for half an hour, sitting on a stump by my door, or upon the ridgepole of the house. They would begin to sing as soon as it was quite dark as a clock, within a few minutes of the same time, as referred to the setting of the sun, every evening. I had a rare opportunity to observe the habits of this bird, and so near me that I distinguished not only his notes, but the intervals, as often that singular buzzing sound like a fly in a spider's web, only proportionately louder. Sometimes he would circle round and round in the woods a few feet distant as if tethered by a string, sometimes only a few rods from his eggs. They sang at intervals throughout the night, and were again as musical as ever just before and about dawn."

Moving Picture Expenses.

The moving picture industry takes in millions of dollars a year, but a big part goes out for salaries, for "stars" and for needless expenses.

Quite recently a very much excited individual stopping at one of the big hotels in New York city called up Los Angeles, Cal., on the long distance telephone many times daily and rolled up a weekly bill of $3,000 for this item alone.

"Who is he?" queried a bystander, to whom the hotel proprietor related the story. "One of the new oil millionaires?"

"No," was the reply, "he is a moving picture director. He is just a sample of the high cost of turning out moving pictures today."—Wall Street Journal.

Flu Again Ravages London.

Influenza has broken out again in London, making a third wave-in less than a year. The cases that are complicated by pneumonia tend to follow the usual course common in the years before the war. This is in contrast with the rapidly fatal type characterizing the summer and autumn epidemic, and suggests a distinct decrease in virulence. Of those attacked previously very few have been attacked again, which immunity seems to have been established, for in most cases of reinfection there are only vague rheumatic pains and malaise lasting a few days.

Start Education Early.

The street car was crowded, which wasn't unusual. A man carrying a baby boy pushed his way inside to a strap. The swinging piece of worn leather caught the baby's eye, and he reached for it, and missed. It swung again, and the baby caught it tightly. The crowd laughed, and was glad it had something to laugh at.

"That's it, son," said the father. "Hang on as well as you can. You have use for that if you stay around this town long."

Country's Lumber Production.

A total lumber production of 32,700,000,000 feet is the estimated cut for the year 1918 on the basis of partial returns received by the forest service of the United States Department of Agriculture from 713 sawmills, each of which cut 5,000,000 or more feet in the years 1917 or 1918.

In 1917 the total production amounted to 35,000,000,000 feet. The decrease in 1918 is not confined to any one region but is general. It is largest in the southern and eastern states and least in the western states.

"Zam-Buk made it well"

Children never forget a remedy that ends their pain. Mother or child who has once had Zam-Buk applied to an injury will cry for it again when hurt.

Mrs. T. Fotheringill of Ridge Farm, Kent, Ontario, Can., says: "My children are constantly getting cuts, bruises or burns and for these injuries a friend advises Zam-Buk indispensable. The little ones even cry for it; fifteen years we've used Zam-Buk in our family, and could not do without it."

Mothers should always keep a box of Zam-Buk handy on the medicine shelf, for not only does it quickly end pain and soreness, but it positively prevents festering and blood-poisoning and heals in the shortest time possible. Mothers can save themselves much anxiety and often much needless expense by immediately applying Zam-Buk to cuts, scratches, bruises, knocks, burns and scalds, and by teaching the children that the prompt use of Zam-Buk will prevent little hurts from growing into big ones. Zam-Buk is equally good for eczema, ringworm, festering sores, boils, pimples, ringworm and all skin troubles.

Because of its absolutely herbal composition Zam-Buk cannot become rancid, but will keep indefinitely and still retain its purity and power. Get a 50c box to-day, use what you require, put the remainder away, and when next you need it it will be just as effective as when first bought. That is why Zam-Buk is always the choice of the thrifty house-keeper. All dealers 50c. box.

MAKE USE OF PRINTER'S INK

Federal Official Urges Necessity of Campaign of Advertising to Attention of Consumers.

"Advertise your business. I owe all my success to printer's ink."

This was the language of P. T. Barnum, and that he was a conspicuous success is generally admitted.

Something of the same sort seems to have struck Washington. Roger W. Babson, director of education service, labor department, has issued a statement urging a campaign of advertising by labor. "Prosperity," he ultimately depends upon the consumer. If there is not a market for goods they will not be produced.

Only by advertising can buying power be stimulated, but advertising does stimulate buying power and has brought a very direct return to the man who advertises."

It is sound advice. It is also timely.

Advertising is the chief auxiliary in trade. It is not the road to success, but secures itself. Advertising is to the business man what machinery is to the mechanic.

There is no man know what you want unless you ask for it, or what you have to sell unless you advertise it?

"My advice to the merchant," says Mr. Babson, "is that: For your own interest and for the good of the country, increase the advertising appropriation you have made for this year. It is $20,000, make it $25,000; make it more if you can."

And all must bear in mind that the prosperity of the country means the prosperity of the individual.—New York Telegram.

FORCED TO FINE DOG HERO

But New York Justice Took into Consideration Animal's Brave Deed in the Past.

Two medals bestowed for bravery hung from the collar of Jim, a Great Dane, when he appeared in the West side court the other day, charged with having been unmuzzled in public, says the New York World.

Patrolman Joseph B. Ward, attached to the health department, said he had seen Jim in that condition. Patrolman Jim would not let the policeman come near when an attempt to serve the summons was made, Ward testified.

Harry Gilpin, a druggist, told the magistrate about Jim's heroism. Mr. Gilpin and his daughter were asleep in their house one night in 1916, when a fire started. Jim was running up and down outside when the firemen arrived. He failed to make the firemen or the neighborhood understand what he was. So he darted into the smoke and fire and dragged out first Mr. Gilpin and then Miss Gilpin, both overcome.

For this Jim received the Spiers medal that year and Miss Gilpin gave him another. Recently the Alps club of Riverdale honored him.

"A dog that is as brave as you are deserves recognition," Magistrate Nolan said, "but you weren't muzzled and you resisted the officer. Fine $1."

Jim carried the bill in his mouth to the clerk of the court and took the receipt back to Mr. Gilpin.

Submarine Signals.

During the war, as is well known, submarine sound-detecting made great strides. In Schiffbau an account is given of a device employed by the enemy. In this device the receiver is secured to the outer layer of the ship's hull from inside and filled with water, the liquid being in contact with the outer plating of the vessel. The essential point in the device appears to be that the means for producing the sound are placed externally on the wall of the liquid tank, whereas in most cases the sounding device has hitherto been arranged beside the tank or receiver. Another special feature is an automatic arrangement for maintaining constancy, or adjusting, the level of the water, which can be manipulated externally. —Scientific American.

Wrong Kind of Clothes.

Little tragedies occur to the men who have to chronicle the larger ones. On Thursday evening our "society correspondent" (savaged in a silk hat and the best morning costume) arrived to find his mission meant the late train to Whitehaven and a plunge into a burning mine.

He telephoned at once for the proper clothes, but the message must have miscarried, for one of the coal owner's maid, who packed up a valise of dress clothes and shirts for the man who was to go down the mine.—London Cirgnicle.

Start a Movement to Curb Drug Traffic

Winnipeg, Oct. 14.—Appalled at the spread of drug addiction in Canada during the war years, and finding the Manitoba Narcotics Act powerless to prevent this condition even in Manitoba, where, it is declared, good legislation is offset by reason of their being no statutory control in Provinces east and west, a movement has been formerly launched here to establish a Dominion-wide control and regulation of sale and distribution of drugs. According to Dr. R. J. McConnell, Administrator of the Manitoba Act, importation of the drugs into Canada has increased since 1912, 35 per cent. for cocaine, 6 per cent. for morphine, and 600 per cent. for crude opium.

Westmount defeated Brockville in Quebec Rugby Series.

A PLATFORM OF PROGRESS

The policies upon which Sir William Hearst will ask the people of Ontario to pass judgment are set out under the following headings:

(1) The greatest possible assistance to agriculture in every shape and form;
(2) The faithful enforcement of the people's verdict on the liquor question;
(3) Vigorous support of Hydro-Electric development and cheap light and power for our farmers;
(4) Conversion of certain railway lines into Hydro-Electric lines;
(5) Good roads reaching every part of Ontario;
(6) A pension fund for mothers;
(7) Direct representation of Labor in the Cabinet;
(8) Establishment of a Bureau of Mines;
(9) Unification of the labor laws of Canada on a just and equitable basis;
(10) Such further labor legislation within Provincial jurisdiction as ma yarise out of the findings of the National Industrial Conference and the International Labor Conference;
(11) Housing accommodation for industrial workers;
(12) Special consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation;
(13) A new era for education, providing technical and agricultural instruction throughout the province;
(14) Improvement of transportation facilities in Northern Ontario;
(15) Conservation of our timber resources and encouragement to mining;
(16) Measures to reduce the high cost of living;
(17) Protection of the public health, generous assistance to hospitals and charities, and special care of mental defectives.

A NOVEL BREATHING CURE FOR THROAT & CHEST.

The introduction of Peps, the famous, new breatheable remedy for coughs, colds and chest troubles, has revolutionized the treatment of these ailments.

Previously, when suffering from any of these, it was customary to dose oneself with drugs, which were not only harmful, but practically useless, because, being generally in liquid form, they did not reach the lungs and chest, but the stomach.

Thinking people, long ago, realized that any remedy that was to reach the lungs direct, must be in breathable form, but for lack of a better treatment, the old-fashioned method of swallowing liquids into the stomach continued until science overcame the difficulty by producing Peps.

Peps is a breathable medicine in tablet form and the new Peps treatment is so simple and inexpensive that it is within the reach of all.

You simply dissolve a Pep in your mouth, and the medicinal fumes, which are given off, mingle with the breath and are carried down to the remotest parts of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. These medicinal fumes are antiseptic, healing and strengthening. They cause a cough by destroying the germs which cause the inflammation and consequent irritation. They clear the breathing passages of phlegm—which makes them so splendid for bronchial catarrh. They soothe and strengthen all the delicate membranes of chest and breathing passages, thus both against infection and sudden changes of temperature.

Peps are free from all drugs, opium, laudanum, paregoric, or any other harmful drug, and are therefore best for children's coughs and colds. Write for FREE trial package.

THIS WONDERFUL MEDICINE PROVIDES

A natural remedy for coughs, colds, sore and relaxed throat, bronchitis, chronic catarrh, hoarseness, hay fever, influenza, asthma, whooping cough, croup and other throat and chest ailments. At all dealers or, Post Free, Toronto, Inc. box 2 for (1.2).

Ontario's War Premier Given Great Welcome

date for East Hastings, C. Ketcheson, Col. Ponton, H. F. Ketcheson, W. W. Anderson, Clem. H. Ketcheson, W. C. Mikel, K.C., Harry Dempsey, R. A. Norman, of Picton, J. W. Hess, Mayor Woodley, Rev. Rural Dean Swayne, Rev. Dr. Baker, Mrs. W. C. Mikel, Miss Helen Patey, and other ladies.

A pleasant feature of the evening was the musical numbers contributed by the 15th Regiment Band, which were well rendered, appropriate to the occasion and very much appreciated, adding materially to the success of the evening.

Mr. H. W. Ackerman acted as chairman in a very efficient manner and voiced his appreciation of the outstanding ability and strong, honest and fearless leadership of Sir William Hearst, who as a public man and private citizen was a man among men.

The first to speak was E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P., the popular representative in the Dominion Parliament for West Hastings, who aroused enthusiastic applause by his eloquent and convincing address.

Mr. R. A. Norman, of Picton, spoke next, and his reminiscent and humorous address was appreciated.

The candidate of the Hearst Government in West Hastings, Mr. W. H. Ireland, then spoke briefly and was accorded a very warm welcome by the audience, which evidenced the great popularity of the genial and progressive Mayor of Trentoc, who will help to carry on good government in Ontario.

Miss Helen Patea, of Belleville, now practising law in Toronto, gave a very practical address, in which she showed the importance of leadership and the relation of good leadership to good government.

THE VICTORY LOAN.

The importance of the Victory Loan was not forgotten and Col. W. N. Ponton was called upon to present the call upon Canadians to support this great national investment, which he did in his usual eloquent and convincing manner. Col. Ponton was careful to avoid in his appeal any reference to parties or politics, but after the conclusion of his Victory Loan appeal he expressed his unbounded confidence in Sir William Hearst whom he was proud to follow as leader, concluding an eloquent tribute to the Premier thus: "He is a tall man, sun-crowned, who stood above the fog, in public duty and in private thinking." Col. Ponton also paid a tribute to the wife of the Premier, a lady who had rendered valuable service to the soldiers and the Empire during the war. This was echoed and endorsed a moment later by the chairman, Mr. H. W. Ackerman, who said that Mrs. Hearst was one of the finest ladies in the land and never weary in well-doing.

THE PREMIER.

Then came the Premier, and when Sir William Hearst rose to his feet to address the large audience the welcome he received must have surprised even him, accustomed as he is to enthusiastic appreciation. As described in detail in the introduction to this article, it was a great warm-hearted welcome for the Premier and the Man, sweeping away party lines and every prejudice and only remembering the glorious achievements of Canada, Ontario, and Ontario's Premier and Government in the great war. It was a welcome worthy of the great warm heart of Belleville, and worthy of the great Canadian whose ability and public service occasioned it.

The Premier graciously and eloquently acknowledged the warmth of his greeting, thanking the audience for their kind and generous reception, and said he agreed with the views expressed about his wife. Men little appreciate, he said, how much they owe to the influence, sympathy and assistance of their wives. It was a great privilege to come to good old Belleville in the County of Hastings with the record of loyalty and patriotism and the best and highest ideals, the magnificent record during the war, and its general spirit of progressiveness. He was particularly pleased to see so many ladies present, a feature which had characterized all of his audiences, showing a deep interest by the ladies in the issues of the campaign and a desire to cast their first ballot in intelligent manner. He hoped little doubt how many of them would mark their ballot. It was a duty and a responsibility not lightly to be entered upon.

Ontario's Noble Women.

The war had changed many things, and the women of Ontario had proved themselves worthy of the best and highest traditions of the British race, said the Premier. With breaking hearts but with a smile upon their lips they had sent their sons forth to battle for all that was right and noblest in life. The women had even gone to France to nurse the wounded and many had paid the supreme sacrifice as the result of the savagery of the Huns who did not spare even the Red Cross hospitals in their mad blood lust. Other women had united at home that the soldiers in the trenches might be as warm and comfortable as possible. Others helped to make munitions and in many cases proved themselves equal and better than the men. Women had even worked in the fields to increase production, while in Red Cross activities, Victory Loan, and other patriotic efforts had led the way. As Lloyd George had truly said, the war could not have been won had it not been for the women of the British Empire.

The women of Ontario had now been taken into full partnership in public affairs, said the Premier, and their influence in politics could not help but be uplifting and ennobling. He believed there was a great era of clean politics in store for Ontario because of the influence of women who have now the full franchise and can vote for and sit in the Legislature, municipal council and on school boards. In this election the woman has a vote the same as a man and can vote for the candidate as well as the organization.

The Government Candidate.

The Premier then paid tribute to the excellence of the Government candidate, Mr. W. H. Ireland, whom he had known for some years and learned to admire for his energy, progressiveness and good citizenship. He looks good to me, said the Premier, and I am sure he looks good to you (applause). I want such men as W. H. Ireland and am sure that you will send him to Toronto to help along the cause of good government.

Tribute to the Dead.

The Premier said that there was one sad feature of his visit to Belleville this time. Upon every other occasion when he came here the first to greet him was his good friend, Mr. J. W. Johnson, who had recently passed away. Mr. Johnson was a worthy citizen and worthy representative of this riding of West Hastings, one who was sincerely mourned by his colleagues in the Legislature.

Dewart's Wine Discovery.

The Premier then proceeded to deal with the issues of the campaign, the record of the Government, of which he had the honor to be leader, and the record of their "rival" champion, Hon. Jay Dewart, with particular reference to Dewart's latest fermentation over the wine provided for the Hebrew Feast of the Tabernacles in Toronto.

Dewart had been unable to substantiate the most reckless charges he has ever made in his career as a public man, and the electors now are particular to look carefully into Dewart's charges before giving them any serious credence. The only excuse possible was that Dewart was excited by reason of the rough and rocky road he was forced to travel. Even the Farmers' Sun said that Dewart had no more chance of winning than he had of winning Christmas bananas on his Uxbridge farm.

Many prominent followers were leaving Dewart. Mr. Rowell had denounced him, Mr. Proudfoot had refused to follow his leadership and was running against the Dewart candidate, Mr. Wilson, one of the abolitionist general members in the House had dropped out of the contest, Col. Atkinson, a strong man, had thrown up the sponge, and there was no Dewart candidate in many ridings, almost every paper issued announcing some additional follower of Dewart's having retired. No wonder Dewart is peevish and scolds like an old fishwife with the prospects of thirty or forty constituencies to no Dewart candidate.

Reefring to Dewart's latest charge of wrongdoing in connection with wine for the Jewish feast at Toronto, the Premier said that his opponent was apparently going to try and decide the election on this "great" issue.

LET US PRAY.—SAID THE PREMIER, "IF THERE HAS BEEN ANY WRONGDOING IN CONNECTION WITH THE JEWISH WINE, WHETHER HIGH OR LOW, THE PERSON OR PERSONS RESPONSIBLE WILL HAVE TO SUFFER; BUT I WILL HAVE TO HAVE SOMETHING BETTER THAN HARTLEY DEWART'S WORD TO CONVINCE ME."

The Premier said that the first he had heard of the Dewart wine charges was from the press. He then read Mr. Flavelle's declaration on the subject, which was published in Friday's Intelligencer.

Silly and Ridiculous.

Dewart was the last man on earth who should make charges against the Ontario License Board, following his experience in the Hooter charges when it was proved that liquor had been used during an election contest for political purposes. Asked to make the Hooter charges upon his responsibility as a member of the Legislature, when he would either have to prove them or resign, Dewart absolutely refused to do so. The Premier defended himself, however, to make a searching investigation, and did so, entrusting the task to Mr. Justice Sir William Meredith, one of the clearest, most able and honest men in Canadian public life. As the result of a full, fair and open investigation, in which all evidence of wrongdoing, but that the Government officials were to be commended for their zeal in carrying out their duties. The result was that Dewart cost the province thousands of dollars to investigate empty charges.

Kapuskasing Mare's Nest.

The Dewart charges that the soldiers' settlement, Kapuskasing had cost the province an immense amount of money without return, were dealt with effectively by the Premier, who said that if ever the money expended there had been on capital account, including sawmills, buildings, goods in store, etc., which Dewart forgot to mention. The Government had promptly referred the matter to the Great War Veterans' Association for investigation and report, and a returned soldier was sent to Kapuskasing for the purpose. Comrade H. A. Lewis was sent by the G. W. V. A. and the Premier read a letter from Provincial Secretary William Turley of the G. W. V. A. to Sir William, who is pleased to say that Comrade Lewis had reported that the conditions at Kapuskasing did not warrant the Dewart charges in any particular. Other charges were then gone into by the Premier with similar results.

Clean and Honest.

The Premier recalled that when invited to assume office he pledged himself to carry out the legislative and policy of honest and progressive administration inaugurated by the late Sir James Whitney and Sir Geo. Ferguson. And today not one single act of wrongdoing can be charged against the present government; no administration ever appealed to the people with a cleaner record. (Prolonged applause).

He spoke of the shelving of the party's political future in order that all people—Liberals and Conservatives alike—might unite in the one great object of winning the war, and pointed with pride to the war record of Ontario, not excepting any other province either in the Dominion or overseas. The government forgot politics and refused personal propaganda. Sir William here went on to say, content to await till the struggle was over and then abide by the verdict of the people, whatever that verdict might be. I might well plead five strenuous years of national danger as the excuse for not holding elections, but I ask no excuse, and can point to reforms and enactments that will compare with those of any administration, and which will stand for years in the amplification of what a government can do for development and progress. (Applause).

Mr. Dewart, the Premier said, declares he has a platform, in which they have sent a plank for any public need, and I have no doubt he can discover a few more planks in the next two weeks. (Laughter).

Smaller Charges.

Turning to Mr. Dewart's insinuation of charges against the government, Sir William wanted to know why he had not laid the specific charges down in the House? Why had he not introduced charges of maladministration on the floor of the legislature. He did make one charge, but that was not only not proven, but had been indisputably disproven. (Prolonged applause). Failing in any definite charge against the government, he now confines himself to criticism of deceased ministers—the late Attorney-General Foy and Minister of Agriculture J. S. Duff—and to vague and general insinuations. In fact our record is so good, said Sir William, that the Opposition is now subsisting denunciation and abuse for concrete allegations of misconduct.

Financial Record.

The Premier went carefully into the financial record of the Government, showing that in the Dominion some of money handled not one word of scandal could be raised. The revenue had been greatly increased by levying on those most able to pay and increased grants made possible to education, agriculture and other worthy objects.

Combatting Disease.

Sir William told of the work of combatting disease. Of the 9,000 cases of typhoid vaccine to the value of $221,375 had been distributed free of charge, thus reducing the death rate in cities and towns to an appreciable extent.

$1,200,000 Surplus.

Speaking of the Government's work as a whole, he declared his administration had made possible improved hospital service, better labor conditions, increased workingmen's compensation in case of accidents, provided free of charge employment bureaus and given the public better service generally. And in spite of these facts the last four years we have had an annual surplus of $1,000,000, we have been able to borrow at fair rates of interest in furtherance of the Hydro-Electric scheme and other public works.

Provincial Debt.

In referring to the public debt of $75,000,000 complained of by the U. F. O., the Prime Minister pointed out that the province had produced value for every dollar of debt. As with farmers and business men, it pays to borrow money for expensive investment. Agreed that $75,000,000 we have, he said, $5,000,000 cash in the bank; we have expended over $20,000,000 on the Timiskaming Railway, which is today an outstanding example of public ownership and the best equipped railway on the country. We can sell at any time at 100 cents on the dollar but intend to hold it in development of that great resourceful district of Northern Ontario. There is also $35,000,000 invested in Hydro-Electric, three or four millions in crown lands and large sums invested in public utilities. Altogether, this province has over $71,000,000 of assets which could be turned into cash tomorrow.

The Premier said the main cost of building, equipping and maintaining the Orpington Hospital in England, purchased by the generosity of the late kind in all Europe and gave the Government's contributions to patriotic purposes as $2,200,000, to say nothing of the enormous gifts and loans during the last two years, to soldiers overseas, the establishment of a Soldiers' Aid Commission, and providing free training and equipment for returned men to facilitate their re-establishment in civilian life. We did our level best for the soldiers at the "front and the home way," declared Sir William, "and we are prepared to stand by him now until we have paid in full the last cent of gratitude due him." (Prolonged applause).

Labor Legislation.

The Premier spoke of many efforts to perfect legislation in the interests of labor, not a session passing, he said, but what some new provision was put in the statute book to the best way of compensation, assuring thereby working conditions, protections for wages and opportunity for educational and industrial advancement.

Workmen's Compensation.

He referred at length to the Workmen's Compensation Act, amended to eliminate litigation and consequent deductions and delays in payments, and providing for the immediate relief by the employer goes to the injured employee. Then pensions and allowances as follows, under this act, have been largely increased and administered by the Government keeps costs down in the interests of both employer and employee. Since that act was passed, he declared, $9,350,000 had been expended in compensation, of which $4,000,000 was distributed last year.

The government had used a session voted $1,000,000 toward free employment bureaus, he pointed out and those institutions last year placed 1,000,000 men in positions.

A Labor Minister.

Reverting to the labor question again the Premier explained the act by which miners were guaranteed eight hours a day, women and children prohibited from unscrupulous employers in the matter of long hours, and to which department he intended calling a Minister of Labor, when further legislation for working men, women and children would be enacted.

Tax Exemptions.

He went on to explain the increased income tax principle, which will afford greater exemption to the workingman and the family, and the fact that the bill already drafted that will give pensions to mothers to allow of their children being brought up as worthy citizens of the State. He also spoke of the Provincial Government's acquiescence in that general scheme for unity of action in furthering a reduction in the high cost of living, and that a minimum wage act be has concluded shall be inaugurated and enforced to assure women and children receiving salaries upon which they can decently live. (Cheers.)

Educational Policy.

Sir William told of moneys expended in education by his progressive government, which, aided both the standard of education and teaching, and allowed substantial increase in the salaries of teachers. Referring briefly to the appointment of Dr. Cody as Minister of Education the Premier eulogized that honored citizen and scholar in very man of high ideals he had been looking for. The keynote of his principles is educational facilities for every child in every district in the province.

The speaker told of the Government's consolidated school plan for rural districts, which has given good graded school serves a considerable district, to which school centre little ones are conveyed in luxurious motor cars. No such centre of school in Northern Ontario the average attendance is greater than that of any other school in the province. The present administration, he promised, will give substantial grants toward each and every one establishing school consolidation scheme (Applause).

The Prime Minister here drew attention to the fact that notwithstanding the high cost of living the price of school supplies had remained the same as before the war, and less than under the Liberal regime. The Hearst administration had saved the province $1,250,90 in the price of school book alone.

Temperance Question.

Sir William explained the O. T. A. in regard to which he had no apology to make. While the province cannot abolish the manufacture of liquor, that act has abolished the bars and drinking in public places. (Applause). It was a war measure, he said, and as such released for war purposes large sums of money, and increased the province's fighting force. And now that victory is won, a referendum invites the electors of public opinion on the act at a time when men from overseas can participate in that vote. This is a free British country, the speaker said, the majority must rule, and responsibility for a continuance of the O. T. A. now rests on the shoulders of the electors. Whatever their vote may be, he will if returned to power, carry out the people's mandate to the letter to the satisfaction. The Premier here clearly explained the questions on the ballot paper, and stated that a majority vote for number one would end the whole matter, but in the event the province would go back to the old license act. In case of a negative vote, however, the Premier had four give opportunity for amendments to that temperance act.

Shoulder to Shoulder.

Prime Minister Sir William Hearst concluded a truly forceful and convincing address with an el quent appeal for unity of purpose in planning for a better, greater Canada, shoulder and vice and want are banished, and in which justice prevails, and a fulness of measure of opportunity for the development of this province's abundant natural resources. Let us stand shoulder to shoulder, he urged, with less thought for self and more consideration for our fellowmen. If we can but catch something of that spirit of self-sacrifice exemplified in our soldiers at the front, Canada will go forward in leaps and bounds, and prove worthy of that sea of blood shed in her defence.

E. GUSS PORTER, K.C., M.P.

Mr. Porter was greeted with enthusiasm when he arose to speak, showing his great personal popularity with the electors of West Hastings. He spoke eloquently and effectively and said that in the thirteen years of public life he never felt that he had an easier task or more pleasant one than to perform than he now had in the cause of Sir William Hearst and his government. (Applause). Mr. Porter reviewed the history of Liberal Governments in Ontario as led by Ross, Mowat and Hardy, showing a long series of broken promises and vital issues, graft and extravagance administration was charged and proven guilty of political outrages, inefficiency, and corruption, that had so shocked the conscience of the people of On-

Ontario's Premier Given Great Welcmoe

Meeting Echoes.

"It would be a gracious and grateful thing for us women to give our first vote to the man who has given us the ballot, Sir William Hearst," said Miss Helen Palen.

"If the two leaders, Sir William Hearst and Mr. Hartley Dewart were on the same platform before an audience of women, women's intuition alone would result in the choice falling upon Sir Wm. Hearst."—Miss Helen Palen.

The Premier said he had been called an autocrat for introducing the O. T. A. as a war-time measure, but his original intention had been to hold a referendum on the measure before it became law. He had been urged not to do so by all interests connected with the strongest opposition to a referendum then being from the representatives of the liquor interests. So the O. T. A. was enacted without a vote as a war-time measure, with the promise of a referendum after the war.

An effort is being made, said the Premier, to rouse the returned soldiers against the Government on the allegation that Prime Hepburn was taking whey while they were overseas. The O. T. A. was enacted to hasten the day when whisky would be spending on war effort at home and try and stem the crimson flood which was staining the fields of Flanders with the blood of Canada's hero sons.

The so-called "beer of the ballot" was fixed at the strength suggested by the request of the Dominion Trades and Labor Council which was not favorable to prohibition or local option but desired a light beer as a beverage for workingmen, explained the Premier.

The fighting speech of E. Guss Porter, M.P., showed that the popular member of the Dominion Government is regaining his old time health and vigor. It is regretted that the heavy demands upon his time do not permit a brief outline of his excellent address.

Babes in arms were there because their mothers had no one to leave them with, and rather than miss the meeting, brought the future voters along. The atmosphere of good government, which prevailed at the Armouries should prove beneficial in helping to shape the futures of these future citizens, who must have wondered what it was all about.

Great credit is due the committee of arrangements for the seating and platform accommodation could not have been improved.

The 15th Regimental Band, as usual gave a good account of themselves, and caused into the spirit of the occasion by rendering appropriate selections.

It was a great meeting and a promise would be fall indeed not to assure the swing of victory in the air for the coming county, Sir William Hearst, and his popular candidate, Mr. W. J. Ireland.

Sandy Grant, the popular and capable representative for East Hastings in the Legislature, was on the platform near his honored leader, Sir William Hearst. East Hastings has been ably represented by Sandy Grant and will be hardly inconsistent or thankproclaiming enough to wish him

LOSE DUKHOBORS

Peculiar Sect in Canada Going Back to Russia.

Their Departure a Few Years Ago Widely Views Soon Halted With Delight, but Sentiment Has Undergone a Change.

The announcement that Peter Verigin, the leader of the 10,000 to 11,000 Russian Dukhobors, or Dukhoborsky, has declared his intention of returning to Russia with his followers has created a mild sensation in Canada. Fifteen years ago a similar announcement would have been received by the people of western Canada with expressions of fervent gratitude. The illiterate peasant spirit-wrestlers, as their name implies, were disliked as religious fanatics, who herded together in community houses, and though responsible and industrious peasants, refused in conform to Canadian laws and regulations or to accept nationality. But now everybody in western Canada they are recognized as remarkable colonists, even if bad citizens, while Peter Verigin is acknowledged to be a genius leader of men.

The Dukhobor has never been a wanderer of his own free will. He has moved from place to place in Europe as the result of consistent persecution. Church and state went for him "hammer and tongs," the one striking him that all religious sects must be brought into conformity with established Greek Catholicism, the other that he must become a soldier under the conscription act of 1874. At first he complied with the military law and went off to battle, but with the distinct understanding between him and the elders that if he were compelled to discharge his rifle he would fire it in the air. For he has always been a consistent nonresistant, and as consistent an opponent of war of all kinds that is exists in the Caucasus, the community threw away the weapons that had been considered necessary to protect its members from wild animals.

In the first year of their settlement in Canada, the men scattered in order to earn wages on farms, on railways, and sawmills. Meanwhile, the women built the future residences and, lacking horses, plowed the land by harnessing themselves, 12 pairs of women to a plow with one plowman to drive them!

Brilliant, in British Columbia, is one of the great Dukhobor centers and the socialist's Utopia. Here the community is wholly self-contained and has developed something of that equality of life component citizens for which there is so much sickening in the world today. In contrast to the modern idea there are no anxieties concerning the payment of the city's needs. There are evidently no divisions between "capital" and "labor" no jealousies or envies over the possessions of another, for no man is richer than his fellow. No man is poorer than his fellow. One member of the executive does all the outside selling, and buying, and all moneys received by him are added to the treasury. Money, in fact, has no purchasing value within the community. All the necessaries of life are doled out without it by the various departments in charge. Everybody has the wherewithal, which is not of silver or gold, and there is no theft, any more than there is visible existence of government. The government is the people. Once a week they crowd into the large assembly hall and discuss the affairs of the community, and the managers of the several departments are given their instructions according to popular sentiment. The Dukhobors possess the system of initiative, referendum and recall in admirably simplified forms; their officials and temporary representatives hold office as long as they do their work well.

What is the explanation of these prevalent people who live so simply on a farm or ranch which may stretch for miles along the road and stately Columbia River? And can Canada afford to lose the "sisters" and "brothers" of a community who have builded better than they knew, who have created a unique state in the midst of the wild?—Christian Science Monitor.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

Says Doctor Cosmer, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, who is now suffering from fatal disease would be in perfect health to-day if he had not used tobacco every minutes. Says the habit fastens itself on the nerves, and that nothing is so powerful to compel one to stop tobacco as Nux-Tobacco. Nux-Tobacco is a drug-free, safe and sure remedy, in tablet form to use as directed, and be a confirmed habit smoking, snuffing, chewing, refund the money. They fully guarantee that after the first package you will have no craving for tobacco in any form whatever. Nux-Tobacco is sold by druggists everywhere, and you will be surprised at the low price.

The Way to say "No"

Mark Your Ballot with an X after Each Question under the word "No."

		YES	NO
1	Are you in favour of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?		X
2	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure in standard bottles in local municipalities that by a majority vote favour such sale and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
3	Are you in favour of the sale of beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure in standard bottles in local municipalities that by a majority vote favour such sale and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
4	Are you in favour of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors for beverage purposes and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

Above is an exact reproduction of the Referendum ballot, showing the correct way to Vote in order to sustain the Ontario Temperance Act as it stands.

Everybody should study the four questions and realize exactly what they mean. Do not be misled by the insidious demand for "light" beer.

The beer of the ballot is 11896 stronger than the Ontario Temperance Act now allows, and over five times as strong as the limit allowed for beer defined as non-intoxicating in Great Britain and the United States.

Must Answer Each Question

1. Unless you vote on every question your ballot is spoiled.
2. You must mark your answer to each question with an "X" only. Anything else would spoil your ballot.
3. Unless a majority vote "No" on question 1 the bars will be restored and the sale of all kinds of intoxicants permitted.
4. Unless a majority vote "No" on questions 2, 3 and 4 the Ontario Temperance Act will become almost worthless.
5. The only SAFE course is to mark your ballot as shown above.

"No!"—Four Times—"No!"

Drives Them Insane.

Dr. Arlington, headmaster of Eton, recently told a meeting that the expression of losing boys at the college write with the left hand to develop the right side of the brain was hurriedly discontinued when an eminent scientist stated that if they developed both sides of the brain they became idiots.

Sir James Crichton-Browne, the famous mental specialist, has given his views on this statement as follows:

"Dr. Arlington has acted wisely in putting a stop to a foolish experiment at Eton which would never have been sanctioned by any other with a little sound physiological knowledge.

"The order to use the left hand equally with the right has, I believe, been all but universally evaded. Had it been observed only imbeciles would have been done.

"Dexterity is deeply imbedded in the brain—the Palaeolithic flint tools we were right handed, and it is not to be shifted by a few school exercises.

"Ambidextrial culture, useful perhaps in respect to some few special circumstances in some especially employed persons, must on the large scale end in confusion.

"Lord Lister, the great surgeon, while a student, realising that ambidexterity would be useful in his calling, diligently practiced it, but ultimately gave it up, as he found he was losing in the right hand more than he was gaining in the left.

"Ambidexterity is common in idiots. The hand centre in the brain is linked up with that of articulate speech, and it is with the right hand paralysis that speech is lost in a right-handed man and with left hand paralysis in one that is left-handed."

Starting Something.

The household was comparatively quiet when the ten-year-old son looked up from the last page of a recent issue of the News and inquired of both parents sitting near: "What's funny about this here 'Abe Martin?' You never say anything t' eat in a home where th' wife is on an allowance." "The joke, my son," his father replied, "is that instead of spending the allowance for eats, the wife blows it in for clothes, clothes, candy and conventions." "Oh, see," said the mother, "the fact is that the allowances is not large enough to provide a hotel menu, though the men seem to think it is. And that is no joke, either."—Indianapolis News.

Bullet in Brain Twenty Years.

After living for 20 years with a bullet in his brain, Edgar Wilgus, an insurance broker of Trenton, N. J., was killed by a 5-foot fall on the granite steps of a New York hotel. The medical examiner, discovering the bullet in the man's brain, thought at first that he had been involuntarily shot, but learned by telephoning to his home how long he had carried the bullet in his head.

He Was Business-like.

A man from the north of Scotland was holidaying in Lanarkshire. One Sunday evening he was walking along Argyll street when he came upon a contingent of the Salvation Army, and a collection-bag was thrust in front of his nose. He dropped a penny into it. Turning up Queen street he encountered another contingent of the Salvation Army, and again a smiling "lass" held a collection-bag in front of him. "No, no," said the mother, "the fact is that the allowances is not large enough to provide a hotel menu, though the men seem to think it is. And that is no joke, either."—Indianapolis News.

Gas From Fuel Waste.

Fuel waste from locomotive smoke boxes of a European railroad is used to produce gas to drive generators in an electric plant.

The beverages of the sixteenth century were water, mead, sack and ale.

The Whale's Breathing Apparatus.

An eminent naturalist says, concerning the breathing apparatus of the whale: "The windpipe does not communicate with the mouth; a hole is, as it were, bored right through the back of the head. Therefore it would do well to copy the action of the valve of the whale's blow-hole; a more perfect piece of structure it is impossible to imagine. Day and night, asleep or awake, the whale works its breathing apparatus in such a manner that not a drop of water ever gets down into the lungs. Again, the whale must of necessity stay much longer period under water than seals; the alone might possibly drown it, inasmuch as the lungs cannot take action to fresh air. We find that this difficulty has been anticipated and obviated by a peculiar reservoir in the venous system, which reservoir is situated at the back of the lungs."—Pembroke Herald.

Must Keep Silent for One Day.

POUNDS OF GOOD THINGS

The Thanksgiving Pound Day at the Shelter yesterday was the centre of attraction for a great number of citizens, who wended their way thither during the day with them the pound of some good thing for the benefit of the children and the Shelter and on arriving were greeted to wander around the building just as they pleased. 'Tho the visitors left, tea was served in the dining room." Among the members of the Management Board present were Mrs Gribble, Mrs. Chadwick, Mrs. E. R McBride, Mrs. T. D. Ruston, Mrs. C. B. Scantlebury, each one rendering help and entertaining the visitors also Mr. H. A. Ackerman, Pres. Mr. E. R. McBride, Jr., Sec. Treas., was busy mingling with the company. It was indeed a Red Letter Day for the Shelter and all expressed admiration for the cleanliness and tidiness of the building. It reflected great credit on Miss Harris the matron, and her efficient staff and they are to be complimented for the splendid appearance of the little ones.

The Dawn Of Belgian Africa.

The time has been when news from Darkest Africa in the Congo region was dark indeed; but the present and future of the tribes that embrace, all told, something like 9,000,000 human beings, scattered over a tropical territory almost as large as Europe, looks full of promise, if we can credit the report of Mr. Frank, Belgian Minister of the Colonies, governing the period of the war and laying out a program for the future. During the war there has been practically no trouble in the Belgian Congo, principally as a result of the time allotted by the administration, for any idea of forcing the native into an uncongenial mold has been abandoned, and the country is being governed by adapting methods to local conditions. "Not only must we decentralize our administrative organization," runs the report, "but we must continue to study and make the best possible use of native institutions, respecting and developing them in all respects, even if they offend our ideas and moral principles, so long as they do not offend against the essentials principles of humanity and justice." Economically and industrially, the Congo may reasonably become important, and in accordance with those essential fundamentals. She may hope to bear different and better things from the Congo than one has borne in the past.

Da Vinci Thought of Tank.

Italy has just celebrated the fourth centenary of Leonardo da Vinci's death. His name has often been mentioned during the war and his prophetic genius recalled. It is known that he intended to build aeroplanes for war purposes, but it is now claimed also that he was the first to think of the tank. In his letters to Il Moro he speaks of armored cars which could shelter the combatants and drive right through the enemy's masses, slaying and shattering all opposition. It is unfortunate that more is not known of Leonardo's intentions, and of the way in which he proposed to realize his craft. Horses might possibly have been intended, for a horse could carry less weight than the armored car, protection in those days was more easily got than now. But it is certainly very singular to read that the fate was in danger when the whole infantry would follow behind—for this is the very thing happened four hundred years after his death. —Manchester Guardian.

The Baptist Young People's Union last evening held an enthusiastic Thanksgiving Rally banquet and welcome to the returned soldiers of the church and congregation. The society has adopted the group system, dividing the society into five teams, Grun, Purple, Red, white and Blue, and each captain had their table decorated according to their color, the whole arranged in a pentagon, which looked very artistic. After enjoying the good things provided, an excellent program was rendered, with addresses from each captain, also Rev. W. H. Wallace, pastor, and P. G. MacLaurin, B.A. The evening's entertainment was brought to a close by prayer, and singing God Save the King.

Popular Salesman Is Congratulated

This Travelling Man's Customers All Have Noticed His Great Improvement.

"Many of my customers on the road have congratulated me on my great improvement since I started taking Tanlac," said William Goulding, a well-known travelling salesman residing at 172 Macdonell street, Toronto, Ontario.

"My stomach had been giving me trouble for a long time," he continued "and I was getting worse. My appetite was poor and I was greatly distressed with gas on my stomach. I had a tight, uncomfortable feeling after eating and would suffer from awful dizzy spells. My nerves were shattered and I was unable to rest well at all and I finally felt so miserable that I just had to stop work and go away for a rest.

"While I was visiting my sister at Galt, she persuaded me to try Tanlac and the way it has helped me is simply wonderful. I feel better today than I have in years. I am never troubled with indigestion and that tired, fagged out feeling is all gone. Tanlac has ended my stomach trouble and put my nerves in good shape, my appetite is fine, I sleep well and have considerably more energy than I had before taking Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dorey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. J. Morton, in Madoc by J. W. Vieer in Marmora by F. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

SWALLOWING THINGS.

From Babyhood to Death We Are All Doing It.

Every living creature from Jonah's whale down, or up, has been prone to swallow many things not intended for the nourishment or refreshment of the body, says an exchange. In early days, pennies, buttons, pins and marbles had their way into childish stomachs with generally harmless results. What panics, however, have been created in anxious mothers' hearts. Why, whatever that safety-pin? Baby had in his hand a minute ago. Do you suppose he's swallowed it!"

Frantic search on the bed and among the interstices of baby's clothing generally reveals the lost pin, and sighs of relief are drawn again some children, in a too-realistic frame of mind-ples, have eaten some of the delicacy, with disastrous results.

Cousin Jane tells how her little great-aunt swallowed an open-faced thimble, which stuck in the esophagus; but which, being open, permitted liquid food to pass down. The poor little victim lived for a while, but did not grow up. Another days probably an operation could have removed it. An button hook, corroded, was found in the anatomy of a man, who had suffered intestinal indigestion for years. He seemed to have no recollection of the button hook episode. But the strangest case was that of grandpa, who during an illness had the clinical thermometer put into his mouth. The nurse turned away for a moment; when she returned to remove the thermometer it was gone! They shook the bedclothes, the rugs and probably the old man himself. He admitted nothing, nor did he ever refer to it without a chuckle.

"They think I swallowed the thermometer."

Many a story could be told of people taken with indigestion in the night, who grasped their way to the medicine closet in order to get a dose of harmless pepsin, only to find, in a panic of haste, that they had taken bottle, and that carbolic acid or something of the kind was on hand to do its deadly work. So many fatal mistakes have been made in this way that all sorts of methods are suggested to prevent such accidents. A good old-fashioned question is that of sticking two or three pins through the cork of the fatal drug bottle. A narrow escape recently was that of a doctor who, not feeling up to the mark, went into a drug store and asked the druggist, who knew, to give him a dose of Jamaica ginger. He swallowed it hastily, and hurried home to find a case of poisoning there before going to a critical operation. Luckily he was called on the telephone by the panic-stricken man, who announced that he had given the doctor a dose of hellebore by mistake! The victim received the news coolly, took the proper remedies, and survived the experience.

So it is well to be cautious; when our dressmaker kneels on the floor hanging over the skirt, with her mouth full of pins it seems as though one or two must find their way down her throat, we implore her to be careful; to remove them at once, or at all events not to let them stay in. Our injunction she disregards entirely, sighs, and that night is apprehensively called a pointed manner, while we watch her in agonies of apprehension.

"Land sakes! I've had most a whole paper of pins in my mouth, and never swallowed one. I'm careful, you see." And she adds: "The worst thing I've had to swallow in my life, though, are some of my customers' stories."

Constantinople and Moslems.

The proposed erection of Constantinople into a self-contained State under the authority of the allied great powers is most distasteful to Islam, writes Lieut.-Colonel Lyall in the World's Work. While Constantinople is not the capital of Islam, even in the sense of Mecca and Jerusalem, it is held in deep reverence by all True Believers. Under Moslem rule, captured by the Turks in 1453, Constantinople, or Stamboul, to give it its Moslem name, has been the capital of the Turkish Empire and the temporal centre of the Moslem world. The seat of the Caliphate, thus occupying in Islam a position similar to that held by Rome on Western Christendom, it is easy to see how Moslems will regard the transfer of their Rome under Christian, sway. Apart from religious objections, there is also the nationalistic dislike felt by Ottoman rule and the other members of the "Pan-Turanian" bloc at the loss of the Empire's seat of Turkish power and glory. The proposed internationalization of Europe will be a blow not easily borne. The strong Islamic protests is already seen in British newspapers. The fact that Turkish sultans some show of authority in Constantinople.

'Tis a little previous, that's sure, but these few facts about our stock of pure Linen Handkerchiefs will quickly convince you that it is good advice. We could not go to the market today and duplicate the same high qualities as we now show at almost double the price we ask—and it is doubtful even then if we could buy them at any price. They will be quickly taken advantage of by shrewd buyers, for we offer Linen Handkerchiefs from 20c. to 60c. each Buy Now!

THE NEW INFANTS' DEPARTMENT

In our Ladies' Mantle Department we have recently allotted a special section devoted exclusively to the showing of Infants' wear for infants up to three years. This department, we are sure, will prove a great help to mothers just now in the choosing of warm winter wearables for the baby. The display just now embraces an extensive showing of Infants' Wollen Nonettes, Wool Pullovers, Wool Jackets, Bonnets, Wool Sleepers, Wool Cloudy Mitts, etc., ALSO a select showing of White Enamelled Bassinettes and Sleeping Cribs, Quilted Silk Crib Comforters. Watch for this new department of our store—you'll find the values and qualities very attractive.

RED ROSE TEA is good tea

ONLY an artist can blend colors to match the beautiful Red Rose.

Blending teas is even more difficult.

It requires expert knowledge and a highly cultivated sense of taste to select teas from many different gardens and produce a uniform blend day after day.

Only the largest companies can afford to employ men who are expert tea tasters and blenders.

Red Rose Tea is an example of the fine art of tea blending, more than a dozen varieties of choice teas being used—principally rich, strong, full-flavored ASSAMS.

Its delightful and distinctive flavor is exclusive to Red Rose. And its rich strength means economy in your tea pot.

Try a sealed package of this expert blend.

The BOYHOOD of NELSON

September 29th 1758

October 21st 1805

"I thank God for this great opportunity of doing my duty."
—Horatio, Lord Nelson, at Trafalgar.

Do you realize that you can satisfy some lad's yearning for the sea?

The boy Nelson longed to follow in his uncle's footsteps, and in giving the boy his chance Captain Suckling gave to the Empire its greatest naval hero. Far from robust at the age of twelve, Nelson rose early to rank, and it is of special interest to Canadians to note that as a young officer he served in Quebec and was familiar with that great highway, the St. Lawrence. In giving his life for his country at Trafalgar, Nelson, by his famous victory, assured Britain's supremacy on the sea.

Aims of the NAVY LEAGUE OF CANADA

To emphasize Canada's opportunities and responsibilities in the sea.

To raise funds for the relief of war-like chances, widows, orphans and aged, and for deep-sea relief of their own kind.

To maintain sailors' homes in the ports.

To train boys and young men for the Navy and the Mercantile Marine of Boys' Naval Brigades.

A Man of Distinction.

The khaki of yesterday, now in fast being relegated to the limbo of half-forgotten things, and the memory of war experiences are trained only in the pursuit of the much longed for avocations of civilian occupation. A case in point is Lieut.-Col. Blair Ripley, D.S.O., C.B.E., O.C., of the 1st Battalion Railway Troops, whose splendid leadership, initiative, energy and patriotic pride in his branch of the service have earned for him the name to be a revered one among the men who had the good fortune to come under his command. Modest and reserved man, he has that quiet-ness which comes from big undertakings. As a C.P.R. engineer, the Lethbridge viaduct and the North Toronto grade separation, were pre-war testimonials to his skill and efficiency. Twenty-seven months of experimenting work in France and Belgium have enhanced that enviable record and experience in supervising the laying of steel and the erection of bridges.

"Railways and the arteries of modern warfare"—this fact was early recognized by Sir Eric Geddes, and a Frontier College.

The Reading Camp Association, which was started nineteen years ago by Mr. Alfred Fitzpatrick, a graduate of Queen's, to provide daily newspapers and other attractive reading matter for lumber, mining, and construction camps, has grown to such an extent that it was incorporated recently under the name of the "Frontier College" in order that more attention may be paid to the educational side of the work. It has already brought to 600 more or less permanent camps and works at least some portion of primary, secondary, and college education, and Mr. Fitzpatrick hopes to extend its good work in the future.

The staff of the "Frontier College" is as unique as the organization itself, being chosen from college graduates or under-graduates who, must understand the point of view of the men and who consequently share with them their daily labor. It is only during the evening that the instructor does his real work in the camps, and he is now required to sign an agreement to teach a minimum of ten hours a week, Saturday night being set aside for entertainment, and, if possible, Sunday being occupied with reading and writing letters. Dr. J. H. Macdougall, in his book "Building the North," pays a high tribute to the success of the "Frontier College." The organization receives small grants from the Governments of the different provinces, but the financial burden is carried chiefly by a few public-spirited citizens who appreciate the excellent results which flow from it.

New Supersped Boat.

Yachtsmen of the country will be watching Cleveland next spring for what is promised as the greatest surprise the speed merchants have ever had furnished them, a Cleveland dispatch says. Local motorboat enthusiasts are grouping to build a power boat this winter that will develop a speed of 60 miles an hour or so, according to H. J. Walker, manufacturer of parts for Liberty motors.

The new craft, to be called Miss Cleveland, will be launched and timed up in plenty of time for the national and international races of 1920, it is promised. She will get her power from two Liberty motors, according to Walker's plans.

"If she doesn't make at least 75 miles an hour she won't be worth anything to me and she might as well be scrapped," Walker said. "We expect Miss Cleveland will travel at an 80 mile clip when she's sent against those other speed-boat marvels—Miss Minneapolis, Miss Detroit III and White Fo-Wild, Jr."

Our Language.

"I saw the other chap floating away beneath me and I couldn't help thinking we must look like a number of mushrooms chasing each other. Hurriedly the earth rushed up to meet me with an awful bang and I found myself mixed up with some sheds. But actually I had alighted quite gracefully and was only bruised and suffering slightly from shock.

"It really wasn't much except for the first awful leap, and even that was afterward compensated for by a decided jolt to whom I showed the parachute spread out at home and who remarked: 'How clever it was to have jumped from a balloon into such a small sheet'"

Our Language.

"Did you call Edith this morning?"

"Yes, but she wasn't down."

"That's why didn't you call her down?"

"Because she wasn't up."

"Then I'll get her up now and call her down for not being down when I got her up."

Fraser River Flashed Out.

Fraser river fishermen and canners agree that the sockeye salmon run on the Fraser this season has been a flat failure. The conviction is being forced, too, that Jinlah Creek, the only noblest fishing stream can no longer be expected to make a profitable yield, in other words, that the Fraser River run of sockeye is gone for good, ten years ago, as high as a million and a half fish were packed. This year's fish crop will be less than a tenth of that amount.

The end of the fraser's productiveness is in sight six years ago, when Canadian Pacific railway contractors dynamited a mountain of rock into the river at Hells Gate Canyon, completely prevented the salmon from getting to the spawning grounds. From the time the sockeye hands reached the Fraser, American and Canadian traps, nets and seines lay in wait over an ocean highway of three hundred miles. The salmon has only about one chance in a thousand of getting through.

On the Skeena and other Northern British Columbia rivers, the salmon are running in record numbers. Philanthropists are making as high as five hundred dollars a year.

Old Ripley Never Looking for the Limelight.

Five Minutes To Eleven has not yet come for those who stayed at home

The gallant Canadian army kept right on fighting until five minutes before the Armistice was signed.

The last lap of the war for those men was indeed a smashing, glorious finish!

While the fighting ended at five minutes to eleven on the morning of the eleventh of November last year, the war has not yet ended for those of us who stayed at home.

Our "Five Minutes to Eleven" has not yet come. There is a great deal more for us to do, before our war job is finished.

There are still heavy demobilization expenses to clean up. In a few short months we have brought home the troops that were transported overseas during four years of war—four years' transportation expenses crowded into a few months.

Many millions are still required to complete payment of demobilization and for other purely military expenditures.

The Victory Loan 1919 which is necessary to meet these war-obligations is the great objective in the last lap for those who stayed at home.

The Canadian Corps, during the war, never lost a gun,—never once retreated and never failed to take an objective.

Keeping that glorious record in our minds, and carrying that "no surrender" fighting spirit into the new Victory Loan campaign, there can be only one result:—Success, overwhelming and triumphant.

When the figures for the Victory Loan 1919 are totalled up, the result will show the world that those of us who stayed at home have taken another glorious objective on the road to our "Five Minutes to Eleven."

Victory Loan 1919

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

Our Red Cross.

The Canadian Red Cross Society will come to the front as an own nation in a manner more than a Canadian ambulances, which it will be proposed to return to Canada for presentation to various hospitals. Orders have been found to have done such long service in France that it was considered advisable to dispose of them in London, and this is being done. Like other military stores, they have realized good prices.

Col. Braylock, head of the Canadian Red Cross, will shortly retire to private life and remain in London, while Lady Drummond will return to Montreal.

Hot Weather.

"Call this hot weather," said a visitor to Canada. "Why, I've seen it so hot down south that the popcorn popped right on the stalks." "Where?" exclaimed the host. "And that's not all; the juice of the cane in the mill field turned to molasses, ran through the fence, mixed up with the popcorn and formed the finest combination of popcorn and molasses that ever crossed your lips."

Cells In Lungs.

There are 175,000,000 cells in the lungs, and, spread out, they would cover a surface thirty times greater than the human body.

First Letter to Cross.

The first letter to cross the Atlantic, Ocean From America to England was written on the harbor of St. John's, Newfoundland, city Captain John Hall to King George VIII. and forwarded to England on an English vessel on August 7, 1527. Captain Hall was on a voyage of discovery to China under the patronage of King Henry. One of the two ships under Hall's command had been lost in the Straits of Baffin Isle, and it was the misfortune that the captain reported in his epistle to his royal master.

Tons of Food Destroyed.

In the port of London 5,464 tons of unwaged food was condemned in 1918, as compared with 3,118 tons in the previous year.

When a Doctor Goes Wooing.

"I think she loves me," said the young doctor.

"I see she lets you hold her hand."

"Yes, and when I do her pulse seems quite normal."—Boston Transcript.

Improving Western Stock.

Over two dozen young, pure bred bulls of good type, purchased by the Lake Shore Branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, are now at the disposal of farmers in the district. Farmers of the districts who are desirous of obtaining good breeding stock at first cost, have only to put in orders come in.

She Did Her Bit.

Miss Margaret Bell Saunders, the Toronto newspaper woman who did such varied war service abroad, has arrived in Canada on the Scandinavian. Few Canadian women have had a more varied experience this past five years. Sailing for England in the early summer of 1914 for a holiday on the continent with Miss Annie Taylor, both were in England when the crisis came. As Miss Annie Taylor had studied in Berlin and knew the language, she joined Mrs. Agar Adamson in her work for the Belgians. Miss Saunders joined her, and for months both were in a flat at Furnes. Here a bomb injured Miss Saunders so severely that she was removed to the hospital at Dunkirk, where the Belgian Queen paid her a visit. After a convalescence in England Miss Saunders worked on the land, and helped war efforts, too, with her pen.

All Was Not Lost.

"Then it is no longer possible to fly," replied the general thoughtfully. "However, we should not forget that our legs are left."

Thereupon he led the way.—Boston Transcript.

The Influenza In Labrador.

The ravages of the Spanish influenza in Labrador during the past winter and the many deaths in that portion of North America have created a new problem to be met by the friends of the Labrador mission. In a letter from Dr. Wilfred Grenfell an account is given of the effect of the influenza epidemic in the Sandwich Bay district of Labrador. Twenty per cent. of the people have perished as a result of the illness. Dr. Grenfell gives a long list of the dead and adds: "As these Labrador settlements are very small each one genuinely consisting of a few houses, some idea can be gained of the extra tragedy in that part of the country. The distances are great between places and families, and the difficulties of the doctor and nurse traveling over that area are almost insurmountable. The point that I should like to call attention to in this connection is the pressing need for care for the orphan children who are left as a result of this epidemic. A number of men left young families, and in several cases both parents were taken. Our present orphanage, besides being so poorly constructed and difficult to run, is full to capacity, and we look at our wits' end to meet the problem of caring for so many helpless children."

A Puzzled.

Not since the Middle Ages has there been such a popular Prince of Wales in England as the son of George V. People going back over history remember how the youthful Henry was beloved by his subjects. Strangely enough, it was also a war in France that gave him his opportunity. He, too, had "metal, but" in those days the English were fighting against the French, instead of side by side with them. When one takes into consideration that Henry V lived in the days when the medieval idea of an autocratic king existed and the present Prince of Wales belongs to the most democratic royal household that the world has ever seen, there are many parallels between the two young men. Both won the love of their fellow-countrymen during the days of great war; both were young and unmarried; both were famous in the field and had the well-being of the nation at heart; and both of them accepted popularity in a straight-for-it manly way.

SCOTCH TWEEDS

From the Land of the Heather

WHEN we say that these are genuine Scotch Tweeds—imported by Fit-Reform directly from Scotland—haven't we said all that can be said about the sturdiest and—to many men—the most likable Suits and Overcoats that can be made?

And these new Tweeds have gained added charm from being shaped into Suits and Overcoats by the master hands of the Fit-Reform tailors.

If you have a preference for Tweeds, either in Suits or Overcoats, let us show you the novelties we have imported in genuine Scotch Tweeds.

S. SURROWS, BELLEVILLE

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER V—Continued

On the white balcony, after dinner, Kent begged Cynthia to fix the wedding-day. After she had named one in May, it was agreed that, subject to her parents' approval, they should be married two months hence. He made his way to the station at eleven with a flower in his coat and rapture in his soul.

The first weeks of the period were interminable.

He went to The Hawthorns daily, and Mrs. Walford was so good as to look about for a house for them in the neighborhood. He was in love, but he was not a fool; he was determined that he would not cripple himself at the outset by assuming unjustifiable responsibility, and in conference with the fiancée he intimated that it would be preposterous for them to think of paying a higher rent than fifty pounds. Cynthia was a little disappointed for mamma had just seen a villa at sixty-five that was a picturesque dream. He strangled an impulse to say, "We'll take it," and repeated that as soon as their circumstances brightened they could remove. She did not argue the point, though the rara avis evidently allured her and Kent felt her reticence to be very gracious and trusted she did not consider him mean.

If he was resolved to avoid burdening himself with a heavy rental, however, he was but deeply concerned about the extent of the outlay made on furniture. As Mrs. Walford pointed out, the things would always be there and once they were bought, they were bought. In her company they visited the Tottenham Court Road every morning for a week and this one sped more quickly to him than any yet. It was a foretaste of life with Cynthia to choose armchairs and ottings, and ornaments, and the rest, for their home together. They had now selected one at the desirable fifty pounds; it was about ten minutes' walk from The Hawthorns, a semi-detached erection in red brick, with nice wide windows and electric bells, and rose-trees on either side of the tessellated path. They wanted to be able to drive up to it when they returned from the honeymoon and find it ready for them. Mrs. Walford would procure the kitchen utensils and engage a servant during their absence and all they had to do themselves was to buy the articles of interest, and settle the wall papers, and have little intermediate lunches and go back to the shop, and sip tea while rolls of carpet were displayed. It was great fun.

The pictures in the catalogues, thought, never seemed quite realised by the originals and it was generally necessary to purchase something of a more expensive description than they had proposed. But, again, once it was bought, it was bought. The recollection was sustaining. If Kent felt blank when he contemplated the total of what they had spent, and remembered that the kitchen clamored still, he reflected that to him Cynthia is such a jolly little ménage would certainly be charming, and the girl averred ecstatically that the dessert-service looked better than mamma's!" He estimated that they could live with perfect comfort at the rate of two hundred and fifty per annum—for the first year, at all events, and by then he would have completed a novel which, in view of the prom tories he had obtained, he believed he could dispose of for quite as much. Even if he did not there would be a substantial sum remaining of his capital, and with the weird book—No, he had no cause for dismay, he thought; and, indeed, he had not.

They had decided upon Mentone for the wedding trip—a fortnight. It was quite enough and they would rather be somewhere like that for a fortnight than in Bournemouth or Ventnor for a month. It would amount to the same thing pecuniarily, and be much more pleasant.

"The morning after we come back, darling," said Kent, "I shall go straight to my desk after breakfast, and you know you'll see scarcely more of me till evenin tghan if I were a business man; and had to go to the City."

"I—e-s," concerned Cynthia meekly. "Of course; I understand."

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—a solid four Yes's will be your only guarantee that you will get that sane, fair and just compromise that is needed in Ontario—the sale of light, non-intoxicating beer and wine generally, and the sale of pure spirituous liquors through Government agencies only.

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—that is your only sure guarantee that you will get careful consideration to your vote on each question.

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—support to the limit the broad-minded men and women of the Citizens' Liberty League who conscientiously believe that the unsatisfactory Ontario Temperance Act must be repealed and new legislation enacted more in keeping with the demands of all sections of the people.

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—support the labor unions, soldier organizations and thousands of the rank and file of the citizens of this Province who want a more palatable yet absolutely non-intoxicating beer.

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—You can be assured that those in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act as it now stands will vote a solid "NO" to all four questions. The citizens of this Province who desire that changes should be made in the Ontario Temperance Act will actually kill one another's vote and so make ineffective their desire for a change, without they vote a solid "YES" on all four questions. If four voters who desire liquor in some form go to the polls and vote "YES" only to the particular question he or she favors, the following table will clearly show how these four voters will really be casting their vote in favor of retaining the Ontario Temperance Act, with a total of four Yes votes and twelve No votes.

A HAPPY HUNTING GROUND

The summer sun beat down on the heaving cradle of the deep, and little Bill lay dozing on the long, lazy swells. Forty miles away the dim outlines of the mountains of Vancouver Island drew a faint fretwork against the horizon. Closer the bold point of Point Grey loomed high, and closer still the rugged entrance to Howe Sound met in endless battle with the charging rollers from the Gulf of Georgia. Little Bill's mother was somewhere in the depths looking for anything in the line of fish, but preferably salmon.

A smudgy smear appeared on the skyline. It drew rapidly nearer. Little Bill saw it not. Pushing herself along at the rate of eighteen knots the fast C. P. R. steamer Princess Patricia raced for harbor, keeping a railroad schedule, and piling a huge wave from each side of her sharp bows. She came close to Bill, who had not yet been christened, the roar of machinery, the rumbling rush of the wash startled him, and as he looked he was turned over and over in the big wave from the steamship. Little Bill forgot home and mother and all things but escape. Making his little flippers go, he drove himself toward the safety of a cove on Bowen Island, where, in the placid reaches, he rested again, feeling much more comfortable.

This is a true story. Bill is a young hair-seal. There are many thousands of his kind in the coast waters of British Columbia. They do no harm, excepting perhaps that of eating a few million salmon each season and destroying a few thousand yards of salmon nets that entangle them. The only other possible annoyance they might prove to create is that of following trolling fishermen and taking the fish off the hooks as the fishermen thinks he has caught one, sure. Otherwise they are fat, lazy, comfortable, intelligent and kindly. They respond quickly to human attention. And the strange thing is that the human appeal is not made through the stomach. Young seals will make friends with men who never fed them a thing to tempt them to closer relationship.

For instance there is the illustration of Bill. He rested in the warm cove at Bowen Island. He heard a seductive whistling sound, and he raised his head to look. There, not a hundred yards away he saw some two-legged creatures playing about in the water, and one who was sitting on a floating log was making the attractive noises with his lips. Bill slipped beneath the surface.

Picture the astonishment of the boys on the raft. Suddenly in their midst there came a little spotted seal that swam gaily through them and drew up against the raft, asking as clearly as anything could, to be invited into the revels. One boy reached down, placed his hands behind the tiny flippers and lifted Bill out. They petted him and scratched him, dove and swam about with him. He seemed to enjoy himself fully as much as they. The day drew to a close and the lads went homeward, leaving their deep-sea playfellow alone. Next morning when they came to swim they whistled again. Close beside the raft a sleek little head like that of a wet spaniel raised itself, and small flippers wriggled joyously. The daily play was on again. It was then he was christened Bill, and learned to know the name. This happened weeks ago and still Bill plays tirelessly and in utter confidence. He rustles his own food, he asks nothing but friendship and companionship. Somewhere on the shallows of the Fraser river his mother sleeps of nights, surged with pink salmon, and perhaps dreaming of her wandering lad. But Bill, apparently, dreams of nothing but the coming day and his friends in woollen tights.—W. M.

Publicity Campaign Discussed by Board of Trade

A regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade was held last evening at which it was intended to elect officers for the ensuing year, but this part of the business was postponed until the annual meeting in April. The attendance of members was not large, owing to counter attractions, and the election campaign being in full swing. A committee was appointed to investigate and report up on a publicity campaign. It was also decided to have weekly luncheons for members at which ideas could be interchanged. The Board entered a protest position to tender a banquet to the members of the G. T. R. baseball team for having they had brought to the city by winning the championship of Ontario.

Those present were: Col. Marsh, President; Col. Ponton, Secretary; Messrs. W. C. Mikel, K.C.; R. J. Wray; J. Elliott; Ch. H. Scott; J. J. Marsh; J. A. Higgs; J. McBride; B. F. Jennings; Ald. Bone; Ald. Riggs; Chief J. W. Brown; Dr. Marshall; H. F. Ketchenon; H. W. Ackerman; W. H. Martin; Ald. Hanna.

The Secretary read a number of communications, some of which were laid upon the table.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

President Marsh thought it would be a good idea to appoint a committee to see what could be done in reference to a publicity campaign in the city.

Ald. Bone was in favor of a booklet being published in reference to the city and setting out its advantages. It would prove to be a mind beneficial. We should do all we could to get in touch with English companies who are looking to Canada, he said. He was in favor of the Chamber of Commerce proposition in Belleville.

Mr. J. Elliott was prepared to do what he could in the way of advertising the city. There was now available some $200 for this purpose which was not expended when a sum was set apart for this object in the year 1914 when the war broke out.

Mr. Mikel was in favor of the members of the Board dining together once a week and have an interchange of opinion amongst the members.

Col. Ponton—The Chamber of Commerce does not take the place of the Board of Trade and the two could work together harmoniously. The Chamber of Commerce is a team work of individual citizens. He was not altogether in favor of employing a man to teach us how to carry on our business. There are steps that can be taken which will meet the end without paying out a large sum of money.

Mr. Mikel—All I desire is for the city to get in the limelight and get some of the industries that are being established in other cities. A man like Mr. Merry has a personal touch with industries that are contemplating locating in other places. The point is: Let us get together and get some person that would lead—and assist us in getting results.

Ald. Bone was in favor of a Chamber of Commerce being established and a paid secretary employed.

Mr. Higgs advocated getting more young fellows as members of the Board which would give an impetus to the organization.

Ald. Riggs was in favor of the city getting an able industrial commissioner. A city in Canada recently procured 14 industries in 14 weeks. You cannot get industries without going after them and show what advantages this city has.

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson—A commissioner if a city in Canada spent a few thousand dollars in expense, but he would result. It was moved by Mr. Mikel, seconded by Mr. Jennings, that President Marsh appoint a committee composed of Ald. Hanna, Ald. Riggs, Ald. Bone and Industrial Commissioner White of the City Council, and Messrs. J. Elliott, G. H. Scott, W. C. Mikel and the President of the Board of Trade to consider what action is necessary in reference to a publicity campaign; to consider the mortimer scheme, the Heston Agency and the Canadian City Bureau proposition.

WEEKLY LUNCHEON

A Committee composed of the President and Messrs. H. W. Ackerman, H. F. Ketchenon, Col. Ponton and G. H. Scott, was appointed to arrange for weekly luncheons for members of the Board.

OLD BOYS REUNION

A committee composed of Messrs. H. F. Ketchenon, W. B. Deacon and W. C. Mikel, K.C., was appointed to act in conjunction with the City Council re an Old Boys Reunion next year.

BANQUET FOR CHAMPIONS

Mr. Elliott thought the Board of Trade should do something for our baseball team who had brought honors to our city. A banquet might be arranged.

Mr. Mikel said that sports bring all classes together and their mind is focused on the object. The Board would be doing its duty if it did something.

Ald. Hanna said that plans were being formulated for a banquet and he would like the Board to assist.

A motion prevailed that the Board endorse the proposition and do all in its power for the success of the same.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

After some discussion it was decided to postpone the election of officers until the annual meeting in April.

Mr. H. W. Ackerman was elected a Vice President in the place of the late Mr. J. W. Johnson.

Board adjourned.

TRITE SAYINGS BY SIR WILLIAM HEARST

I believe the women of the province will have an ennobling influence upon the politics of Ontario.

What was there to do but give women the franchise after the heroic part they played in the war?

Opportunity spells responsibility. We look to the women in Ontario to discharge the trust that has been placed in them.

After five years as Premier I ask you if I have faithfully carried out the honest administration of the late Sir James Whitney.

No government ever appealed to the people with a cleaner record than ours.

I only ask that you look on that record fairly.

Promises may be all right to get into power, but it is performances that count.

We do not ask for your support on our promises, but on our record.

Mr. Dewart says that it is time the Government was discussed aside from all moral issues. We are perfectly willing to have this done.

Our record is so good that there has been practically no criticism of it.

We have a debt of $75,000,000—and I have no apology to make for we have good value for every dollar of it.

We equipped the Dominion's first war in England, the best hospital that there was in Europe during the war.

Not a single session has passed without some labor legislation being enacted.

The Workmen's Compensation Act is the best in existence for the worker and the employer alike.

I intend to call to the new Department of Labor some man who has the confidence of the workingmen of Ontario.

If we are returned to power we will give greater tax exemption to the married man with a family.

I have nothing for which to apologize, nothing to take back for my stand on the temperance question.

A man worthy to be Premier of a great province must be ready to do what he believes to be right no matter what happens to him politically.

Anniversary of Night of Terror

Great T.N.T. Explosions Took Place at Trenton, October 14, 1918.

One year ago October 14 the great explosion occurred at Trenton at the plant of the British Chemical Company, operated by the British Munitions Board. The following extract from The Intelligencer's report of the disaster will be of interest:

Daily Intelligencer, Oct. 15, 1918.)

The miracle of Trenton, is the one thought in the mind of everybody today after a night of terrifying explosions in the big munition plant which rocked the town, broke almost every pane of glass, and were heard for towns around, while masses of debris from burning chemicals leaped hundreds of feet straight up in the air. The plant of the British Chemical Company, operated by the British Munitions Board, has been badly damaged but the officials state that as far as they know not one life was lost and no one was injured. The principal reason for the absence of fatalities is the excellent organization and alarm system which gives every employee warning of impending danger. At intervals all night long explosions occurred, the last one being at 6.20 this morning, and the chemicals made a weird and wonderful conflagration with varied colors, lighting up the sky and visible for many miles. As the town rocked from the force of the explosions and houses trembled and glass smashed the residents became panic-stricken and picking up what ever was handiest fled to the open country. The explosion shattered many carbon in the street lights and soon the town was plunged in darkness which added to the terror of the people. Soon every road leading out of town was crowded with hundreds of people, some only partly dressed, and among the throng were many motors carrying their babies. Hundreds of motors also filled the roads hurrying people away from the unseen terror. Halifax and Morgantown disasters, in which T. N. T. figured so prominently were fresh in the memory of everyone who feared a repetition of those terrible events. Families were separated in the panic and the night was one long to be remembered as a hideous nightmare.

The trouble started with a fire in the T. N. T. section of the plant about seven o'clock last night and as the blaze was seen to be serious the siren whistle at once sounded the alarm and the employees had fifteen minutes to escape from the danger zone before the first explosion occurred. Fortunately there was not a great stock of the dreaded T.N.T. on hand, as it is the policy of the management to ship out each day all the explosive made.

The T. N. T. buildings went first with terrific explosions and bursts of flame which went straight up in the air in great columns of livid fire. Fragments of metals from the machinery and covering of the buildings were hurled through the air for more than a mile, while sparks flew for a great distance.

The buildings where gun cotton is manufactured were next to go and were soon levelled to the ground amid a salvo of explosions and pyrotechnical display beautiful and terrifying.

The large buildings where acid is manufactured followed the explosions and the flames, as did also the smokeless powder works.

Smashing Bolshevik Forces Gen. Denikine Victorious

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Oct. 15.—General Denikine's Anti-Bolshevik army has captured the important city of Orel together with thousands of prisoners and enormous quantities of material, it was announced in a despatch received here to-day. Two batteries of Bolshevik artillery fell into General Denikine's hands. While Orel is 238 miles south of Moscow possession of the city will give General Denikine, a secure hold on vast stretches of territory in Old Russia, as the place is one of the most important railway centres south of the present Russian capital.

With General Denikine's Cossack army advancing from the south and the northeastern Russian forces are almost within striking distance of Petrograd. The Soviet Government of Russia appears to be facing a crisis. The Bolshevik headquarters at Petrograd were closed last Thursday, according to a despatch to the Daily Mail from Reval. The northwestern Russian army has apparently crashed through the Bolshevik lines over a wide front.

N.Y. Harbor Strike Near an End

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The strike of longshoremen and other harbor workers which has paralyzed port activity here for several days and threatened a serious food shortage has broken today, when forty workers returned to work and 1,500 of 8,000 longshoremen resumed their labors. Union leaders predicted that by Friday all of the longshoremen would be at work. The ferry men at midnight unexpectedly decided to return immediately accepting with reservation the Government's compromise wage increase offer. Before dawn all of the ferries were plying the Hudson river as usual.

Polish Offensive Against Russ-Germans

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 15.—Poles have begun an offensive against the German Russian forces in the Baltic region, according to a message received here from Riga. They are reported to have captured Kovno and Mitau and west of Vilna, near Courland border. Part of Riga is burning owing to the bombardment of the city by the German-Russian forces.

Samuel Gompers Is Very Ill

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Samuel Gompers, president of American Federation of Labor was reported to-day by labor leaders to be suffering from a nervous breakdown. He is confined to his bed with a temperature of 101 degrees.

All Sott Coal Miners Ordered to Strike

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 15.—A strike order has been issued calling on all bituminous miners in the United States to cease production of coal on October 31.

Liberals Oppose G.T.R. Purchase

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—Liberal members of the House of Commons met in caucus here today and decided to strongly oppose the Grand Trunk legislation on the ground that it was unfair to the country to propose such legislation at the present time. The caucus was presided over by J. C. Ethier, M.P. for Two Mountains. Leader Mackenzie King attended. The statement of Sir Thomas White regarding the financial condition of Canada was freely quoted and the opinion expressed that such legislation as the Grand Trunk purchase should not be put through at the present time. Liberal members declared that the debate on the question in the House of Commons would last all week and well into the next unless closure is applied by the Government. Liberal Senators present also promised a stiff fight in the upper chamber.

Rescued in Mid Ocean From Burning Ship

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—A wireless message was received today by the local agent of the French line from the captain of the steamer Chicago saying that he had on board 19 first class passengers, 18 second, 102 third, rescued from the Fabre liner Venezia, which was abandoned on fire in mid-ocean. The Chicago also carries fifteen officers and 140 men of the crew of the Venezia and 169 sacks of mail. She is due to dock here Saturday.

Cesarovitch Stakes' Caused Sensation

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

NEW MARKET, Eng., Oct. 15.—The running of the Cesarovitch stakes here to-day furnished a sensation when an outsider, Ivanhoe, owned by J. White against whom odds were twenty to one, took the event. Golden Melody, owned by V. Stewart, was second and Bridgend, owned by W. Griggs, was third. Nineteen horses ran.

Belleville-Oswego Route Before R'y Commisioners

BOARD OF RAILWAY COMMISSIONERS OF CANADA MET AT BELLEVILLE TO CONSIDER APPLICATION OF E. GUSS PORTER, M.P. FOR COMPETITIVE FREIGHT RATES IN CONNECTION WITH BELLEVILLE-OSWEGO TRANSPORTATION ROUTE—FAVORABLE CONSIDERATION LIKELY.

The efforts being made by the representative of West Hastings in the Dominion Parliament, E. Guss Porter, K.C., to make Belleville the Canadian port of a great transportation route for freight and passengers continues steadily and is being given careful and close and favorable attention by public men and large shipping interests both in Canada and the United States.

Another step in the negotiations was taken yesterday when the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada met here at the request of Mr. Porter to consider the question of competitive freight rates in connection with the proposed Belleville-Oswego transportation route, so that cargoes of coal brought in here and transhipped at the Government Wharf to railway cars for points in Central Ontario on the three railways running out of here will receive freight rates in proportion to those charged by other routes and given due allowance for shortage of haul.

The entire matter was placed fully before the Board by Mr. Porter and there is no doubt that favorable action will be taken.

The Board also heard a complaint from Black & Son in regard to shipping facilities for fish.

Fish Grievance

The first matter taken up was in regard to a grievance Mr. W. G. Black, fish exporter, has. Mr. Porter, K.C., M.P., represented Mr. Black and Mr. W. C. Chisholm the Express Company.

Mr. Black in his testimony stated that he shipped from this point here to Toronto, Buffalo and other places. As he went around the bay gathering up fish from the fishermen he could not commence to pack his boxes until 2 or 3 o'clock. The Canadian Express Company had refused to take same after 5 o'clock in the afternoon. This meant that the fish had to be kept until next day, which had the effect of deteriorating the value of the same. It meant much to have the fish delivered as soon as possible after being caught.

Witness got a notice this fall that the express company would not pay for cartage after 5 o'clock. Fish will be delayed 24 hours in reaching its destination which deteriorates its value.

Mr. Porter—The question is should Mr. Black or the express company pay the carter's charges after 5 o'clock?

Mr. W. C. Chisholm, counsel for G. T.R., said that the new regulation went into effect owing to a strike of the men and 8 a. m. to 5 p.m. was good for collection of express matter. Our pick up service is confined to those hours. We claim we are giving a reasonable pick up service to Belleville and this is all that could be expected.

Mr. Boyce—Are there no exception for perishable products?

Mr. Chisholm—No. The perishable goods if needed to be shipped should be brought into the express company's office.

Mr. Boyce—The situation is this, that it will not cost the express company any more and people are clamoring for food products such as fish. Can this matter be amicably arranged.

Mr. Chisholm—A principle is involved which the express company cannot see that it can break. It means a demand for an all night service if all perishable goods and catables are to be taken after the hours designated.

Mr Black—The charges is 10 cents per box and a helper for to load and unload. If he had to go with the fishermen would have to be paid less for the fish.

Mr. Chisholm—Our night men could do the handling.

Mr. Black—My commission is only 4 cent a pound and if I have to pay the cartage it would possibly mean going out of business.

Mr. Boyce—Cannot the express company do something in this matter?

Mr Chisholm to Mr. Black—Do you mean to say an extra payment 1-16 per cent. for cartage would drive you out of business?

Mr. Black—It would mean that or a less price to the fishermen

Mr. Boyce—Fish is a perishable commodity and it seems to me that some reasonable proposition should be made and not at the expense of the shipper.

Mr. Proter thought that the principle has been broken into and violated by reason of the express company fixing hours of taking up of freight.

Mr. Boyce—I cannot see why a compromise could not be made in this case, seeing that it is a perishable commodity that is being shipped.

Mr. Boyce—We will reserve judgment to see if something cannot be done in the matter

New Coal Route

Mr. Porter outlined in some length and minutely a proposition to make Oswego-Belleville a route for bringing coal here, also barter the rates reduced. In his opening remarks Mr. Porter said he represented several interests, namely, the Oswego Chamber

Dewart's Attitude on British Connection

The biography of the Liberal leader appearing in "Morgan's Canadian Men and Women of the Times," 1912 edition, states that he "AS A YOUNG MAN WAS A STRONG ADVOCATE OF CANADIAN INDEPENDENCE AND STILL IS PRONOUNCEDLY IN FAVOR OF IT." This policy of Mr. Dewart which his biography says he "IS PRONOUNCEDLY IN FAVOR OF," would destroy the British Empire as now constituted by separating Canada from five hundred thousand Canadian soldiers were raised to defend that Empire, of which 50,000 laid down their lives. Canada went in debt one and a half billions, and our women saved and served to support that Empire.

This is not a mere personal matter. It is a question of the attitude of the leader of a great party on British connection. None of the preceding leaders of the Liberal party in Ontario were "pronouncedly in favor" of such a policy. Blake, Mowat, Hardy, Ross, Rowell, Proudfoot, were all loyal to the Empire and supported British connection. Sir Oliver Mowat dismissed a Liberal office holder for giving utterance to sentiments adverse to British connection.

We are at the parting of the ways. One road leads towards Empire under Sir William H. Hearst, the other road leads to the separation of Canada from the Empire under Hartley Dewart. This may account for the fact that in 41 constituencies there is no Dewart candidate—a catastrophe that never befell any party before in Ontario. Mr. O'Flynn and Mr Partiament announce themselves as followers of Mr. Dewart and are therefore not entitled to your support.

To The Electors of West Hastings

Having been honored with the Liberal-Conservative nomination for the constituency of West Hastings, and as it will be impossible for me in the short time before polling day to call upon every elector, I take this means of soliciting your vote and influence. The record of the Government of Sir William Hearst is one of honest integrity, economy and progressiveness, and is too well known and appreciated to need extended comment here. If honored with the endorsement of the electors at the polls, I will do all in my power to assist in carrying out the progressive policy of my leader, Sir Wm. Hearst.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

The new Man from Manitoulin, Beniah Bowman, leader of the United Farmers' party will have to fight for his seat. Mr. Bowman sat in the last Legislature and it was thought in some quarters that he would get an acclamation from the rugged island in northern Lake Huron, but another farmer, W. Kinney of Gore Bay has been nominated to run as a Conservative, despite Mr. Bowman's protests that Mr. Kinney having acted as chief enumerator was not eligible to sit in the Legislature.

Dewart's fight shines with great "scandal" power.

Liberal press office slinders to H. H. Dewart as a "fighting leader." It was the end of the war that put the beer in Toronto.

And even at that he does not know that an unsupported charge is a tactical error. Even the ex-Crown Prince could have told him that.

Count that day lost whose low-descending sun sees H. H. Dewart fire no "dud" against the Hearst Government.

H. H. Dewart says that in Southeast Toronto a deliberate attempt was made to drive a coach and four through the Ontario Temperance Act. Trouble is that, if some of Mr. Dewart's friends had their way drunken men might try to drive an auto through the said act.

In Toronto citizens smile at the idea of Jimmy Simpson's candidature. In the country they laugh right out loud.

Report is current that J. C. Elliott of West Middlesex is to abandon politics. By the way he was treated by the Grit convention in Toronto, he looked as though politics had abandoned him.

Will Rev. William Irvine speak for James Simpson in West York. If he does, Jimmy will not be the only one in the running at a U.F.O. picnic either.

After his unkind comments about cherry branch, it may be possible that certain voters in Southeast Toronto would rather see H. H. Dewart go to Jericho than Jerusalem.

W. Proudfoot, K.C., is going to run as an Independent. But his independence is not of the kind credited to H. H. Dewart in Morgan's Men and Women of Our Time.

Music and Drama

(What the Press Agents Say)
PRETTY AND VIVACIOUS

What is said to be the prettiest girl show, catchiest music, funniest comedy and most gorgeous production on tour this season is the brilliant musical comedy, "My Soldier Girl," a brand new offering coming to Griffin's Opera House next Friday, matinee and night. If pretty girls, who can and do, sing and dance, will make a musical show a success this entertainment should lead all other attractions, for in the show from the rise to the fall of the final curtain there are girls—just girls in all their possibilities, probabilities and all their charming attitudes. The authors have combined clever, snappy dialogue with tuneful melodies and the song hits of which there are more than a score, including the title song success "My Soldier Girl," which is the favorite number in the score. Some of the other songs are "The Dixie Wedding Tune" "Just For You" "Jasper's Ragtime Band," "Wrap Me Up In a Bundle of Love," and a score of others. This is the production which is now playing return engagements in Hamilton, London, Peterboro and Kingston. There's a reason.

GLADYS BROCKWELL

Belleville movie pictures lovers will have their last opportunity to-night to see, at the Palace theatre, one of the most fascinating international romances of recent times. "Kellar," the sensational William Fox photo-drama featuring Gladys Brockwell. A first class comedy and a splendid chapter of the popular "Perils of Thunder Mountain" serial are also being shown on the same program.

6-YEAR-OLD CHILD WONDER

Little Ben Alexander, the six-year-old actor appearing in "Hearts of the World" being shown at popular prices for the last time at Griffin's to-night is soon to be featured in a film production now being made by D. W. Griffith. Little Ben is one of the most compelling figures in "Hearts of the World," his acting constantly being favorable comments. A two-act Mack Sennett comedy and "The Jass Monkey," a funny and original satirical comedy completes the photoplay program. Three excellent vaudeville specialties are also being presented on the same program, namely Mlle. ZIG, in a novel and beautiful posing offering, Lucille Karlin, singing comedienne, and Karlin and Lee in an amusing ventriloquists' and song-logue specialty.

CHARLES RAY

Charles Ray, young, able and virile star by the exercise of his native talents, becomes one of the most popular screen stars in the country. In the portrayal of rugged characters, especially those illustrative of quaint types of young American manhood, he stands in a class by himself. In his latest starring vehicle, "Billy Henry" to be shown at Griffin's to-morrow to Saturday, the young star has a role of unusual power and attractiveness in a man of his temperament and if advance reports may be relied upon, Mr. Ray's new picture is likely to cause a sensation. Four other selected plays comprising, scenic, topical, and funny comedies are also being exhibited on the same program. The vaudeville offerings to be presented on the same program comprise Peter Smith, character singing comedian, Zellner and Holloway, impersonating present comedians and Dick Hamlin, "The man in Brown."

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

Clara Kimball Young and her own company will appear at Griffin's theatre, to-morrow to Saturday, matinee daily in her latest select star series, "The Reason Why" by Elinor Glyn. Miss Young is ably supported in this production by Milton Sills, in this photo-drama she enacts the role of Yvonne Marinoff, "a woman born to obey the supreme law of womanhood; to love completely, giving her all: she is the wife of the most hated man in Russia, Nicholas Marinoff, Prefect of Police. Disappointed in her quest for love and crushed by the ruthless brutality of her husband, her only consolation is their boy, Mimo, seven years old. From her window she watches Marinoff, escorted by two mounted policemen break up a throng listening to a revolutionist's harangue. With a blow of his whip, Marinoff kills the young son of the speaker. Incensed by this act, the mob lynches the prefect and rushes on to his house to revenge the murder of the boy of the late murderer's own son. Yvonne sees the approaching mob and escapes through a rear window with Mimo. The events that follow will prove intensely interesting. A good comedy and the 10th and second from the closing of the popular "Lure of the Circus" serial is also being shown on the same program.

Fortieth Annual Meeting Women's Christian Association

SPLENDID YEAR'S WORK OF LADIES OF W. C. A. IN HOSPITAL AND HOME FOR THE FRIENDLESS. ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The fortieth annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Association was held in the Council Chamber, Tuesday afternoon, October 14th. Reports were given from all departments, which will be published in full in the annual report, also complete list of committees.

The following are the reports of the President, Recording Secretary, Treasurer, of the W. C. A.:—

President's Report.

The Woman's Christian Association has reached another mile-stone. We are forty years old today.

Looking over the work of the fortieth year of the Association, we are thankful happy and a little bit proud, but not at all satisfied. We have accomplished much but there is so much more that we would like to do.

1. The House for the Friendless is too small. The old building is not worth repairing, and so far we have not felt we could afford to build a new home.

2. The Indigent department is doing a great work for the very poor. The workers have dreams of a much larger work with the aid of a paid social worker.

3. At the Hospital the whole third floor has been remodeled and will be ready for use in a few weeks. This gives us a new modern maternity ward and clean, comfortable, pleasant quarters for the maids. We have not yet been able to put in the much needed X-ray equipment. Before retiring from the position of President of this association, I wish to thank all the officers and workers who have helped make my five years as President so very pleasant. I have enjoyed the work and will ever look back on these years with pleasure.

As a matter of interest let me compare the figures of five years ago with the figures of today.

The history of the Association from the first has been one of progress with never a backward step, but the last five years have been unusual years, the whole world has clamped.

During the year 1913-14 there were 822 patients treated in the Hospital during the year just ending 1264 patients have been treated.

The revenue from the Hospital for 1913-14 was $12,153. The revenue from the Hospital for the year just ending is $27,561—more than double what it was five years ago. On the other hand the expenditure has more than doubled.

During 1913-14 the expenditure for the Home was $745.00. For the last year the expenditure for the Home has been $1,500.

During 1913-14 the expenditure for the Hospital was $13,088. For the year ending the expenditure for the Hospital has been $40,000.00. All this means increased work. When we look at these figures and realize that during the last five years of war and stress we have been able to meet our added responsibilities and still advance I am sure you are not surprised when I say we are thankful, happy and a little bit proud.

B. E. DEROCHE,
President of W.C.A.

Recording Secretary.

Madam President, Officers and Members of the Woman's Christian Association:

Once again I have the honor of presenting to you the annual report of the W.C.A. This year is the 40th anniversary of the birth of the Association, and one cannot but wonder if the Association as it now stands reaches the limit of, or surpasses the ideals of the founder and charter members. Did they in their vision see us as we are today, or did they dream of higher aims and nobler results? In our endeavors to carry on the work on the sturdy foundation of 40 years we are often faint-hearted, but the thought of their courage, faith and ideals keys us to further efforts.

In considering the work undertaken at the beginning of the year, at the first aims of the W. C. A. "We are not living up to our ideals" is the cry put forth every effort to maintain the spiritual and moral, as well as the temporal welfare of the women and children. Surely this matter will not be allowed to stagnate for another year. The Association wishes to thank all friends of the Hospital and Home, especially the ladies, Advisory Board, His Worship the Mayor, and the City Council and all those who assist from year to year with the Garden Party at the Home, and Block Party.

It is with great regret we record the death of two of our true and tried friends, Mr. J. W. Johnson, for many years a member of the Advisory Board, and Mrs. L. W. Yeomans. Mrs. Yeomans was one of the charter members and never lost interest in the Association. Always faithful in the performance of her duties, wise in her counsel and sound in her judgment. Her citizenship was a very precious thing and she demonstrated it by a life of usefulness and self-sacrifice.

At the last meeting of the year Miss Mattie Holden made herself a life member. Miss Holden is another charter member, and it is the interest of members like this, after 40 years of active service that does much to strengthen the hands of those in power and cheer the members to high endeavors.

The work of the Association has progressed. We cannot but acknowledge this when we review the past years. The great need now is for new workers who will take up the torch and hold it high, as a sign and a symbol, not only of loyalty, patriotism, and good citizenship, but the love of God and our fellow men.

¶ It is a Fact that—when a man drinks beer, he drinks and eats at the same time just as when he consumes a bowl of soup—in fact one eminent Ontario Physician declares beer is a liquid beefsteak.

¶ It is a Fact that—beer contains all the elements of a typical diet with the exception of fat—a glass of good beer is approximately as nourishing as a glass of milk—a quart of good beer is equivalent in food value to nearly a quarter of a pound of bread.

¶ It is a Fact that—beer contains such a very small amount of alcohol and such a relatively large amount of food material that it would be difficult indeed to find a meal at once simpler and more nutritive than a glass of beer, a piece of cheese, and a slice of bread.

¶ It is a Fact that—90% of organized labor of Canada demands a beer of 2.51/2 strength because it is the healthful and refreshing beverage the working man needs—a quart of this beer contains one-sixth of the energy required daily.

¶ It is a Fact that—the beer for which you are asked to vote on October 20th is an absolutely non-intoxicating beverage—has been proven to be non-intoxicating by a board of fourteen experts—and contains the bare minimum of alcohol needed as a preservative to make it digestible and nourishing.

THE BABEL OF TONGUES.

The final phase of the election contest is now on. The preliminary canter finished at the nominations and now the candidates who intend to run are all-lined up ready for the final dash and decision. There will be much said and printed this week in favor of the two leaders and the candidates, although the soft pedal seems to have been placed upon any favorable references to Leader Dewart either by press or public speakers. The main thing for electors to remember in the Babel of Tongues and contradictions of this strangest of all elections is the record of the Ontario Government.

Governments are not turned out of office for being good, but for being bad.

The Hearst administration has been the best Ontario ever had, a fact incapable of successful contradiction, and only the most hide-bound partizans will even venture to attack its record of honesty, efficiency and progressiveness except by vague generalities.

As it is universally conceded that the Hearst Government has been faithful to its trust as a business-like proposition electors will vote for a continuation of efficient government and not take a leap in the dark.

Vote for Sir Wm. Hearst and his candidates, who stand for good, honest, economical and progressive government, W. H. Ireland in West Hastings; Sandy Grant in East Hastings.

MINUTE MEN AND WOMEN WANTED.

There will have to be fast voting in this double-barrelled election or many votes will go unrecorded. The usual hold-backers who wait until nearly five o'clock will find a long line of electors ahead of them—but the polls will be closed at five o'clock, standard time (city time). There are eight hours to vote in. In eight hours there are 480 minutes, no more, no less. Separate polls are provided for every 250 names on the voters' list. Two hundred and fifty voters averaging two minutes each to mark their ballots and deposit them with the deputy returning officer, means 500—twenty minutes more than the time permitted by law. Of course a full vote can not be expected, although the lists are new and complete, but 500 voting in one poll will have to make an average of less than two minutes and a half in order that all may vote within the time specified. Less than two hundred voting can be figured out proportionately, and the average time available to each voter if congestion is to be avoided is short at the best. Consider then the leisurely voter who is in no hurry to get to the polls and in no hurry to vote after getting there. Consider also the large woman vote, exercising their franchise for the first time. The prospect for congestion and votes unrecorded is promising.

Electors should master the intricacies of the ballot before visiting the polling booth and be prepared to mark their ballots in the shortest possible time consistent with care against spoiled ballots.

Workers should get the vote out early and keep it moving continuously to the polls. It is advisable that a full and free expression of opinion is obtained upon the referendum and upon the record of the Hearst Government so that there may be no question as to the will of the people

Minute men and women voters will be welcome visitors to the overworked election officials.

The voters who can mark their ballots correctly and return them in two minutes or less will be providing time for slower acting ones and late comers to exercise their franchise. Those who can vote in one minute will be heroes to the hard pressed election officials.

CRISP COMMENT

This is one election in which conscientious Liberals not wedded to the ideals of political partizanship can vote for a Hearst candidate in the best interests of the new Liberalism.

× × ×

Wouldn't it be a good idea to postpone all social and public functions, other than pertaining to the election, until after October 20? Newspaper men would certainly vote in favor of such a proposition.

× × ×

Did the Dewart candidate in West Hastings render a heartfelt tribute to his honored and revered leader, Hartley Dewart, at the nomination meeting, or at any other meeting? He did not. Hearst candidates are proud of their leader and say so on every possible occasion. A vote for W. H. Ireland or Sandy Grant is a vote for W. H. Hearst and high ideals in public life faithfully carried out.

× × ×

Said a returned soldier canvassed to vote for the Dewart candidate: "Ireland is good enough for me. I don't need any gas mask on to follow Billy Hearst and Billy Ireland." The Dewartites may fool some of the people all the time but they will find it hard to fool the returned soldier any time.

× × ×

Press, pulpit and public unite in praising Sir William Hearst, the Conservative leader. Press, pulpit and public are unanimously silent as to the good points of Hartley Dewart, the "so-called" Liberal leader. Think it over.

× × ×

George H. Gooderham will be the opponent of Hartley Dewart in southwest Toronto, and after October 20 the Dewart will have plenty of time to start the long-promised trek back to Palestine which he promised the Jewish electors of southwest Toronto if they voted for him in the famous by-election where the "rising hope" overthrew Into the Le gislature.

× × ×

The only thing the Dewart candidate in West Hastings omitted to mention at the nomination meeting was his "deep regard" for his honored leader, Hartley Dewart, the man in favor of a Canada independent of the British Empire, the man who was not in favor of sending speedy reinforcements to the hard-pressed Canadian soldiers overseas. The local Dewart candidate is marching behind a leader whom he is ashamed to mention to the public platform, apparently. Everybody delights to honor Sir William Hearst, and real Canadians in the Hastings will vote for Billy Ireland, Sandy Cook and the Hearst Government.

× × ×

Some Liberal newspapers of the extreme partisan type have as yet omitted the publication of the reply of the chairman of the Ontario License Board's reply to Hartley Dewart's Jewish wine charges, while giving all kinds of prominence to the charges. Will the readers of such papers consider they have had a fair deal in being provided with only one side of an important public matter? Mr. Flavelle's statement was telegraphed in the regular Canadian Press, Limited, service to all daily papers, and used by all, except one or two, who still play politics, evidently with the idea that the public likes to be humbugged.

X-RAY FAILED
Mechanic Gives Evidence

There are cases where science in its most profound phases is absolutely balked, yet other help is at hand.

This is proved by the testimony of a mechanic, 35 years of age, who suffered, at times, positive tortures from stone in the bladder. After trying many remedies without result, he had an X-Ray photograph taken, which also failed to show where the trouble was. Fortunately, just at this juncture, when he almost had given up hope of any relief, Gin Pills were brought to his notice. These famous Pills in a very short time enabled him to pass the stone which was the cause of his trouble. We will give the name of this man on request.

Kidney and Bladder troubles should not be neglected. The first symptoms should be sufficient warning. Pain in the sides or back, constant headaches, neuralgic and sciatic pains, rheumatism, dizziness, constipation, gravel, highly-colored urine, specks before the eyes, all point to derangement. Gin Pills should be obtained without delay. Druggists and dealers carry them—use—your money refunded if not satisfied. Free sample on request.

of Commerce, the City Council or Oswego, the Delaware and Lackawana Coal Co., the Robt. Weddell Dredge Company of Trenton, Council and Board of Trade of Peterboro and Lindsay, also Campbellford, Stirling, Madoc, Hastings, Penelon Falls, Norwood and Hastings, who were vitally interested in these matters. The matter of freight rates was a very important matter to this city and outlying points, and he had personally taken these matters up with the Oswego Chamber of Trade. It was a well known fact that there was a great water traffic between Oswego and Belleville. It had fallen off as had other freight. An effort was being made to establish the former condition of affairs. The port of Oswego was equipped with every facility for the handling of coal in large quantities. When coal is shipped from Buffalo, as large quantities are, there is invariably a congestion at the Falls and also at Hamilton, especially in the summer and fall. These delays were had for the trade. The freight rates were then explained by Mr. Porter. The distance from Buffalo to Peterboro was 198 miles and from Buffalo to Lindsay 176. The rates charged for coal per ton net was $1.80 to Peterboro and Lindsay, $1.60 from Belleville to Peterboro 84 miles was 64 miles and Lindsay 84 miles. The rate charged per ton to Peterboro from Belleville was $1.50, and to Lindsay $1.60. This means that we are charged about 3 times as much freight rates from here to these points as is from Buffalo to those points. If a reasonable reduction could be made it would be to the advantage of the purchasers of the coal. He contended that the Oswego route for bringing coal here and distributing to the Midland district would be more feasible and cheaper. At the present time there was some 50,000 tons of coal ready to be released for shipment there if it could be done. If there was a direct route from Oswego to Belleville the congestion of coal cars as exists at times would be avoided. It would prove cheaper and dealers could sell the product of the mine cheaper.

Mr Watson for G.T.R.—The railway has a car ferry service between Rochester and Cobourg.

Mr. Porter—Is not 90 per cent of the coal brought over bituminous rather than anthracite coal?

Mr. Watson—In 1918 about a quarter of million of tons were brought over on the ferry but this year it has fallen off. Mine troubles had also been responsible for the falling off of coal in this country.

Mr. Taylor of Peterboro, being called, said he was a coal dealer. They do a business of some 10,000 tons of coal a year, but have difficulty in obtaining it. It comes by way of Buffalo and is delayed. This condition has existed since the war. In some cases the coal was held up a month in coming through. This was chiefly in the fall. There had been hardships in consequence of this. At present the price is $13 a ton, which is a higher price than is paid by frontier places.

Mr. F. B. Nugent of Lindsay, testified that cars of coal had been held up from 10 to 15 days. He had made trips to Cobourg and tried to get coal by that way, but it was not satisfactory. The price of coal at Lindsay was $13 per ton.

Mr. W. E. Schuster of this city, said he had been in business for some years and handled some 20,000 tons a year. He did supply some coal to consumers in Oswego. He considered that the proposed Oswego-Belleville route was a direct route and there would be no congestion. We procure coal by the cargo from the mines to Oswego and come here by vessel. It was about 12 cents less rates per ton on coal from the mine to Oswego than from the mine to Buffalo. There was a shortage of coal in this district and he contended that the Oswego route would be preferable. The position of the D. L. & W. Coal Company has some 50,000 tons of coal which could be shipped in Oswego if that route was established. He managed to get coal for a Lindsay dealer but there was complaints as to the freight rates. Hard coal for domestic use is available at Oswego. The rate from Belleville to Lindsay and Peterboro is considered too high.

Mr. W. S. Gays of Montreal, President of the Century Coal Company at Montreal, speaking of the rate on coal, said they would be prepared to handle more coal if they could get it from Oswego, and would erect a coal warehouse in this city.

To Mr. Porter—His company was interested in the Oswego and Belleville route, as it would relieve the congestion which occurs. The rate charged from Belleville to Lindsay and Peterboro was too high and if reduced it would mean a reduction of price to the consumer. In 1915, a year before the war, coal for Lindsay was held up for some 4 or 5 weeks.

Mr. W. S. Campbell, Chairman of the Transportation Committee of the Peterboro Board of Trade, said the dealers could not supply coal because they cannot get the coal. It has been shown that coal can be moved from Oswego to Belleville and distributed in the Midland district. The Midland district should be guaranteed, as entitled to better rates. We have the rolling stock to haul coal from Belleville to Midland points.

Frank P. Farrell said he represented the City of Oswego Chamber of Commerce. They were anxious to try and have established a traffic route for coal from Oswego to Belleville. In 1918 the G.T.R. bought coal here at Oswego and had it shipped to Belleville and Brockville. If it was good to have that route then it should be a good route at present. It was a very good business for the G. T. R. then why not now? The more you study this route the more it will appear to be the better route.

Mr. Porter—The Weddell Dredging Company of Trenton, was prepared to put on barges to haul coal from Oswego to Belleville and at a cheaper rate than is charged now.

John Edgar—At Peterboro the supply of coal is limited and in consequence a number of people cannot get coal from the dealer. It was favorable to the Oswego-Belleville route and it would relieve the congestion and reduce the rate.

Mr. W. E. Schuyz of this city, said he spoke on behalf of the Delaware Lackawana and W. Coal Company, also the Oggdensburg Coal and Towing Company with Mr. A. Gays of Montreal. The Belleville Bay to be a terminal for the distribution of coal and wanted the Oswego-Belleville route for the delivery of coal. He contended that Rochester could not be a terminal. He also wanted competitive freight rates.

After short argument by Mr. Watson and reply by Mr. Porter the Commission promised to give the matter careful consideration.

This was all the business and the sitting was closed.

DANGEROUS ANTISEPTICS AND GERMICIDES ARE UNNECESSARY

A dependable antiseptic has come to be considered a necessity in most homes. Especially is the case since Absorbine, Jr., has had such a wide introduction, because this liniment is not only a powerful antiseptic and germicide but it is absolutely safe to use and to have around the house. It is not poisonous and it cannot do harm if, if the children do get hold of it. That is a big point to consider.

Absorbine, Jr. is concentrated and is therefore economical. It retains its germicidal properties even diluted one part Absorbine, Jr. to 100 parts water —and its antiseptic properties, one part Absorbine, Jr. to 250 parts of water.

The antiseptic and germicidal properties have been repeatedly tested and proven in many prominent chemical laboratories. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

Send 10c for liberal trial bottle. W. F. Young, Inc., 457 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Canada.

Satisfactory terms have been reached between the Town Council and the Chemical Products Corporation of Canada, Limited, and it is expected that the agreement will be finally executed within a few days. Under the terms of the agreement, the company will commence immediate operations on the construction of buildings and plant, which will cost over a million dollars, with at least a thousand men. The company, realising the difficulty of a fixidity on assessment for school purposes only has decided to agree upon a fixed assessment of $200,000 for municipal taxation.

The agreement will be completed without delay and a special meeting of the Town Council will meet at an early date and pass the necessary by-law which will be submitted to the rate-payers.

A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER VI

Mr. and Mrs. Walford's offering was to be a grand piano—or a semi-grand—possibly, since the drawing room was not extensive—and with a view to being educated for the musical profession, it was natural they should wait till he returned before selecting it, so that they might have the advantage of his judgment.

He was traveling on the Continent with Pinecoe, the master under whom he studied. On hearing of his sister's engagement, he had at once dispatched affectionate letters and now he was expected home in two or three days, to make Mr. Kent's acquaintance, and tender his felicitations in person.

The better Kent learned to know the Walfords, the more clearly he perceived how inordinately proud they were of their son. Caesar's arrival and Caesar's approaching début were topics discussed with a frequency he found tedious. Even Cynthia was so excited by the prospect of reunion that a tete-a-tete with her lost a little of its fascination, and he occasionally feared if his prospective brother-in-law did not arrive without delay, he would have been bored into a cordial dislike for him as at a distant date, when they were intimate, and that they would joke over the matter together. Miss Wix alone appeared untainted by the prevailing enthusiasm and the first ray of friendliness for the subject of which he had been conscious was when he caught a glance of comprehension from her little eyes one afternoon after the subject had been discussed energetically for upwards of half an hour. It struck him there was even a gleam of ironical humor in her gaze.

"Enthralling, isn't it?" she seemed to say. "What do you think of 'em?"

He said to Cynthia later:

"They talk about your brother and his voice an awful lot, don't they?"

She looked somewhat startled.

"Well I suppose we do," she answered slowly, "now you point it out. But I didn't know, till we got over since his voice was discovered, Caesar's had brought up for his profession. When you've heard it, you'll understand."

"I'll be magnificent" he asked respectfully.

"Oh, I'm sure you'll say so. Signor Pinecoe told musicians it would be a crime if she didn't let him study seriously for the career. And Caesar has been under him years since then. Pinecoe says when he comes out people will rave about him. If he had only had just a "fine voice" he would have gone on the Stock Exchange you know with papa; but—but there could be no question about it with a gift like that."

Kent acknowledged it was natural that they should be profoundly interested by the young fellow's promise, and privately wished that a literary man could also leap into fame and fortune with his début.

The next afternoon when he reached The Hawthorns he heard that Caesar had already come—indeed, he had divined as much by Mrs. Walford's excited air in greeting. At the moment the traveler was not in the room however, and Cynthia ran in haste to summon him. Humphrey awaited his entrance with considerable curiosity, heightened by the fact that the mother kept looking toward the door as impatiently as a child toward the curtain that is to disclose the glories of pantomime.

"I don't know what is keeping him," she said in her most staccato tones. "He just went to the balcony to fetch my book. Oh, he'll be here in a minute—or shall we sit out there ourselves? Perhaps he's gone down in the garden and Cynthia can't find him. What do you say?"

"Just as you please," said Kent.

But as he spoke the girl returned to announce that her brother was following her, and the next moment there was an atmosphere of a barber shop, and Humphrey found his fingertips being pressed in a large, soft palm.

"I am charmed!" said Caesar Walford with a sweet, lingering smile.

"Charmed!"

Kent saw a fat young man of six or seven and twenty, with an enormous chest development, and a waist that suggested he wore stays, and was already wrestling with his figure. His hair, which had been grown long, was arranged on his forehead in negligent curls, and his shirt-collar, low in the neck, lay back over a flowing bow.

"I'm very pleased to meet you," said the author with disgust.

Again Humphrey's gaze sought the sour spinster's and—yes, her own was eloquent.

MACLURE—NAVIN

At St. Peter's Church, Cobourg, Tuesday, September 30, the marriage was solemnized of Mary Irene, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Navin of Cobourg, and Mr. Allan Maclure, second son of Mrs. Maclure and the late William Grant Maclure, of Nassua, N.P., Bahama Islands. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Heffer. After a motor trip the States they will return to Toronto, where they will reside.

McALPINE—COSTELLO

A pretty autumn wedding was solemnized in St. Martin's Church, Enniskillen, when Miss Marguerite Mary daughter of Mrs. Paul Costello, of Enniskillen, was married to Mr. John A. McAlpine, of Picton, Rev. Capt. Costello, brother of the bride, officiated, assisted by Rev. Father McAuley. The bride wore ivory duchess satin and gorgette crepe with pearl trimmings, and white hat with willow plumes. She was assisted by the groom's sister, K. McAlpine, wearing cream satin. Mr. W. L. Costello of St. Michael's College, Toronto, was groomsman. After the church ceremony a reception was held at the Maples, the home of the bride's parents. About eighty guests were present.

SEYMOUR—TERRY

At the home of Mrs. A. Terry, Deseronto, the bride's mother, Mrs. W. Terry, of Toronto, gave his sister, Aspie L., in marriage to Milton H. Seymour of Oakfield, N.Y. Rev. Mr. Danforth, Methodist clergyman, officiated. The bride wore pink silk crepe and carried white roses. Miss Marion Seymour, Rochester, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, wearing pink georgette and carrying pink roses. Mr. E. D. McKenny of Deseronto was groomsman. Mrs. D. P. Brennan played the wedding march. Mr. and Mrs. Seymour left after the wedding breakfast for a wedding trip, the bride wearing a navy tailored suit with king's blue hat and taupe furs.

Several New York steel mills will resume operations and serious trouble is expected.

Let—
Ontario's Golden Era
Continue
PROGRESS—PERFORMANCE—PROMISE

IF we have given worthy service during the trying time of war, may we not be relied upon to serve the nation faithfully and well in hastening the time of still greater prosperity and happiness? As we have begun, so we will continue, fearless in the discharge of duty and ever alert in the service to the people. Conscious of our shortcomings, and grateful for the opportunities we have to serve our Province, we submit our record with confidence to the electors for their consideration and approval, and ask from a united people a mandate to carry on the Government of this Province.

FINANCE

In 1904 the income of Ontario was $[illegible],000; in 1913 it was $11,126,302; in 1918 it was $17,270,121. This has been accomplished without resorting to direct taxation—apart from the war tax, which has been repealed. Out of this revenue the Government has returned to the people in larger grants, $7,897,-000 for Education; $1,670,325 for Agriculture. The public services have been restored and ample grants have enabled important public duties to be undertaken.

AGRICULTURE

The Agricultural industry in Ontario is in a prosperous and thriving condition. Appropriations in 1904 amounted to $475,-000; in 1919, $1,075,000. Last year the value of the farm products of Ontario was $350,000,000, and the value of the combined farm assets was one and a half billion dollars. Within the last three years ten thousand farm mortgages have been paid off. Encouragement has been extended to every branch of the industry, education has been fostered, and social conditions have been improved. Agriculture has received the earnest and unremitting attention of the Government.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC

Hydro is to-day the most extensive public-ownership enterprise of its kind in the world. Since its inception Hydro-Electric has saved to the consumers of electric power in Ontario over fifty millions of dollars. Hydro displaces annually 5,000,000 tons of coal. Hydro develops and distributes 350,000 horse power to over 230 municipalities, 175,000 domestic consumers and 6,000 customers for power. The Queenston-Chippewa undertaking will provide an economical development of 400,000 horse power, and the prospective ultimate development in the whole Province is over 1,000,000 horse power.

EDUCATION

Ontario's educational system is designed to provide the most efficient training possible for the boys and girls who are to become the future citizens of the state. Under the leadership of the Minister of Education no worthy expenditure has been denied to accomplish this purpose. Generous grants have been made for agricultural, technical and vocational training; returned soldiers are encouraged to enter the teaching profession; teachers' salaries have been raised and a superannuation scheme inaugurated. This year nearly $4,000,000 will be spent on education in Ontario.

LABOR

Ontario's industrial leadership in Canada has been maintained by broad and effective labor laws. Under the Workmen's Compensation Act $[illegible],000 has been paid out in awards. Special safeguards have been provided for female and child labor. A minimum wage for Ontario is assured, and a direct representation of labor [illegible] in the Government [illegible] Labor and technical education has been encouraged.

HEALTH

Ontario's public health service is not excelled on the continent. Public health education, child welfare, sanitary engineering service, and the free distribution of antitoxins and serums have conserved life and prevented epidemics. A scheme of pensions for mothers is to be established. The Provincial Board of Health supplied all the typhoid vaccine used by the Canadian troops in the war. This feature of the work has [illegible] about a saving of over $[illegible] a year to the people of the Province.

HIGHWAYS

Good roads add wealth and comfort to rural life. The highway improvement programme of the Ontario Government is applied to both urban and rural districts. A complete system of roads, including provincial roads, provincial county roads, county roads and township roads, with a mileage of 12,500 miles, has been worked out and will be constructed. The entire roster license revenue, with a large amount added, will be spent annually on this work.

WAR WORK

Ontario gave in men 232,895; in contributions $54,532,188; to Victory Loans $340,465,550. Ontario provided 50 per cent. of Canada's war effort. The Ontario Government spent in war work over $10,000,000; maintained in England the most efficient military hospital in Europe; furnished club houses for the soldiers in London and Paris; made gifts of food and guns to the Mother Country; made large grants to the British Red Cross, Belgium, Serbian relief and other worthy patriotic objects. Ontario's war effort has made the name of Ontario resound in every corner of the world.

As a war measure the Ontario Temperance Act was passed, suspending for the duration of the war the retail sale of liquor. The promise was given that as soon as the war was over the whole question of the character of the liquor legislation of Ontario would be submitted to the people by Referendum, and the will of the people would prevail. This promise is now being fulfilled.

PROMISE:

Greatest possible assistance to Agriculture—Faithful enforcement of the Referendum—Support of Hydro-Electric; cheap light and power for the farmer—Convert railway branch lines into Hydro radials—Good roads is every part of Ontario—State pension fund for mothers—Direct Industrial Conference—Consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation—Educational progress, technical and agricultural instruction—Improved transportation in Northern Ontario—Timber conservation—Encouragement in mining development—Enlargement of Ontario's free public health service.

Letters to the Editor

THE RETURNED SOLDIER.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Sir,—I am writing this article with the hope that you will see fit to publish same.

As the subject of Soldiers' Re-establishment is very prominently before the public, I would like, through the columns of your paper to express my own personal view regarding this matter.

The famous Calgary resolution for a $2,000 gratuity seems to be the cause of considerable comment, some for and some against it, but the cause of so much discontent among returned soldier citizens is due to the lack of employment generally, due to the cessation of hostilities.

I feel safe in saying that no money can pay the boys for the sacrifices they endured Over There, but returned soldier citizens have a right to expect employment on their return to civil life, and failing that, they must have recourse to some source to buy the necessaries of life till such time as they are re-established. Hence the need of a further money grant to relieve the situation during the coming winter, which promises to be a severe one for the unemployed.

On our return to civil life we find all positions filled (with few exceptions) by men who did not see fit to don the khaki, and of course, as a general thing, we have to take a back seat, or to speak plain, the pickings are all gone and we take what is left, and a large percentage of us get left on the deal.

There is considerable talk about the cost to the country of a further gratuity. I am not in a position to say how the country stands financially, but I do know that if the war had extended a further two years Canada would have produced her share of men and money, and furthermore, if the war had been lost to us Canada would have produced an indemnity if demanded by Germany, and the Germans would not allow us time to tax ourselves if we could afford it, either.

In conclusion, I would like to take this opportunity of expressing my sincere thanks to Major R. D. Ponton, as president of G. W. V. A., also as a comrade, who spent so much of his time trying to get the Civil Service Commission to give me a permanent position as mail-carrier in this city, where I have been employed for twenty months as a temporary man, and was discharged two weeks ago.

Major Ponton was not satisfied with corresponding with the authorities, but he also went to considerable trouble and interviewed the Deputy P. M. G. personally at Ottawa, and as a result I was retained two months longer in the post office of this city, and I feel sure that if we all worked for the good of the Association even half as much as our worthy president, Major Ponton, we would soon get the necessary Recognition of soldiers' rights, which we all so earnestly desire.

Thanking you, sir, for your valuable space.

Respectfully yours,
C. R. FISHER.

THE GAS QUESTION.

October 13, 1919.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Sir,—I wish to give a few reasons to the public for not voting on the by-law to reinstate Mr. Cook as foreman at the gas works.

Who should be held responsible for the manufacture, have charge of the help, etc? As I understand the original by-law ptupose was simply to hold Cook responsible for the gas, look after the help, but in all cases and under all circumstances to consult the Manager. The by-law passed, in my opinion, is not workable. How could a manager be responsible for the success of a business and not have full charge of the manufacturing end. That is where the money is spent and naturally where the money is dropped if not properly looked after. The plant is not alone the manufacturing of gas, but in securing the best results out of the material used. The plant belongs to the citizens and will affect the taxes if not more carefully run, especially just now. What company doing business the size of our gas department would think of putting a subordinate in charge on an equal footing with the manager. Would any manager stand such treatment?

Has the present manager made good? Coming here, I understand, some 18 years ago, taking charge of a most dilapidated plant with conditions and surroundings very discouraging and a debenture debt of nearly $80,000.00, his first put the plant on a paying basis, dropped the price of gas from $1.75 per thousand to $1.25, and every year having a nest surplus which was applied to enlarging the mains and keeping the works in a fair condition. This was done without the debenture money his predecessor had on tap. Very little encouragement was given him by the council. He assumed the whole responsibility of working out the troubled details of a run-down outfit. The war came along. The price of coal was nearly doubled, while on oil it was trebled. Labor problems had to be faced. Expenditures on coal alone had up to the end $96 per day in excess of the preceding year. Was it any wonder the department ran back the one year? Last year they forged ahead, having a slight surplus. All these conditions were no fault of the manager. It is easy to criticise, but to me it is wonderful. He kept the plant running, and in my opinion the manager, considering the times, especially when anxious to pay his way, has a debenture debt of $1,300.00 to be paid annually. Since taking charge he had paid $20,000.00 in debentures and interest, $15,000.00 on mains, $9,000.00 on services, $6,000.00 on meters. In four years time a $50,000 debenture will be discharged. His handling of nearly $90,000.00 of the city's money without a shortage is certainly a good record.

What I still ask is that the present manager have full control. He has proved himself in every way efficient, a worthy citizen and one who deserves our respect.

Yours,
ALF. HUNTER.

THE AUTHORITY OF LAW

Repeal of Ontario Temperance Act Does Not Necessarily Mean a Return to the Old License System

THE Citizens' Liberty League contend that the unsatisfactory Ontario Temperance Act must be repealed and new legislation enacted. Further, they declare that the repeal of The Ontario Temperance Act does not necessarily mean the return of the Old License System.

The Referendum Committee contend differently.

To settle the matter once and for all, the Citizens' Liberty League herewith submits a signed statement by I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., of the law firm of Hellmuth, Cattanach & Meredith, Toronto, and by D.L. McCarthy, K.C., Toronto, son of the late Dalton McCarthy, and member of the legal firm of McCarthy & McCarthy, Toronto. Mr. Hellmuth and Mr. McCarthy are two of the outstanding King's Counsel of Ontario.

"Our opinion is asked as to whether a majority vote of 'YES' to question One of the Referendum, necessarily repeals the Ontario Temperance Act now in force and at the same time brings into effect the Liquor License Act which was in force prior to the passing of the Ontario Temperance Act, and our answer is unhesitatingly No.

"It is true that in case of such affirmative answer, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council can, by proclamation, bring into effect the prior Liquor License Act, but until this is done the present Ontario Temperance Act continues in force. It is not obligatory on the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to issue any such proclamation within any fixed or definite time, and there is no reason to suppose any action in this respect will be taken until after the meeting of the Legislature.

"Notwithstanding, therefore, an affirmative majority vote to question One of the Referendum, the prior Liquor License Act will not necessarily be in force when the Legislature meets, and the Legislature can, at the next session, pass such legislation as it deems proper in regard to the whole question. It can bring into effect any Act that the majority of the members of the Legislature approve of, irrespective of any laws in force up to that time.

"There is nothing in the Constitution as laid down by the British North America Act which prevents the Legislature from validly enacting a law which would be a compromise between the Liquor License Act and the present Ontario Temperance Act and any such Act being entirely within the competence of the Legislature would, when passed, supersede any prior laws."

I. F. Hellmuth
D. L. McCarthy

When The Day Is Over

When the day's work is done and the worries of everyday life begin to get you down, keep you up nights, and there is nothing in life but headache, backache and worry, turn to the right prescription, one gotten up by Dr. Pierce fifty years ago.

Everything out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his efforts was a medicine called Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable parts that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening pains, irregularities, inflammations, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of Queen's root, black cohosh root, unicorn root, blue cohosh root and Oregon grape root. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whiskey and morphine are injurious, and so he has always kept them out of his remedies. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe, yet strong tonic good that druggists everywhere sell in liquid or tablet form.

DEMANDS APOLOGY

A merchant tailor of Belleville has instructed his solicitor to take action for criminal libel against Mr. H. K. Denyes, U.P.O. candidate in East Hastings, and Mr. H. C. Tucker, of Rawdon, for statements alleged to have been made at the nomination meeting in Plainfield in referring to the price farmers receive for wool and the cost of men's clothing. They are accused of stating on the public platform, that the tailor of the city of Belleville (mentioning his name) was charging $90 for a suit of clothes made from tweed. The merchant in question has a suit in his store for which he charges more than $40 or $50 a suit he says. He has instructed his solicitor to demand from these two gentlemen an ample public apology, making such a statement, which was groundless and liable to injure his business.

In Memoriam

LONGDEN—In loving memory of my dear husband, Charles Joseph Longden, who died October 16th, 1915, of pneumonia.

I often sit and think of you when I am all alone,
For memory is the only thing that griefs can call its own.
What peaceful hours we once enjoyed how sweet their memory still!
But they leave sad aching void this world can never fill.
So sad, yet so true, he cannot tell why,
The best are the first to be called on to die.

Toronto Woman Praises Tanlac

Mrs. Emma Benson Says Results She Has Derived Have Been Marvellous.

"Tanlac certainly has proved to be one of the best friends I ever had," said Mrs. Emma Benson, of 653 Runnymede Road, West Toronto, Ontario. "I had been in a badly run down condition for a long time," she continued, suffering from neuralgia and such terrible headaches that I would have to go to bed and stay there for days at a time. My nerves were shattered and I would lie awake at night for hours before I could get to sleep, then often I would wake up feeling so weak and nervous that I would faint clear away. I was completely worn out and was simply miserable all the time.

"My husband had been relieved of stomach trouble by taking Tanlac so I decided to try it myself, and now that terrible neuralgia is completely gone. I haven't had a headache since I started on Tanlac. My nerves are quiet and I sleep like a baby. That tired feeling has passed away and I am stronger and better in every way than I have been in a long time."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Mallory, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. W. Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Tweed by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Bleakley.

The situation created by the strike of the arsenal employees at Brest France, has taken a decidedly revolutionary turn and begins to look very serious.

A DOUBLE DOSE

A young Lindsay man who was fined last week the sum of $200 and costs for having liquor in his possession, other than in his private dwelling, appeared before Magistrate Bradford for the second time, charged with selling liquor. The case was proved and the young fellow fined $400 and costs.

VALISE TAKEN IN MISTAKE

Mr. H. G. Bales of Brighton, reports to the police that while he was in the city last night a valise belonging to him was accidently taken in mistake at one of the city hotels. The valise contained among other articles a dress suit.

BOOTED AND SHIRTED

Mr. J. Kestlier, of the G. T. R. championship baseball team, is the lucky chap who pulled down the prizes offered for celerity on bases in the final game, and as a result is the richer for an excellent pair of boots from Murdoff & Holmes and two fine silk shirts from the Deacon Shirt Co. The prizes were originally offered for a home-run, but the condition of the field prevented a complete circuit of the bases being made and Kestlier's three-legger was considered by the prize-donors as sufficient to win the prizes. Messrs. Goyer and Mills, the battery of the winning team were also made happy with gifts of silk shirts from the Deacon Shirt Co.

AMALGAMATION OF ENCAMP.

For some years in this city there has been two Encampments in connection with the I.O.O.F. bodies, but now there will only be one. Last evening at the Oddfellow's Temple they were amalgamated. The Encampments were named Moira and Quinte. The officers of the former will remain in office for the time being. Some, of the Grand Encampment officers were present, namely, Grand Patriarch H. Sinclair, Toronto, Grand High Priest J. M. Watson, Napanee, Grand Scribe, John A. McDonald, Toronto, and Grand Treasurer, E. C. Garbutt, Picton. At the conclusion of the business a banquet was partaken of followed by addresses and appropriate vocal selections.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

The coroner's jury empanelled to enquire into the circumstances regarding the death of Edwin C. Roth, a note who was struck by a C. P. R. engine at Deseronto a few days ago last night completed their labors. The verdict rendered was that it was purely accidental and no blame was attached to any person. Dr. Yeomans, coroner, presided and Mr. Carnew, County Attorney, conducted the examination of witnesses. The name of deceased was ascertained by the train crew by a memorandum book found in the coat of deceased by the conductor.

WOMEN AND THE BALLOT

Paragraphs of Interest for Women Voters

Women electors can vote for the candidate as well as on the referendum. Every woman elector is entitled to two ballots, the same as a male voter.

Pensions for mothers are promised by Sir William Hearst, who never failed to keep a promise. Women should express their approval of Mother's Pensions by marking their ballot for the Hearst candidate, W. H. Ireland.

The Workmen's Compensation Act has been of inestimable benefit to the women of the province, and women electors should show appreciation of the Hearst Government's effort to protect their interests by marking their ballots for the Hearst candidate, Mr. W. H. Ireland.

Women electors casting their first vote should make it a point to learn how to mark the ballot correctly, then too for that matter. A spoiled ballot means a lost franchise and lost time in going to the polling booth.

The Hearst Government placed the ballot in the hand of women. Besides being the right thing to do she should mark that ballot for the Hearst Government as a gracious act of appreciation. A vote for W. H. Ireland is a vote for Sir William Hearst.

This is not a Belleville election but an expression of opinion by the electors of West Hastings on Provincial affairs. Belleville electors are being asked to vote for the local Dewart candidate because he resides in Belleville. Surely such a request is an insult to the intelligence of women electors who have brains enough to know that the issue is much broader than the city limits of Belleville.

"Sure Eddie" is a likeable little chap, but this is no game of pitch pong or parlor croquet or ward election; this election concerns West Hastings and the Province of Ontario and we women are bound to vote for a leader like Sir Wm. Hearst, whom we all honor and respect, and his representative, W. H. Ireland," said a lady who refused to be stampeded into back-yard politics.

How Much Tobacco Will My Heart Stand

A Question Vital to Every Man Who Smokes or Chews

IT MAY COST A PRECIOUS LIFE TO FIND OUT BY EXPERIMENT

The heart of every user of tobacco bears a record of tobacco poisoning. Let that and then fights wasting tissue, progressive weakness will result in heart disease; when it comes to die, but before the final victory of tobacco the heart throws many stages of decline and decay. Tobacco poisoning is the direct cause of the heart—and nerve—troubles among others; therefore, some hearts will stand more tobacco than others, and there is a limit to what any heart can stand. Where that limit is no man can safely risk—it cannot be determined by smoking cigarettes, a pipe or cigars, or chewing tobacco. It is a matter of man's choice with health and life to lose in many cases. It is a habit easily acquired, but one that is indulging in a costly habit at the cost of health and life and wealth. Ask any doctor anywhere and he will tell you that using tobacco is dangerous—but that if he must smoke or use the habit than to experiment to find out how much tobacco his heart will stand for a month. Ask any druggist anywhere that the thought of quitting is unpleasant to contemplate, but to those who know that tobacco injures them—and to those who have found that they are slaves to the habit—the joy of finding that they can voluntarily endure, or get the habit made it easy (or seemed by substituting Nicotol) for the habit really quits you, and you are free from the habit.

If you want to know how much easier it is to quit tobacco with Nicotol than without it, go twenty-four hours without tobacco in any form, then try Nicotol for the same length of time, and you will know the blessed relief. At the end of a week's trial Nicotol will be found a friend indeed, and it is probable you will have no further use for it, as it will break the tobacco habit in a very short time. Nicotol is sold by druggists everywhere, or any other work or two should make it not necessary to buy more. Nicotol is sold by Dr. Cramer, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., and is guaranteed to be entirely harmless. Under this statement was shown to him: "I have used Nicotol for the tobacco habit, have built in less than ten days' time, and I can therefore recommend it highly." Dr. Cramer further recommended it highly to me, and I am giving druggists my own personal guarantee that Nicotol removes the tobacco habit in less than ten days' time, and I have therefore recommended it highly. Under the pure food and drugs act, as given in one of our recent issues, Dr. Cramer's Nicotol is now sold by druggists everywhere under our new booklet; it is interesting and costs you nothing (Templetons, 142 King W., Toronto). We mail T.R.C.'s anywhere on receipt of $1.00.

Vote for W. H. IRELAND and SANDY GRANT and Retain GOOD GOVERNMENT

Voters' Lists May Be Opened For Soldiers

GUELPH, Oct. 16.—Sir William Hearst made the following announcement here last night:

"At the request of various soldiers' organizations, the government has issued instructions to the chairmen of the voters' registration boards wherever soldiers still desire to be placed on the lists, to hold sittings at the latest possible moment for returned soldiers only. These sittings will be held so late as Saturday of this week in order that every soldier who has returned to the country or who may return in time to vote on Monday, will have an opportunity to vote."

CHAIRMEN RESPONSIBLE

Toronto Globe—Hundreds of soldiers throughout the Province who are, for various causes, not at present on the voters' lists are in many cases likely to be put on at the last moment. Some of the returned men are not on the lists because of having come home since the enumerators made their rounds, others are off because they have been transferred during the last few days from one military hospital to another. There are a number of soldier-students attending the Universities who will be unable to exercise their franchise unless the lists are reopened.

"There is no reason why the lists cannot be reopened two days before to enable the soldiers to be put on," was the opinion expressed to The Globe yesterday by Mr. Allan M. Dymond, Provincial Chief Election Officer. "The responsibility for taking this action rests entirely with the Chairman of the Voters' Registration Board in each constituency, who is the County Judge. The Judges would of course, have to arrange with the Clerks of the Peace."

In one or two places Judges have already special sittings to put soldiers on the lists. In answer to inquiries, Mr. Dymond yesterday advised officials in several places that such a course could be taken.

COURTS REOPENED WHEREVER POSSIBLE

Mail and Empire—In order to guarantee that soldiers who have lately returned to their homes, or who have recently moved, may have their names on the voters' lists, a number of the Voters' Appeal Courts will be reopened at the end of the week for the hearing of any such delayed cases. Yesterday arrangements were made for the London, Peterboro, Windsor, North Bay and other courts to be reopened and still others may be reopened on Friday or Saturday. This step is due to the representations of the G. W. V. A. officials that there are several hundred men who have recently returned, or who have been removed from one hospital to another, who would otherwise lose their voting rights. Under the Election Act, the lists are supposed to be closed and signed ten days prior to the election, but legal authorities state that the courts may be reopened in such an emergency. Instructions have gone out from the Premier's office to the Registration Boards, that the courts should be reopened wherever possible, but it may not be possible to do this at some of the larger centres owing to the lists having already gone out of the hands of the boards to the returning officers.

LOCAL SITUATION

His Honor Judge Deroche, Chairman of the Board for West Hastings, interrogated by The Intelligencer this morning, said that he had received no instructions as to a special sitting here of the Court for soldiers, but said there would be no difficulty in arranging one if authorized. He was of the opinion that the residence rule applied to returned soldiers as no provision was made in the Act, although this might be varied by Order-in-Council. His Honor Judge Wills, Chairman of the Board for Prince Edward County was also without instructions on the subject up until noon.

Candidate O'Flynn Wanted Embargo Placed on English Women

At the Provincial Convention of the Great War Veterans Association First Vice-President E. D. O'Flynn, of Belleville, introduced a resolution advocating that all English women be kept out of Canada for one year. This resolution awakened a storm of opposition and was very short-lived as the Comrades would have none of it, regarding it as a slur. It was thrown out of the meeting. Many Canadian soldiers married overseas, many left sweethearts in Merrie England, and many soldiers, British born, had wives, mothers and sisters in the Old Land whom they did not wish debarred from this country like alien enemies or unclean or undesirable immigrants. In a report of the convention proceedings by the Toronto Mail and Empire at the time the following reference was made to the O'Flynn embargo on Old Country women proposition, for it will be noticed the resolution includes all others, Scotch, Welsh, Irish, French, etc.;

REFUSED TO BAR ENGLISH WOMEN.

Some debate attended a resolution calling for a minimum pension scale of $1,000, and that officers and men receive the same amount, also one by First Vice-President O'Flynn that English women be kept out of Canada for one year, as well as all others, because so many Canadian women who had worked in munitions could not get work. Old country delegates and many Canadians took it as a slur, and gave the resolution a scorching reception. It was thrown out by the meeting.

Victory Sure For Good Government

In the next House the strength of the Government should be not less than it was in the last House. If the voters do justice to the Government its strength will be greater than it was before. No Ontario Government ever so well earned the support of the people as the Hearst Government. No other Government was called upon to stand such a test as the Hearst Government passed through in its term of office. It came with flying colors out of its long and trying part of the world ordeal. In the war time it administered the Province's affairs with great business ability. It brought to its task qualities of head and heart and character that are beyond price in the work of government. There are many candidates in the field against it, but not a single constructive or analytical critic appears to challenge the wisdom or the honesty of its handling of the Province's business. It is a government against which the breath of scandal has never been turned except in the irresponsible and utterly exploded venture of the present leader of the Opposition. Because his attempt to blacken the reputation of the Government was discredited by the investigation and report of the Royal Commissioner to which it was referred, Mr. Dewart turned his tongue on that high-minded jurist.

In most cases the opposition to Government candidates is little more than nominal, and we believe it will be so treated by the voters. The people, we are sure, welcome the opportunity to express their approbation of the Government's splendid work, and the way to do that is to single out the Government candidate in every case and mark the ballot in his favor. Every Minister has done yeoman's service in this war time, and now the voters are expected to do their duty at the polls in the same worthy fashion.

CANADA MUST HAVE MORE WORKING CAPITAL

Canada is in the position of a big business house with a growing trade. She is making money.

But the success of her business depends entirely on her ability to procure working capital.

Canada must have money to finance her agricultural, commercial and industrial development. Business needs more working capital in order to expand.

All classes of Canadian people and all trades benefit directly by this development and expansion.

On the success of the 1919 Loan depends the prosperity of the whole country.

Help Canada provide the working capital by subscribing to your utmost.

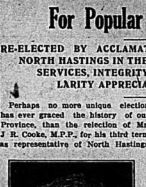
Great Tribute of Appreciation For Popular Bob Cooke M.P.P.

RE-ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION TO AGAIN REPRESENT NORTH HASTINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE—FAITHFUL SERVICES, INTEGRITY AND PERSONAL POPULARITY APPRECIATED BY ELECTORS.

Perhaps no more unique election has ever graced the history of our Province, than the selection of Mr. J. R. Cooke, M.P.P., for his third term as representative of North Hastings



J. R. COOKE, M.P.P.
Re-elected by Acclamation to The Legislature from North Hastings to the Legislature. A convention of the Liberal Conservative party was called at Madoc Village for October 17 at 10 o'clock a.m., and was attended by a full and thorough representative quota of men and women delegates from each municipality.

J. A. Gunter, acting President opened the convention at the appointed hour and the delegates proceeded to select a candidate, the only name submitted being that of Mr. J. R. Cooke, who was made the unanimous choice of the convention.

Nomination took place at 12 o'clock noon and Mr. J. R. Cooke being the only candidate, filed the necessary election papers and at expiration of the time limit Mr. John West, returning officer, declared Mr. J. R. Cooke elected for the ensuing term in the Legislature. Thus ended probably the shortest political campaign on record in our province—lasting as it did, less than three hours.

North Hastings is particularly favored in having men who are eminently qualified to hold responsible and public positions, and in view of this it must be especially gratifying for Mr. Cooke to be not only the unanimous choice of the convention but the recipient of an unparalleled expression of confidence.

It is the reward of merit for Mr. Cooke's good service to the riding, his singular qualifications for the position, the spirit of fairness which has actuated his public life to those holding opposite political views and his genial personality, has attracted all sections to his support. United farmers organizations and Liberals join with those of his own party in honoring the man who has been a worthy representative of North Hastings during his term of office.

Excuses For Their Nakedness

Toronto Mail and Empire.

The Hearst Government is being blamed by its opponents for what? For doing things which ought to be done and which its opponents left undone. Mr. Dewart and the few men who can be induced to come out on his platform complain to the public that the Hearst Government has stolen the Liberal clothes. No clothes that ever belonged to Liberals of the Dewart stamp and connection were ever appropriated by the Hearst Government. The plaintive excuse for having no policy will not go down with the electors who know the party record of Mr. Dewart and the small estimation in which he is held by the most respected Liberals in Ontario. His lack of a policy is not thus to be explained. There can be no plank in a platform that is non-existent. It takes some audacity for Mr. Dewart, whom Mr. Rowell and the Christian Guardian identify with the liquor interests, to accuse the Hearst Government of stealing the Liberal policy in regard to temperance. Three times in the last twenty-five years were the people humbugged by political professors of temperance who had the warm support of Mr. Dewart. Three times the voters of this Province voted for prohibition without getting it. Mr. Dewart's political friends in office played false with the temperance people and stood by the liquor interests. The one Liberal leader in Ontario who was steadfast for prohibition is scornfully referred to by Mr. Dewart and his circle as an "uplifter." For the abolition of the liquor traffic the Province is indebted to the honest Government of Sir William Hearst.

The Workmen's Compensation Act is another article the Conservative Government is accused of lifting from the wardrobe of the Liberals. That Act is on the statute book because Sir James Whitney was determined it should be put there as a measure of justice and humanity to the workers of Ontario. Labor candidates in the field today cannot wish to deprive the Whitney Government of the honor that is due it for enacting that law or to deprive the Hearst Government of its full credit for the thorough administration of it. Woman Suffrage is another thing the opponents of the Hearst Government are now crying about. In effect they ask, What business had the Hearst Government to become serious over a matter which they themselves had trifled with? It seems impossible for politicians who clung to the Ross Government to credit the directors of public policy with honest intentions or righteous dealing. They are slow to realize that of the political shadiness of the days when their friends were in office there is not a trace in the present administration.

MENNEN'S SHAVING CREAM

To The Electors of West Hastings

Having been honored with the Liberal-Conservative nomination for the constituency of West Hastings, and as it will be impossible for me in the brief time before polling day to call upon every elector, I take this means of soliciting your vote and influence. The record of the Government of Sir William Hearst is one of honest integrity, economy and progressiveness, and is too well known and appreciated to need extended comment here. If honored with the endorsement of the electors at the polls, I will do all in my power to assist in carrying out the progressive policy of my leader, Sir Wm. Hearst.

POLITICAL INFORMATION

INTERESTING NEWS OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HASTINGS, PRINCE EDWARD AND ELSEWHERE, CONDENSED FOR BUSY READERS.

H. H. Dewart's favorite sport is betting fouls.

If Hartley Dewart were a fisherman what stories he could tell!

Price of shoes coming down? Three cheers from the Ontario Liberal party which is on its uppers.

Liberals may have a corporal's guard in the next Legislature, while the U. F. O. think they'll elect enough to man a threshing machine.

Conservative bricks are flying all over Toronto and H. Hartley Dewart feels sure he is stopping most of them.

Leader of the Ontario Opposition is making a lot of farewell tours these days and needs himself coming back.

Disquieting question: If the U.F.O. get into power, will all the members want to be Minister of Agriculture?

In one day, Toronto police seized 2,640 bottles of liquor. So far, Mr. Dewart has not claimed that it was headed for Sir Wm. Hearst's cellar.

Peterboro Review says: "The local Conservative party goes into this campaign united as it never was before in its history."

There seems to be only one thing worse than Hon. Mackenzie King's war record and that is his apology for it.

Centre Huron Tories, who admire fair play, will not oppose Mr. Proudfoot, and some of them may line up behind him. Others may tend to vote the straight "Grit" candidate in a gentle perspiration.

NOT MUCH SYMPATHY

When it was declared by the Returning Officer at the Nomination proceedings at the City Hall on Monday last that the Labor Candidate's Nomination papers were irregular and could not be received, Mr. O'Flynn the Liberal Candidate did not express any sympathy with Mr. Galloway. Mr. Ireland expressed his sympathy with the labor people that they had been by this slip deprived of a candidate and pledged himself to represent labor to the best of his ability.

ELECTION LIE

An attempt is being made to turn labor votes from Mr. W. H. Ireland by the assertion quietly circulated that Mr. Ireland objected to Mr. Galloway's nomination paper and had it thrown out. This is an absolute falsehood and is refuted by a letter from the Returning Officer in another column of this issue.

NOT DISAPPOINTED

The fact that Mr. Galloway's nomination paper was rejected as not complying with the law did not cause that genial gentleman any disappointment and he so expressed himself. He consented to be a candidate at the urgent solicitation of his friends.

iers, whose names are not on the voters lists can be registered at special sittings to be held up to Saturday night and vote at the election Monday will be welcomed by all. Canada's soldiers who fought for the integrity of the Empire and the preservation of Canada from Hun dominating, are above all others entitled to express their views as to the administration of the affairs of the province.

SIDNEY TOWN HALL MEETING

A meeting in the interests of the Liberal-Conservative candidate, Mr. W. H. Ireland, was held at Sidney Town Hall, last night. The audience composed of farmers and their wives of that vicinity were attentive and enthusiastic and frequent applause greeted the various speakers, as they scored their points in favor of the Hearst Government and Mr. Ireland who will support it. Now that the U.F.O. Candidate is not in the field there seems to be a strong swinging of that vote towards Mr. Ireland whose policy is more in line with the farming interests and acceptable to them than the policy of Hartley Dewart, the leader of the new Liberal party whose stand for the breaking up the Empire by declaring for the independence of Canada and his refusal to support our boys in France when in dire need is offensive to them. The meeting was addressed by Mr. Ireland, Mr. George A. Reid, Mr. J. Maidens and E. Guss Porter, M.P.

RAILWAY POLL OPENED

Polls for the receiving of votes of railway employees, who might be absent on Monday next, owing to their duties, were today, opened in this city and Trenton in connection with the West Hasting's election.

A Master of Style.

Mr. Asquith, in his presidential address to the English association at Bedford College, London, some weeks ago, dealt with the life and writings of Sir Henry Wootton, the friend of Isaac Walton. It was by poetry alone, said Mr. Asquith, that Wootton still lived, and the reason why his short occasional pieces possessed enduring power of appeal was because they possessed the sovereign quality of perfect style. Style is poetry, even more than in prose, was an artone might even say an artifice. It was sought out, thought out, and wrought out. It did not fetter aspiration, though there might be inspiration without it. It was at once a posture and a vehicle—incommunicable, almost indefinable, and yet so real to the mind's eye. Among all the classic poets, whether Greek or Roman, Virgil was the great example.

English poetry was specially rich in the great masters of specific style. Shakespeare must always live in a class by himself; but with that reservation, by far the greatest master of poetic style, in the sense in which he used the word, was Milton. They could not open a page of "Paradise Lost," "Lycidas," "Comus," or any of the sonnets without finding a wealth of examples. Keats and Tennyson picked up and carried on the torch, and he claimed a place, even if a subsidiary one, for Walter Savage Landor.

Wootton was not, either perhaps as man or as poet, of heroic stature or of far-reaching range, but he was not suffering from the pessimism of senility—when, to an old-fashioned ear, there seemed to be a fine and often an almost arrogant disorder in the outpourings of the contemporary muse, it might not be amiss to go back to men who had sat at the feet of masters of poetic style.

Warmth Increases Oil Flow.

An electrical method of applying warmth to the bottom of oil wells has been found in many cases greatly to increase the flow of oil. The heating process, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, increases the viscidity of the oil, usually occasioned by the admission of air to the well and the cooling of the rock bed. Mineral oil creeps out in watery channels which afford easy passage to warm, thin oil become quite thick and sluggish if the oil gums. The electric heating method not only thins the oil but often generates gas whose pressure helps the oil to the surface. This system found 'military use in the abandoned oil fields of Roumania and Galicia.

What's in a Name?

Most readers are familiar with the story of the German bank in a United States city which, finding its name unpopular, changed it to the "Sherman Bank." Here is another example on the same lines: A popular New York city German restaurant was called the Kloster Glocke (Cloister Bell), and its name was decorated with a cloister bell as a sign. The name has been changed to the "Liberty Bell," and the bell of the old monastery now does duty as a replica of the one which rang out independence to the captives.

Doubts Mechanical Skill.

A "prominent business man" has offered $50,000 for the privilege of being elected as mechanic on the first transatlantic flight made in an airplane. If this offer is accepted, it is to be hoped that his mechanical ability equals his enthusiasm.—Springfield Republican.

PRAISE FOR THE BLUE SERGE

Material May Be Made Up Into Coat and Skirt, or Into One-Piece Street Dress.

There is no material which so perfectly displays restraint as a very dark blue serge. The color and the texture in themselves suggest a world of tempting opportunities ignored. Thus there is implied an experience with, and knowledge of, infinite varieties of other hues, other clothes.

According to the need of the wearer, the blue serge may be made up into coat and skirt, or into a one-piece street dress. With an exacting eye for the narrow shoulder, the close-fitting tapering sleeve, and the utmost precision of finish and cut, coupled with a resolute determination not to concede an inch to the strict hem, one may give free scope to other lines. Once these details are observed, the most fantastic sweeps of the tailor's shears may be allowed.

Blue serge is the most efficacious background for accessories of the toilette and for little fleerseems. Let it be a starting point for pearl gray or sand-colored spats, for matching nonpareil suede gloves rolling loosely over the tight wrist, for a dash but of concentrated lines and for a fur neckpiece of redeeming frivolations. Then, as a signature to the work of art, as well as an instruction of what one might have done, let the veil etch a mad design in one bold, detached pattern upon the cheek. This is a dashing touch in a costume otherwise reserved.

Javelle Water.

This water is fine for removing stains. Take one pound of sal soda and 5 cents' worth of chloride of lime. Put them in an earthen bowl, pour two quarts of soft boiling water over them (rain water is best). Let it settle, then pour off the water and bottle it. It will remove fruit stains and even indelible ink. Soak till stain disappears; then quickly wash in warm water.

with a good attendance. After the usual business was dispensed with, a good paper was read by Mrs. Wm. C. Miss Mildred Redner, then gave a very excellent reading by a young popular Canadian writer. Miss Clara Anderson gave a helpful paper entitled "Friendship in the Home," and Miss Burstin, the teacher at Victoria, a talk on "The Hot Lunch in the Rural Schools."

(WHAT THE PRESS AGENTS SAY)

"MY SOLDIER GIRL" TO GIVE METINEE TOMORROW

"My Soldier Girl," the brilliant musical spectacle, coming to Griffin's tomorrow, matinee and night, is said to be the cleverest, brightest, whitest entertainment of the season. Its sparkles, it has humor, color, melody and a score that holds the auditor with its swinging lilting airs. The book is by J. Lorch Baber, who has contributed to many successes in the past, often, in this latest version, comedy that induces tired people to forget their troubles. You never have time to sit back and rest, so contagious is the humor and so persistant is the merry revelling. One of the striking features of "My Soldier Girls" is the remarkable ballet, so clever do these girls render their big dance numbers and ensembles that the audience seem spellbound, giving them encore after encore. The cast includes several New York musical comedy artists, and theatregoers may rest assured of a rare treat in music, comedy, dancing, scenery and a wonderful ballet all combined to make "My Soldier Girl" the remarkable success it really is. There are twenty-some big song hits including "My Soldier Girl," "Wrap Me Up In a Bundle of Love," "Jasper's Ragtime Band," "Won't You be My Bean," "Just For You," "That Dixie Wedding Tune," and many others equally as tuneful. This same company and production is now playing return engagements in Hamilton, Kingston and Peterboro.

AT THE PALACE

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG.

"The Reason Why," by the famous English authoress, Elinor Glyn, is Clara Kimball Young's latest select picture, it will be shown here at the Palace Theatre tonight to Saturday, matinee daily. Clara Kimball Young creates the role of Yvonne Marinoff, widowed by the murder of her husband a cruel prefect of police, at the hands of an infuriated mob. As she is fleeing that night with her seven-year-old son, Mimo, she comes upon a dead woman who resembles her completely, and on whose body she finds an invitation from her uncle, Francis Markrute, inviting her to live with him in London, although he has never seen her. Yvonne goes to London; there she meets and marries at her "Uncle's" wish, Lord Tanered, of Wraysh, Hall. It is a case of mutual love at first sight, but after she hears Markrute speak of her dowry, her sentiments are chilled. Her husband misunderstands her actions and their underlying motives, and it is only after a series of mishaps that she makes her confession and they discover their true love. "The Reason Why," is a remarkable photoplay involving English high society, portrayed by Clara Kimball Young, and produced in the excellent manner which motion picture audiences have come to expect in a select picture. Milton Sills portrays the role of Lord Tanered. The 16th and second from the closing of the "Lure of the Circus" serial and other plays will also be presented on the same program.

SEENA OWEN FAST BECOMING POPULAR

Seena Owen who plays the leading feminine lead with Charles Ray in his new picture, "Bill Henry" which comes to Griffin's tonight for a three days' engagement, with a matinee Saturday, is a young actress whose work is making her increasingly popular with each picture. She starred in such pictures as "Martha's Vindication," and "Madame Bo-Peep," and in this latest Ray picture she has the best part of her career. "Outing Chester," a Christie comedy, and other plays will comprise the photoplay portion of the program. Three vaudeville specialities are also announced for presentation consisting of Zellner & Holoway impersonating great commanders, Peter Smith in a catchy sonologue, and Dick Hamlin, the man in brown, who offers a remarkable exhibition of snappy hard shoe dancing.

themselves the policies set forth and be in position to cast an intelligent vote. Addresses were given by Mr. T. H. Thompson, M.P., ex-Warden Montgomery, Rev. Mr. Higgs, Rev. Mr. Sanderson and the candidate, who held the interest and attention of his audience throughout the hour of his address in which he gave a clear and concise outline of the record of the Hearst Government and prophesied a victory for the Conservative party at the polls. With the speaker's usual eloquence he depicted the benefits that would come to the province through the continuance of the progressive and efficient policies of the present administration, that had helped so materially to win the great war, to assist education, established adequate system of transportation, and perfect the great social reforms with their far-reaching influences and benefits undertaken by this progressive Government.

Mr. Cooke was first elected to the Legislature by acclamation in 1911. He was opposed in 1914 by Rev. McGuinness but won out by a majority of 1650 and his re-election by acclamation in this present period of unrest is proof of his personal popularity, not only with his own party but also with the Liberals, many of whom are his true and valued friends.

On entering his third turn to the Legislature "genial Bob" carries with him the good will of a host of friends, confident that the welfare of the people and the progress of the riding will receive his best endeavor. and his electors and friends throughout the county wish for him that in the distribution of the good things of life a generous position may be his.

Pres.—C. S. Rollins, Coe Hill.

First Vice Pres.—Dr. Eggleson, Madoc Village.

Associate First Vice Pres.—Mrs. Dr. Embury, Bancroft.

Second Vice Pres.—Mrs. T. Montgomery, Hawdon.

Dewart Candidate At City Hall

Lack of Enthusiasm Most Notable Feature of Dewart Meeting.

While the meetin held in the City Hall last night in the interest of the candidature of E. D. O'Flynn, the Dewart candidate for West Hastings was fairly well attended, the lack of enthusiasm was very noticeable. When Col. O'Flynn speaking of the referendum announced that he was going to vote four "no's," not a cheer or hand clap was given him, or any vestige of approval. The announcement was received in dead silence, indicating that the audiences considered it was a vote getting statement. In speaking of the returned soldier, Mr. O'Flynn said he was in favor of anything that could be done for the returned men; and he would be favorable to some legislative being erected whereby a loan could be given them to assist in vocational training and also of their appointments to positions when vacancies occur, that is if they are qualified to fill the positions. Mr. O'Flynn spoke in the same strain as he did at the nomination, his platform being seemingly composed of planks taken holus bolus from the Hearst platform. Candidate O'Flynn failed to mention in any way his leader, Hartley Dewart.

Dr. J. A. Faulkner presided over the meeting.

Col. Ponton gave an excellent address in regard to the approaching Victory Loan Campaign and the necessity there was of liberal support. Incidentally he stated that he was a follower of Sir William Hearst.

Ald. Ramsden of Toronto, was the chief speaker of the evening and his address was a laudation of Liberal principals. He was opposed to the Provincial Government's policy of imposing a tax of one mill on the dollar for patriotic purposes. This should have been done by the Dominion Government and then every Province in the Dominion would have cotributed, not merely Ontario. The speaker said it was a fact that the individual purchaser did not pay any more than formerly although the cost of production was greater, but the Government paid the extra cost and it was charged our, that is if they are qualified to fill the Provincial Treasury. In speaking of the franchise to women, the speaker claimed the Liberal party should have credit for originating the idea. He also spoke of the late Mr. J. W. Johnson of this city as a strong advocate of women suffrage. If Hartley Dewart was put in power, he would look after the interest of the people as a whole. Mr. Ramsden introduced introduced the name of Leader Hartley Dewart upon an O'Flynn platform for the first time and eulogized the Liberal leader in Ontario.

CONGRATULATIONS TO BOB COOK, M.P.P.

The re-election of Bob Cook by acclamation to again represent North Hastings in the Legislature is a splendid and well-merited tribute of appreciation to a member who has always worked hard for his constituency. Respected by his constituents and esteemed by his colleagues in the Legislature, Bob Cook's personal popularity, ability, and faithful attention to his public duties well merited his election by acclamation as one of the four so honored in Ontario who will sit in the next Legislature.

SANDY GRANT AND HIS FRIENDS.

Sandy Grant, who has so ably looked after the interests of East Hastings in the Legislature for the past eight years, comes to the electors with a clean record of faithful service to his constituents, and the record of the best Government Ontario ever had. There was no reason why Sandy Grant should be opposed at the polls. His service to the electors warranted an acclamation for the earnest and faithful performance of his duty at all times, but as a contest has been forced upon him the electors have it in their power to make the re-election of Sandy Grant so nearly unanimous by an overwhelming avalanche of votes as to show in no uncertain tone the well-merited appreciation of the electors. Nothing could be gained by the election of his opponent, who could only hope to sit on the back benches of third party obscurity, while the re-election of Sandy Grant as a member of the Government of the day would mean a continuation of the faithful and effective service for the constituency always rendered by him.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE PIONEER.

While Dewart candidates are making foolish claims of having been the original woman suffrage champions the memory of women electors in Hastings County will recall the real pioneer of woman suffrage in Ontario, the late J. W. Johnson, who so ably represented West Hastings in the Legislature and was noted for his strong and insistent and constant championship of votes for women. All the claims and professions of Hartley Dewart and Col. O'Flynn, the Dewart candidate in this constituency fade into the intangible ether of past promises unfulfilled in the measure of the long and successful battle for women's rights at the polls waged by the late respected J. W. Johnson, and the final triumph of women's suffrage in the granting of a complete franchise to women by the Hearst Government, coupled with the right to become members of the Legislature, to sit on School Boards and to become members of Municipal Councils upon an equal plane with male citizens. The Hearst Government has been noted for its thoroughness in all things, and it was never accused of any half-way measures. Consequently the women were given a complete franchise without any strings. This, taken in conjunction with the many legislative acts of particular benefit to women merits the support of the women electors for the Hearst Government, with a record of performance instead of promises, and never a pledge which has not been fulfilled to the letter.

By marking their ballots for W. H. Ireland the women electors of West Hastings will be showing their approval and appreciation of the Hearst Government which has always placed the interests of women first in the legislative program.

BACK TO THE LAND.

Agriculture, being the basic industry, was recognized by the Hearst Government as deserving of every assistance and the record shows that the Government has more than fulfilled its duty in this respect. Essentially a war administration the Hearst Government lent every assistance to the farmers in the campaign for increased production, the tractor service being an outstanding feature of the Government's efforts in this direction, showing that it was fully alive to the duty of the hour in increasing the supply of foodstuffs, and the needs of the farmers. One hundred and twenty-nine tractors were placed at the disposal of the farmers on a basis approximating the cost of operation, nearly 50,000 acres were ploughed and nearly 7,000 acres cultivated as a result of this service. In addition the Government, with co-operation with the Federal authorities, distributed at cost 200 popular priced tractors at a saving to the farmers of the Province of $40,000. Food production was not only increased but interest was aroused in farm power, and helpful instruction given to the farmers by Short Courses in Farm Power. The Government also assisted in increased production by an active campaign to supply the farming population with hired help for both the fields and farm homes.

In 1904, the last year of the Ross Government, the expenditure on agriculture was $475,000, which was thought to be a large expenditure by the moribund Government of that day, but the expenditure for 1918 by the Hearst Government to assist agriculture was $1,508,000, which has proved a splendid investment in every way, but does not mean the pinnacle of expenditure in aid of agriculture by the Provincial Government in any particular, for the Hearst Government is a progressive government, keeping pace with a progressive people in a progressive province, helping to build up the greater Canada which is our heritage and assurance. Agricultural education in the rural schools, on the farms, in the dairies and in all branches of food production, from farm to college, is a part of the progressive program of the Hearst Government, and the splendid results obtained warrant even greater extensions, along the line of practical agricultural education. There are many features of the Hearst Government's beneficial Department of Agriculture, famed the world over for progressiveness and valuable results, worthy of separate articles, including Field Crop Competitions, Agricultural Societies, assistance to farmers associations, School Fairs interesting the young people in the land, Agricultural Representatives bringing the latest scientific knowledge and advice direct to the farm, Soil Surveying Development, Live Stock Industry, Encouragement of co-operation, Drainage Work, Horticulture, Community Halls, etc.

Greatest of all is the Government's Good Roads policy, retarded by the war, but now being developed upon broad and business-like lines to include better highways, rural, county and main thoroughfares, so that the farmer at no distant date can leave his farm at any time of the year and go quickly and comfortably to any part of the province, and at a minimum of expense quickly find the best and most profitable markets for his produce.

The Hearst Government has been progressive and efficient in every department, but in none more than that of Agriculture, with farmers as Cabinet Ministers and the most expert staff of advisers to be found in any country in the world.

To the farmer, particularly, the Hearst Government presents its record for endorsement with full confidence that the appreciation of the agriculturist for honesty and efficiency will be expressed at the polls.

The farmers of Hastings County can be depended upon to mark their ballots for a continuation of Good Government and return two good representatives to look after their interests, in W. H. Ireland and Sandy Grant.

CRISP COMMENT

Honest Billy Ireland will be the people's choice on October 20.

× × ×

Liberal Unionists can not consistently vote for a Dewart candidate. Bury the wreckers under an avalanche of honest loyal votes.

× × ×

Ontario's soldiers put the fear into the Kaiser with bullets, and on October 20th they will put the quietus to Hartley Dewart candidates with their ballots.

× × ×

Don't throw away a vote on a Dewart candidate serving under a discredited leader. Vote for Ireland, the Hearst candidate, and a good deal, first, last and all the time.

× × ×

The Dewart party point with pride—to promises, but the electors gaze with pride on the performances of the Hearst Government. Dewart candidates are getting so desperate that they are promising everything—their unlikeness to yes to some and their yes has become no to others, yes, even four noes for a vote.

× × ×

The little Canadian wing of the Liberal party which tried to wreck Canada's reputation upon the altar of politics and nearly succeeded in wrecking the Liberal party, are watching eagerly for a continuation of their hopes for political revenge upon their former associates in victory for Hartley Dewart and his candidates at the polls. All Canada is looking to Ontario to decide whether the reactionaries or progressives in the Liberal party are to be in charge of the reconstruction of that party of former glory, victory for Dewart would mean a continuation of political ambuscades and assassinations of the public careers of the best men in the party.

× × ×

Returned soldiers and others are being incited to resentment against the government of Sir William Hearst on account of the restrictive features of the Ontario Temperance Act. As a matter of fact it is generally conceded that the Ontario Temperance Act has been of immense benefit to Ontario as a war measure, and there was no note of disapproval from any section of good citizens until the Federal enactment prohibiting importation of liquor into this province came into force. Whatever may be thought of the policy of prohibiting imports of liquor for domestic consumption, it should not be overlooked that the Dominion government is responsible for this legislation and the Ontario Temperance Act should be judged upon its own merits as provincial legislation pure and simple which does not prohibit importation for home use, that being a Dominion matter entirely.

× × ×

What every seriously minded temperance man has to ask himself in this election is: Can I, dare I, vote for an opponent of Premier Hearst? Sir William has given the prohibitionists what they longed for, prayed for and worked for during many years. It would be an act of the grossest ingratitude not to support him, and, as the Toronto Star well points out, should the Hearst Government lack support it would spell ruin for the whole temperance cause. There is only one thing for the temperance man to do, and that is support the candidate that will support the Hearst administration, i.e., the independent Liberal and the U. F. O. candidates are both opponents of Sir William Hearst, and that fact should be above personal feelings.—Guelph Herald.

You Can't Brush Or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Diplomatic relations have been resumed between France and Germany. Part of the German legation is now installed in Paris.

THE PARTY DRUM.

(Toronto Star, Liberal)

No political party can ever be made great by the class of men within it who follow the party drum no matter who beats it, no matter what tune is played on it, or what direction it goes or for what purpose. Such support as this is useful to a party provided that sound principles govern those who are in the leadership, and great causes are served.

A political party comes out strong in the end which adheres to its principles, and earns the support of men of heart and conscience everywhere who, say what you will, are the pillars and stays of the whole country and form its ultimate public opinion. Life is too serious and too precious to permit of its chief interests being played with in a party game, in which every man follow his leader regardless of who he is or where he is going and what he means to do when he gets there.

The people who believe in Prohibition, in order that they may have it, want a Prime Minister who believes in it and wants it. Only in that way can they be sure of a Government that will give it to them, enforce it, and consent to nothing that will undermine it.

"JAZZ."

Where Did the Word and the Music Come From.

Etymologists, whether they are musically inclined or not, says the Springfield Oregonian, have for some time been interested in a promising controversy over the origin of the word "jazz." As noun, verb and adjective it has found a place in the American language and may be expected to find a place into the dictionaries in due course. About the only issue upon which recent contributors to the discussion seem to agree is that the word probably was born in or near New Orleans. Lieut. James Europe, a negro officer with our troops in France, says that the "jass band" of record was conducted by a Mr. Razz, whose name seems to be altered form. But another historian has discovered that the name of the "jass band" of record was Dunn. And, according to an earlier authority, the word "to jazz," in the sense of "speeding up things," is older than jazz music itself. Lafcadio Hearn is credited with having found it in a creole patois. The earliest sense after the ultimate roots of words will suppose that the quest at this point has reached.

Jazz music, however, is admittedly a recent product. The ancients probably would not claim credit for it if they could. We are willing to accept the explanation that it owes its existence to pure love of the "peculiar," but it is difficult to follow Prof. Lois Morrison Patterson, who declared that "the basis of modern jazz rule in the rhythms of great primitive music rather than things itself, and opera of ultramodernity." One of the instructing fledglings made by Lieut. Europe, who led a jazz band in Europe, is that he found it necessary to hold down rehearsals in order to prevent the musicians from "putting so much pep into it that it withered them to." Jazz obeys no law, apparently. Like wit, like it, it represents chiefly the quest of the "different." This is found in the character of the band as in the selection, no less than in the little mechanical devices which are one of its further development.

The accomplished musician is convinced that negroes should write negro music. "We have every racial feeling," he says, "and if we try to copy whites we make bad copies." Macdowell and other musicians who have asserted that the negro music of the South is the only thing to look for, who recognized its possibilities for a truly American music, will hardly agree with him. Yet jazz music does not appear to be the real negro music that there is no hope that we shall some day hear the last of it. Its present vogue has continued four or five years, which is less than half the time that ragtime, the immediate predecessor of jazz, was the popular craze. We are fickle in our taste for entertainment. It is safe to predict that the jazz band will last only until some daring originator succeeds in devising another novelty to take its place.

MACRO

Even good music can get jazz.

FARMING is a basic industry in Canada. From the first days of its publication, The Globe has always strongly advocated the development of scientific agriculture.

When the breeding of pure-bred stock in Canada was first deemed necessary, The Globe, by example and precept, showed what could be done.

The late George Brown was a leader in experiments. At Bow Park Farm, near Brantford, he bred from imported cattle so as to place pure-bred stock at the disposal of his neighbors.

From those days to the present the furthering of the interests of the Farm and Country Life of Canada has been an important feature of The Globe.

The Weekly Farm Department has always been a source of inspiration to the farmers to improve their knowledge of agriculture.

The Globe believes that one of the best ways of teaching a man is to show him what his neighbor is doing. This is the policy The Globe adopts in its Farm Department. Two members of The Globe staff devote their whole time to the collection of material for this Department and in so doing spend several days each week in the country. They visit good farms all over Ontario and attend Fairs and Conventions. They report all developments in rural life as reflected in these gatherings as well as in the personal experience of successful farmers. Through its "Farm and Country Life" Section, The Globe has identified itself with every movement calculated to improve the conditions under which farmers and their families do their daily work.

This is the service thousands of Farmers in Ontario and elsewhere receive and appreciate, and one of the reasons why many thousands of them read The Globe.

But that is not all. Keen competition, and the continued fluctuation of prices make it necessary for the farmer and his family to keep in touch with current produce and other commodity prices even from day to day.

The Globe has a well-merited reputation for accuracy, because in nothing is it more dependable than in its market reports. All prices quoted in The Globe are verified by the highest authorities SIX TIMES EVERY WEEK.

But besides all this, The Globe is a Great Family Newspaper. It is as much a necessity and convenience in the Farm Home as anywhere else. The coming of the daily paper to the Farm Home ranks in importance with the rural mail delivery, the telephone, electricity and the good road.

It broadens the outlook of those who live on the farm. It keeps them informed on current events the world over. Not only does The Globe do this, but it serves the agriculturists of Canada in a peculiar and appropriate way.

The service The Globe has already rendered three generations of Farm Life is a guarantee of what it will do in the days to come.

This is why The Globe should have a place in every Farm Home in Ontario.

DEMAND NOW IS FOR MUSIC

Freak Attire and Mannerisms No Longer Attract Streams of Dollars to the Concert Hall.

It looks as if the old order of musicians will soon be moss covered. The tonally headed individual in freak attire does not find his camouflaged personality a passport to capacity houses. If the dead composers had message for modern humanity the messages must be interpreted by modern men and modern women.

The musician of today looks like a smart business or professional man rather than an idle dreamer, observes the Philadelphia Record. "He is as good a customer as the barber has. Short cropped hair is supplanting the shaggy locks of former days. The schoolboy's Windsor tie and low collar have given way to the neat four in hand and regular business man's collar. The Buffalo Bill chapeau is ousted by the conventional fedora. Old mannerisms which serve no useful purpose are cast off.

The modern musician is a good mixer. He wants to know his public first hand, and he enters into the general life of the community instead of acting the recluse. By mingling he has learned that people now want music, not gesticulations nor dress. Concert goers are more concerned about what they hear than what they see. An artist's reputation for freakishness off the stage does not offset poor execution on the stage. The music-loving public has developed to the point where sham and pretense are useless. Nothing but the ability to produce good music can get jazz.

Tired Overworked Men

We Guarantee Vinol is What You Need

You who are run down, nervous, lack energy and working strength, we know that Vinol is what you need. It creates strength because it is a non-secret combination of the most famous body-building and strength-creating elements known.

Here is Proof that is Indisputable

"I am a farmer and was overworked, run-down and weak. My druggist recommended Vinol. It built me up and made me strong. I also gained in flesh. Other members of my family have also used it with splendid results."—Joseph J. McDougall, Kelvin Glen, Cape Breton, N.S.

"I was weak, run-down and had no appetite so I could hardly keep about my work. I heard about Vinol from home friends and after taking it for two weeks it built me up so I feel better than I have for many years."—Mr. Bartholomew, 12 Salisbury St., Galt, Ontario.

For all run-down, nervous, anaemic conditions, weak women, overworked men, feeble old people and delicate children, there is no remedy like Vinol.

Your money will be returned if Vinol fails—Leading Druggists.

DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER VI—Continued

He sipped his tea abstractedly. So this was the gifted being of whom he had heard so much—this dreadful creature who bolged out of his frock-coat and minced and posed and was alternately frisky and pompous. What a connection to have! Was it possible his voice was as wonderful as they all declared, or would that be a disappointment too? In any case, his self-complacence made a stranger sick.

It was about two hours after dinner when the young man was begged to oblige the company, and Humphrey, who was now truly eager to hear him, feared for a long while that the persuasions would not succeed, for the coming bass objected in turn to Wagner and Verdi, and all the songs in his répertoire. He shrugged his shoulders pityingly at this one, had forgotten that, and was not equal this evening to a third. At length, however, Cynthia rose and declared that he should give them "Isolier." Ernest Neil is, la, la!

"Well," said Turquand, when the waiter returned and the cork had popped, "here's luck. Wish you lots of happiness, old chap, I'm sure."

"Same to you," murmured Kent. "God knows I do. It's awful muck, this stuff, isn't it? What's he brought"

"It's what you ordered. Your mouth's out of taste. Eat some more kidneys."

Humphrey shook his head.

"I suppose you'll come here to-mor row evening—the same as usual, eh?"

"May as well, I suppose. One's got to feed somewhere. You'll be all rave and rapture then. I'll think of you."

"Do. I don't know how it is; but—just just now, somehow, between ourselves——But perhaps I ought'n't to say that……I say, don't think I was going to—to——I wouldn't have you think I meant I wasn't fond of her, old boy, for the world. You don't think that, do you? She—oh, heaven!—she's a perfect angel, Turk!……Give up your glass, for goodness' sake, mix and do look jolly! Turk, next time we dine it will be at Streatham, and there'll be a little badness to make you welcome; and—and there'll always be a bottle of Irish, old man, and we'll keep a pipe in the rack with the biggest bowl we can find, and call it yours. By God, we will!"

"Yes," said Turquand huskily……"Going to have any more of this stew?"

"I've had enough; help yourself."

"No, I'm not ravenous either—smoked too much, perhaps. I say, Madame doesn't know yet; better tell her."

She was induced to join them presently, and to drink a glass of champagne, enchanted by the invitation. Monsier Kent was always tres gentil; but champagne! was it that he celebrated already another romance? Comment! he was going to be married—never? But yes—and to-morrow! Oh, mon Dieu! She rocked herself to and fro and screamed the intelligence down the dinner lift to her husband in the kitchen. Then they must drink at the charmeuse with her—she insisted. Yes, and she would have one of Monsier Kent's cigarettes. Oh, bel! la, la, la! again.

Will You Cast Your Vote for More Drug Fiends?

DO YOU REALIZE that the fiendish drug habit is spreading through the fair Province of Ontario at an alarming rate?

DO YOU REALIZE that doctors and apothecaries are so appalled by the insidious growth of this terrible evil that appeals are being made to the authorities to take most drastic action?

DO YOU REALIZE that this canker worm is eating its way through every strata of society, high and low, poor and rich—men and women of all grades and conditions in ever increasing numbers are becoming addicts of the terrible habit?

DO YOU REALIZE that these poor unfortunates are being supplied, by vast importations of opium, cocaine, morphine, heroin, through the dark ways of the underworld that baffle the police?

DO YOU REALIZE that this terrible condition is due largely to the sudden enforcement of a too drastic prohibitory legislation? The Toronto Telegram only a few days ago quoted a prominent physician as declaring: "Some of the addicts have stated that when cut off from alcohol they had drifted around to the use of drugs."

DO YOU REALIZE that in voting for the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act you are voting for the continued spread of this deadly traffic? The despicable creatures of the underworld who live by pandering to the weakness of their drug-victims, are hoping for a solid four "No's" on the ballot. The responsibility must rest with you,

Table showing the increase in the consumption of drugs in Canada since the enaction of The Ontario Temperence Act in 1916.—Government Statement.

		QUANTITY	VALUE

OPIUM . -	1916	1,741 "	11,800
	1919	34,263 "	534,555

These figures show only what came in legally—the enormous quantities known to have been smuggled in and sold through underground channels would swell the total to an appalling figure.
